WILLIAM-JAMES.	Arthur-Hugh.	Walter.
Jessie-Augusta.	Eleanor.	Edith-Jane.

Sir Thomas claims the dormant Earldom of GLENCAIRN, as lineal male descendant of William, 4th earl.

Lineage.

Van Bassen, in his History of the Kings of Scotland, states that this family is descended from one Malcolm, son of Friskin, who, when Prince MALCOLM fled from MACBETH, towards England, after the murder of King DUNCAN, concealed the prince from his pursuers, by forking hay or straw over him, and for this service, King MALCOLM, after his restoration, conferred the thanedom of Cuninghame upon his preserver.

VERNEBALD, the first of this family whose name appears in authentic record, was settled in the west of Scotland about the commencement of the 12th century. His son, ROBERT, designed "Robertus filius Vernebaldi," made a donation of the patronage of the Kirk of Kilmaurs, &c., to the Abbey of Kelso, about 1153. He m. Richenda, dau. and heiress of Sir Humphrey de Barclay of Gairntully.

ROBERTUS, filius Roberti filii Vernebaldi, previous to 1189, confirmed the grants made by his father.

HERVEY DE CUNYNGHAME, great-grandson of the last Robert, represented the family about 1264, in which year he had a charter from ALEXANDER III. He founded a collegiate church at Kilmaurs, and is renowned in tradition for his gallant conduct at the battle of Largs, against the Danes, 1263. He m. the heiress of Riddell of Glengarnock, and was s. by his son,

SIR WILLIAM DE CUNYNGHAME, of Kilmaurs, who d. in 1285, and was s. by his eldest son,

EDWARD DE CUNYNGHAME, of Kilmaurs, who was s. by his eldest son,

GILBERT DE CUNYNGHAME, of Kilmaurs, who was s. in 1292 by his son,

SIR ROBERT DE CUNYNGHAME, of Kilmaurs, who swore fealty to EDWARD I.; but declaring afterwards for ROBERT BRUCE, had a charter from that monarch of the superiority of the lands of Lambrachtoun and Grugere, in Cuninghame, to be holden of the king, as Alan la Suche and William de Fereres held the same. He d. in 1330, and was a. by his eldest son,

SIR WILLIAM DE CUNYNGHAME, of Kilmaurs, on whom DAVID II. conferred the Earldom of Carrick, 1361, as husband of Eleanor Bruce, dau. of Alexander Bruce, Earl of Carrick, son of Edward Bruce, brother of ROBERT I.*

As appears from a charter of the lands of Kincliven, Sir William was married, 2ndly, to a lady, by name Margaret, but of what family is not known. Though generally stated otherwise, it would seem by Eleanor Bruce, Sir William had five sons.† Robert, the eldest, died young. The second,

SIR WILLIAM CUNYNGHAME, succeeded his father about the end of the century. Of date 1400, he resigned his estates for new infetment, and obtained a charter from ROBERT III. to Sir William and his heirs male, falling whom, to his brothers, Thomas, Alexander, and John, in succession, and their heirs male, falling whom, to other near relatives of the name of Cuninghame, &c., of the lands and baronies, Kilmaurs, Lambrachtoun, Kilbride, Skelmorlie, and Polquharne, co. Ayr; lands and barony of Redhall, co. Edinburgh; lands of Nevy, in Forfarshire; the barony of Hassingden, in Roxburghshire; and the lands

* Edward Bruce, brother of ROBERT I. of Scotland, had a charter of the family earldom of Carrick to himself and heirs male, falling whom, to revert to the crown. By Lady Isabel Ross, daughter of the Earl of Ross, he had three sons, Robert, Thomas, Alexander, generally said to have been illegitimate. The fact, however, that all these in succession inherited the earldom, under the charter alluded to above, is convincing proof that they were legitimate according to Scottish law. As a dispensation from the Pope is on record permitting the marriage—"Eduarde de Brus, comitis de Carryk et Isabelle de Ross," &c.—notwithstanding the parties belong within the prescribed degree of consanguinity, it is not improbable there had been a marriage between the parents dissolved for a time by the church, as was a common practice in those days, and afterwards rendered valid by the dispensation of the Pope.

Of these three Earls of Carrick, two fell in battle, and the third died a prisoner in England. Only one was married; he espoused Eleanor, sister of the potent Earl of Douglas, and had an only child, named Eleanor, (who married Sir William Cuninghame, of Kilmaurs.) The heirs male of Edward Bruce having thus failed, the earldom of Carrick ought to have reverted to the crown in terms of the charter; but exception seems to have been made in favour of his granddaughter, his only existing descendant; and, according to the custom of the time, her husband became Earl of Carrick. The charter in his favour is on record, and singularly incomplete, as if there had been a doubt as to the propriety of the grant:—"David D. G. Rex Scottorum sciat nos dedisse concessisse et hac presentis cartæ confirmasse dilecto consanguineo nostro Willielmo de Cuninghame militi totum comitatum de Carryk." Without date; the charters immediately preceding and following on the record are dated at Aberdeen, 12th Sept. 1361. No mention being made of heirs, it was clearly intended the earldom should revert to the elder branch of the Bruce family. Indeed, after Lady Eleanor's death, it was re-assumed by ROBERT II., and soon after conferred on his eldest son, JOHN, during Sir William's lifetime.

† It is a question who was mother of Sir William Cuninghame's successor, and other sons. The fact that the earldom did not descend in his family seems to have led to some misapprehension on this point amongst genealogists, who have generally stated that they were not sons of Lady Eleanor Bruce, but the offspring of a previous marriage. None, however, have attempted to give the name of the lady, nor is there a shadow of evidence to support their statements; on the contrary, the charters alluded to above prove that the second marriage took place after Lady Eleanor's death. The names of the sons alone would seem sufficient to indicate their maternal descent. The eldest was called Robert; the third and fourth, Thomas and Alexander; which were the names of Edward Bruce's sons. The second son was William, not improbably named after the Earl of Douglas, Eleanor Bruce's uncle, and the youngest John, possibly after John Stewart, (afterwards king, as ROBERT III.,) also a near relative. The eldest son, Robert, died young; the second, William, was a knight so early as 1364, and distinguished from his father by the word "filius," in various documents, between that date and 1397, which prove the father was then alive. His death must have taken place after that, and previous to 1400 of Ranfurley, in the barony of Renfrew. Sir William m. the eldest dau. and co-heiress of Sir Robert de Danyelston, and with her obtained a large addition to the family property. The division between the co-heiresses took place in 1404, and in Sir William's share were included the baronies of Glencairn and Fynlayston.

SIR ROBERT CUNYNGHAME, of Kilmaurs, son of the preceding, succeeded. He was one of the jury who tried and condemned Murdoch, Duke of Albany, in the reign of JAMES I. By his wife, Anne, only dau. of Sir John de Montgomery, of Ardrossan, he had his successor,

ALEXANDER CUNYNGHAME, who about 1450 was created LORD KILMAURS, and for the strenuous support given to his sovereign against the rebel nobles, headed by the prince, he was raised to the dignity of an earl, with the title of GLENCAIRN, 28 May, 1488. A few days after, a battle took place between the hostile parties near Stirling, where the royal army was defeated, and where the king and newly-created earl were both slain. The rebel party having thus come into power, the parliament was convoked, and an act passed, annulling all grants of peerages or lands conferred by JAMES III. during the late struggle. Amongst these was included the title of Glencairn.

ROBERT CUNYNGHAME, 2nd Earl of Glencairn, eldest son of Alexander, by Margaret, dau. of Lord Hales, sat in parliament under the act of forfeiture as Lord Kilmaura. He m. Christian, dau. of the Lord Lyndsay, of Byres. Their son,

CUTHBERT CUNYNGHAME, succeeded about 1493, and sat in parliament as 3rd Lord Kilmaurs, but had sufficient influence at court to obtain a confirmation of the title of Glencairn, which he obtained at the marriage of JAMES IV. with MARGARET, dau. of HENRY VII. of England, 1503. Cuthbert m. Lady Mary Douglas, dau. of Archibald, 5th Earl of Angus, by whom he had a son, WILLIAM, 2nd Earl of Glencairn, (commonly called 4th earl by peerage writers.) He was twice m. 1st, to Catherine Borthwick, dau. of Lord Borthwick; and 2ndly, to Elizabeth Campbell, of West London. He had five sons, 1st, Alexander, who succeeded as Earl of Glencairn, and whose male descendants failed in 1796; and 2nd.

ANDREW CUNYNGHAME, who was first of the House of Corshill. In the year 1532, his father made the original grant by charter, in his favour, of the lands of Dowera, Potterton, Robertland, Cuttisbury, and Clerkland, which grant, including the two Corshills, was afterwards confirmed to him and his wife, Margaret Cuninghame, (of the family of Polmaise,) by Royal charters, dated 4 May, 1537, and 4 Jan. 1538. Like his elder brother, Alexander, 5th Earl of Glencairn, Andrew was actively engaged in support of the Reformation, and being convicted of heresy before the lords spiritual in 1538, had his estate forfeited. However, he was afterwards pardoned, and his property restored; in confirmation of which, he obtained another grant by charter from the king, of the same lands, in favour of himself, his spouse, and their heirs male. Upon the death of Andrew, in 1545, his eldest son, CUTHBERT CUNYNGHAME, succeeded, as appears by an instrument of sasine in his favour, of that date. After his marriage with Mauld Cuninghame, (dau. of Cuninghame of Aitke,) Cuthbert resigned his estate into the hands of the sovereign, for new enfeoffment, and thereupon obtained a charter from HENRY and MARY, to himself, his spouse, and their heirs. He died 1575, and left two sons, Patrick and ALEXANDER, who were for some time under the guardianship of their grand-uncle, Hugh Cuninghame, of Waterston; and two daus., Jean and Margaret. About this time, the long-continued feud between the Cuninghames and Montgomeries appears to have been at its height, in which feud the eldest son, Patrick was slain.

ALEXANDER CUNYNGHAME, successor of his brother, m. Marion Porterfield, dau. of Porterfield of Duchal, by whom he had two sons, ALEXANDER; and David, of Dalbeth, m. Margaret Cuninghame, and had issue; and three daus., Jean, m. to Cuninghame of Aitke; Eleanor, m. to John Craufurd, of Craufurdland; and Janet, m. to Blair of Adamton. The eldest son, ALEXANDER CUNYNGHAME, s. his father in May, 1546. By his wife, Mary Houston, (of the family of Houston of that ilk,) he had two sons, ALEXANDER and Cuthbert; and two daus., Elizabeth, m. to James Dunlop, of Dunlop; and Margaret, m. to James Stewart, of Torrance. The eldest son, Alexander, predeceased his father, leaving by his wife, Anne Craufurd, (of the Kilbirny family,) an only son,

I. ALEXANDER CUNINGHAME, on whom, and his affianced wife, his grandfather settled his estate by disposition and charter, reserving to himself the life-rent. Alexander Cuninghame, senior, d. about the year 1667, and his grandson obtained a charter from the crown in favour of himself and spouse and their heirs, in confirmation of the disposition made by his grandfather; and, 26 Feb. 1673, the dignity of a baronet by diploma was conferred on him and the heirs male of his body. By his wife, Mary Stewart, dau. of John Stewart, younger, of Blackhall, he left a son, ALEXANDER; and two daus., Mary, m. to Craufurd, of Dalegie; and Elizabeth. His son,

II. SIR ALEXANDER, s. in March, 1685, and m. in 1686, Margaret Boyle, sister of David, 1st Earl of Glasgow, by whom he had a dau., Jean; and an only son,

III. SIR DAVID, his successor, in 1630. He m. Elizabeth, eldest dau. and thereafter heiress of David Montgomery, of Lainshaw, descendant of Sir Neil Montgomerie, of Lainshaw, and representative of the family of Lyle, Lord Lyle. He predeceased his father, Sir David, by a few months, in 1770. His family, by his wife, were six sons and two daus., 1. WALTER; II. DAVID; III. Eglinton, d. young; IV. Alexander, who served with the army in the American war, and d. unm.; V. JAMES; VI. Lineage.

The Barony of Dacre was originally in the family of Vaux, whereof three brothers settled in England, at the Conquest, viz., Hubert, Ranulph, and Robert. Of these,

HUBERT had the barony of Gillesland granted to him by his kinsman, Ranulph de Meschines, on whom WILLIAM had conferred the whole co. of Cumberland. This Hubert was s. by his son,

ROBERT DE VALLIBUS, who founded the priory of Pentney, in Normandy, and the abbey of Lanercost, in Cumberland, and was sheriff of Cumberland and governor of Carlisle, temp. HENRY II. This Robert was not only a person of great valour, but also well learned in the laws of the land, and went justice-itinerant into Cumberland in the 24th year of the same monarch. Dying without issue, the feudal barony devolved upon his brother,

RANULPH DE VALLIBUS, or VAUX, whose great grand-dau. and heir,

MAUD, m. Thomas de Moulton, temp. HENRY III., and conveyed the barony of Gillesland to the family of her husband. The great-grandson of this marriage,

THOMAS DE MOULTON, was summoned to parliament in the reigns of EDWARD I. and EDWARD II. He left at his decease an only dau. and heir,

MARGARET DE MOULTON, who married

RANULPH DE DACRE, one of the most distinguished persons in those parts, as well on account of his valour as a soldier, as his illustrious birth, being descended from William de Dacre, sheriff of Cumberland and governor of Carlisle in the reign of HENRY III. He was summoned to parliament, in right of his wife, from 15 May, (14 EDWARD II.,) 1321, to 15 Nov. (12 EDWARD III.,) 1338, in which latter year he died, and was s. by his eldest son,

WILLIAM, 2nd Baron Dacre, who was s. by his brother, RANULPH, 3rd Baron Dacre, who was likewise s. by a brother,

HUGH, 4th Baron Dacre. This nobleman m. Ela, dau. of Sir Alexander Maxwell, Lord of Carlaverock; and dying in the 7th of RICHARD II., was s. by his son,

WILLIAM, 5th baron; who m. Joan, dcm. of James, 1st Earl Douglas, and was s. by his son,

THOMAS, 6th baron, summoned to parliament from 1 Dec. (14 HENRY IV.,) 1412, to 26 May, (33 HENRY VI.,) 1455, as Thomas, Lord Dacre of Gillesland. This nobleman, who was chief forester of Inglewood, in Cumberland, m. Philippa, dau. of Ralph Nevill, Earl of Westmorland, and had issue, THOMAS, Ranulph, Humphrey, and Joan. Thomas, the eldest son, m. Elizabeth, dau. and heir of Richard Bowes, and dying before his father, left an only dau. and heir, JOANE; which

JOANE DACRE s. her grandfather in 1547; and marrying Sir RICHARD FIENES, carried the barony into that family. Sir Richard was summoned to parliament from 9 Oct. (38 HENRY VI.,) 1459, to 15 Nov. (32 EDWARD IV.,) 1482. He was constable of the Tower of London, lord-chamberlain to the queen-consort of EDWARD IV., and a privy councillor. His lordship and his lady had great contests and disputes with Sir Humphrey Dacre, her ladyship's uncle, and the male heir of the family, concerning the lordships, manors, &c., of the late lord, which litigation was finally adjusted by the arbitration of EDWARD IV. That monarch, after hearing the cause, confirmed to Sir Richard and the Lady Joane, the same place and precedence that her grandfather had and enjoyed; and also decreed to them certain lordships in Lancashire and Lincolnshire; but Gillesland, the ancient and capital seat of the Fouces, and of all the barons their descendants, was adjudged, together with the best of the estates in Cumberland, to Sir Humphrey Dacre. It was provided, however, in case of failure of heirs male of Sir Humphrey, that the whole estate should go to Lady Joane and her heirs. At the same time, Sir Humphrey Dacre was created LORD DACRE of Gillesland, with place next beneath Sir Richard Fienes (who was simply styled LORD DACRE) and his lady. Sir Richard's descendants were distinguished as Lords Dacre of the South, and those of Sir Humphrey, Lords Dacre of the North. (For details, see BURKE'S Extinct Peerage.) Sir Richard Fienes, Lord Dacre, d. in 1484, and was s. by his grandson,

THOMAS, 8th Baron Dacre, (son of Sir Thomas Fienes and his wife, Alice, eldest dau. and co-heir of Henry, Lord Fitz Hugh.) This nobleman was made a knight of the Bath at the creation of Henry, 2nd son of HENRY VII., Duke of York. His lordship m. Anne, dau. of Sir Humphrey Bourcher, son of John, Lord Bourchier of Berners; and dying in 1534, was s. by his grandson,

THOMAS, 9th baron, (son of Sir Thomas Fienes, by Jane, dau. of Edward Sutton, Lord Dudley.) This nobleman was high in favour at the court of HENRY VIII.; but going, with other young men, one night, from Herstoncoex, to steal a deer out of his neighbour, Sir Nicholas Pelham's park, (a frolic not unusual in those days,) a fray ensued between some of his party and the park-keepers, in which one of the latter received an unlucky blow, that caused his death in a few days afterwards; and although Lord Dacre was not himself present on the spot, but in a distant part of the park, he was nevertheless tried, convicted, and executed for the murder, in 1541, when his honours became forfeited. In 1562, however, those honours were restored to his son and heir, (by Mary, dau. of George Nevill, Lord Abergavenny.)

GREGORY FIENES, as 10th baron; who was summoned to parliament in 1573. This nobleman d. in 1594, without issue, when his sister,

MARGARET, the wife of Sampson Lennard, Esq., claimed the barony, and was allowed it in 1604. Her ladyship d. in 1611, and was s. by her eldest son,

HENRY LENNARD, as 12th Lord Dacre; who m. Christosona, dau. of Sir Richard Baker, of Sissenhurst, in Kent; and dying in 1616, was s. by his only son,

RICHARD LENNARD, 13th Lord Dacre. This nobleman

rebuilt his seat at Chevening, after a plan of Inigo Jones. His lordship m. 1st, Elizabeth, dau. and co-heir of Sir Arthur Throckmorton, of Paulters' Perry, co. Northampton, by whom he had, (with other issue,)

FRANCIS, his successor.

He m. 2ndly, Dorothy, dau. of Dudley, Lord North, and by her had a son,

RICHARD, who had the manor of Horsford, in Norfolk, settled upon him by his father, and he subsequently assumed the name of BARRETT, in consequence of the bequest of Sir Edward Barrett, Lord Newburgh, to him, of the manor of Belhouse, and other lands in Essex. He m. Anne, dau. and heir of Sir Robert Loftus, Knt. and granddau. of Adam, Viscount Loftus of Ely, lord chancellor of Ireland, and was s. at his decease, in 1696, by his son,

DACRE BARRETT-LENNARD, who m. Lady Jane Chichester, dau. of Arthur, 2nd Earl of Donegal, and had a son, RICHARD, of whom hereafter, as husband of his cousin, Lady Anne Lennard, Baroness Dacre.

Richard, 13th Lord Dacre, d. 18 Aug. 1630, and was s. by his eldest son,

FRANCIS, 14th baron. This nobleman, during the civil wars, took the side of the parliament, but opposed the proceedings against the king personally. His lordship m. Elizabeth, dau. and eventually co-heir of Paul, 1st Viscount Bayning, by whom he had three sons and three daus. Lord Dacre, on the decease of Ranulph Dacre, last heir male of the Lords Dacre of the North, without issue, in the reign of CHARLES I., laid claim to Gillesland, and the rest of the ancient estates in Cumberland, and though he at last consented to compromise with the Howard family, then in possession, yet he recovered Dacre, and divers other manors in Cumberland and Westmorland. He d. in 1662, (his widow, Elizabeth, was subsequently created COUNTESS OF SHEFFY for life, and m. David Walter, lieut.-gen. of the ordnance, and groom of the bedchamber, temp. CHARLES II.,) and was s. by his eldest son,

THOMAS, 15th Lord Dacre, who was created, 5 Oct. 1674, EARL OF SUSSEX. This nobleman was obliged, through extravagance, to dispose of his seat at Herstoncoex, and his lands in Sussex. His lordship m. Lady Anne Palmer, dau. of Barbara, Duchess of Cleveland; but d. in 1715, without male issue, when the earldom ceased, while the Barony of Dacre fell into abeyance between the earl's two daus. and co-heirs, Barbara and Anne; the elder m. Lieut.-Gen. Charles Skelton, but dying without issue in 1741, the younger,

ANNE, became Baroness Dacre. Her ladyship m. thrice; 1st, Richard Barrett-Lennard, Esq., (revert to Richard, 15th baron,) by whom she had an only son, THOMAS; 2ndly, Henry, 8th Lord Teynham, by whom she had, with other children, Charles, who m. Gertrude, sister and co-heir of John Trevor, Esq. of Glynnd, in Sussex, and left at his decease, in 1784.

Her ladyship m. 3rdly, the Hon. Robert Moore, son of Henry, 3rd Earl of Drogheda, by whom she had one son, HENRY. Lady Dacre, soon after the death of her 1st husband, in conjunction with her sister, sold Chevening, the ancient seat of the Lennards, to Earl Stanhope, and Dacre Castle, with the lands in Cumberland, to Sir Christopher Musgrave. She d. in 1755, and was s. by her eldest son,

THOMAS BARRETT-LENNARD, as 17th Baron Dacre. This nobleman m. Anne-Maria, dau. of Sir John Pratt, lord-chief-justice of the King's Bench; but d. without issue, 12 Jan. 1780, when the title devolved upon his nephew, (refer to Anne, Baroness Dacre.)

CHARLES-TREVOR ROPER,* as 18th Lord Dacre; b. 14 June, 1745; m. 2 March, 1773, Mary, only dau. and heir of Sir Thomas Fludger, Knt., but d. s. p. 4 July, 1794, and was s. by his sister,

THE HON. GERTRUDE ROPER, who m. 20 April, 1771, Thomas Brand, Esq. of the Hoo, co. Herts, and by him (who d. 21 Feb. 1794) had issue,

* The remains of this nobleman were interred at Lee, in Kent, and his widow visited his tomb daily, without interruption, until her decease in 1808. She usually rode from her mansion in the neighbourhood to the churchyard on a favourite pony, and wore a large, drab, flapping beaver hat, with a cloth habit nearly trailing the ground. At home, her ladyship evinced an eccentric affection for her deceased lord: his chair was placed, as in his lifetime, at the dinner table, and its vacancy seemed to feed his widow's melancholy.

DALHOUSIE, MARQUESS AND EARL OF, (James-Andrew Broun-Ramsay, K.T.) and Lord Ramsay, in the peerage of Scotland; Baron Dalhousie, of Dalhousie Castle, co. Edinburgh, in the peerage of the United Kingdom; b. 22 April, 1812; m. 21 Jan. 1836, Susan-Georgiana, eldest dau. of George, Marquess of Tweeddale, and has issue, Susan-Georgiana, and Edith-Christian. He is Governor-General of India, capt. of Deal Castle, lord register of Scotland, and major gen. of the royal archers, the Queen's body-guard of Scotland.

Lineage.

This noble family, which is said to be of German descent, has been of note in North Britain since the time of DAVID I. At that period (A.D. 1140) we find

SIMON DE RAMSAY, of Dalhousie, in Lothian, a subscribing witness to a grant of the church of Livingston, in West Lothian. From this Simon descended

SIR ALEXANDER RAMSAY, Knt. of Dalhousie, the celebrated warden of the Middle Marches, and, in 1332, constable of the castle of Roxburgh, which he had taken by escalade. This gallant soldier acquired so high a reputation in his conflicts with the English, that to be of his band was considered as a branch of military education requisite for all young gentlemen who ambitioned to excel in arms. He perished, A.D. 1342, by famine, in the castle of Hermitage. It is reported, that above the place of Ramsay's confinement, there lay a heap of corn, and that, with some grain which dropped down through crevices in the floor, he sustained a miserable existence for seventeen days. From Sir Alexander we pass to his lineal descendant,

JAMES RAMSAY, who left at his decease, about the year 1580, two sons, viz.,

GEORGE.

John (Sir), who, for his loyalty and valour in rescuing JAMES VI. from the Earl of Gowrie and his brother, Alexander Ruthven, at Perth, 5 Aug. 1600, was created Lord Ramsay of Burns and Viscount Haddington. He was subsequently advanced to the dignity of EARL OF HOLDERNESSE, in the peerage of England. His lordship m. twice, but leaving no issue at his decease, in 1635, his honours expired.

The elder son,

SIR GEORGE RAMSAY, Knt., had the barony of Dalhousie, on his own resignation, and the lordship of Melrose, on the resignation of his brother, Lord Haddington, erected into a free barony, to himself and his heirs male of entail, to be called the Barony of Melrose, with a grant to himself, and his heirs male and successors in the said barony, of the dignity of a peer of parliament, under the title of Lord Ramsay of Melrose, by charter, dated 25 Aug. 1618. But not liking the title, his lordship obtained a letter from JAMES VI. to change it to Lord Ramsay of Dalhousie. He m. 1st, Margaret, only dau. and heir of Sir George Douglas, of Helen Hill; and 2ndly, Margaret Ker. He d. in 1629, and was s. by the eldest son of his 1st marriage.

Sir Robert was called to the bar in 1829.

Lineage.

The family of Dallas is of great antiquity in the counties of Elgin and Nairn, and derives its name from the locality which was the original settlement of the clan. Dallas is a parish of Elginshire, in the presbytery of Forres, and synod of Moray. The name is composed of two Gaelic words—dale, a valley or plain, and uis, contracted from uisge, water; (vide p. 195, "Statistical Account of Elginshire," Blackwood and Sons, 1842.) The barony of Dallas, containing the remains of the castle of Dallas, or Torcastle, has long been the property of the Cummings of Altyre. The branch of the family of Dallas, from which the present Baronet is descended, removed to Cantray, in the parish of Cawder, presbytery of Nairn, and synod of Moray, in the 2nd year of King ROBERT III. (1400), and remained in possession of that barony for nearly 400 years, until the estate was alienated by sale to the family of Davidson.

JAMES DALLAS, Laird of Cantray, was killed at Cullodden; and soon after that event, some of his clan emigrated to the West Indies and the United States of America, where they formed establishments, to which, in memory of their highland home and ancestry, they gave the same territorial designation. Dallas Castle is an estate of considerable importance in the island of Jamaica, and the county of Dallas is an extensive district in the state of Alabama. The state of Pennsylvania is now represented in the senate of the United States by the Hon. George Dallas, vice-president of that distinguished assembly, and one of the most eminent jurists of his country.

DALYELL, SIR WILLIAM-CAVENDISH-CUNNINGHAM, of Binns, co. Linlithgow, capt. R.N., inherited at the decease of his brother, 7 June, 1851. Sir William is the 7th bart., and the 19th in lineal descent from Walter, Earl of Menteth; he m. in 1820, Miss M. Sampayo, dau. of A. Sampayo, Esq. of Peterboro' House, and has issue,

ROBERT-ALEXANDER-OSBORNE, M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge, barrister-at-law, b. in 1821.
Osborne-William, R.N., b. in 1834.
Maria-Christina. Elizabeth-Grace.

Lineage.

This family being the heirs male, and representatives of the ancient Earls of Menteth, it is necessary, in the first instance, to deduce that line of descent.

The name of Menteth is local, there being a considerable district in North Britain, through which the river Teth runs, called the Stewartry of Menteth. It was written at different periods, Menethet, Moneth, Menteth, and Monteth; the last mode is the most recently adopted.

The title of Earl of Menteth is said to have existed in the reign of MALCOLM III., A.D. 1065; and there is no doubt of there having been such a nobleman in the reign of MALCOLM's son, David. In the 13th century we have also upon record, Gilchrist and Maurice, successive Earls of Menteth.

WALTER STEWART, 3rd son of Walter, lord-high-steward of Scotland, m. the descendant and heiress of one of those earls, and thus, it is supposed, obtained the earldom. His lordship took an active part in the war against EDWARD I., and is said to have been put to death by that monarch on the surrender of the castle of Dunbar, wherein, with other Scottish chiefs, he had sought safety after a fierce conflict between the Scots and English, in which the former were totally routed. The earl left two sons, who, with their posterity, ever afterwards assumed the surname of Menteth, but retained the paternal coat of Stewart, altering the fesse cheque to a bend, for difference. The elder son, ALEXANDER, succeeded to the earldom of Menteth. The younger son,

SIR JOHN MENTETH, having submitted to King EDWARD, was appointed keeper of the castle of Dumbarton. In two interpolated chapters of Fordun, there is a long account of this gallant person, who refused to give up the fortress so entrusted to him to ROBERT I., unless he should obtain, with a full pardon, the earldom of Lennox; but having been taken by stratagem, he was thrown into prison, whence, through the influence of his sons-in-law, Mallice, Earl of Strathern, Sir Archibald Campbell, of Lochow, and Maurice Buchanan, of Buchanan, he was released immediately before the battle of Bannockburn, where he departed himself valiantly on the part of the Scottish king, notwithstanding EDWARD's (the 2nd) causing his banner to be displayed in the English army. Sir John Menteth had from King ROBERT I., a charter of the lands of Glenberrie and Anlisy, in Klutyre, paying a galley of twenty-six oars to the king. He was custos-comitatus de Menteth, in 1330, when, under that designation, he signed the celebrated letter to the pope, asserting the independence of Scotland. He d. in 1333, and was s. by his eldest son,*

SIR WALTER MENTETH, of Rusky. This gentleman had four sons, two of whom survived, and had issue, namely,

ALEXANDER, his successor.
John, progenitor of the Menteths of Carse, or Kerse.

* By other accounts, Sir Walter is styled grand-nephew of Sir John.

D A N

Sir Walter was killed in one of those local feuds which, at that remote period, so barbarously characterized the kingdom. He was s. by his eldest son,

SIR ROBERT, whose heirs male failing with his grandson, the male line of the family was carried on by the descendants of the second son,

JOHN MENTETH, who m. Marjory, dau. and heiress of John de Striveling, sheriff of Clackmannan, Lord of Carse, of Stirling and Alveth, with whom he acquired those lands and that heritable office. From this John, who d. towards the close of the 14th century, lineally descended,

JAMES MENTETH, of Auldcaithy, who m. in 1688, Magdalen, dau. of Sir Thomas Dalryell, Bart. of Binns, and had seven sons and three daus.,

In 1338, this opulent citizen lent EDWARD III. £300 towards carrying on the war with France, which was a very considerable sum in those days, and more than any other citizen advanced, except the lord-mayor and Simon de Frauncis, who lent each £600 in the ensuing year. first constituted keeper of the king's wardrobe, during life; and made, soon after, groom of the bedchamber. Col. Legge, during the civil wars, became eminently distinguished by his faithful attachment to CHARLES I., and his persevering exertions in the royal cause, before and after the murder of the king. At the battle of Worcester he was wounded and taken prisoner, and had been executed, if his wife had not contrived his escape from Coventry gaol in her own clothes. In 1677, Governor Legge was constituted col. of a regt. of foot, and nominated lieutenant-gen. of the ordnance, of which he was soon afterwards made master. He was subsequently sworn of the privy council, and elevated to the peerage, 3 Dec. 1682, as *Baron of Dartmouth, co. His lordship soon afterwards was sent as admiral of the whole English fleet to demolish Tangier, and, on his return, obtained a grant of £10,000, in reward of his services. During the reign of JAMES II. Lord Dartmouth enjoyed the confidence of that monarch, and filled some of the most important offices. This family is of remote antiquity in the county of Devon, being settled there since the Conquest. It is of Norman descent, but from the residence of its ancestors at an old mansion formerly known by the name of Wey, the first surname adopted in England was De la Wey, and the first of the De la Weys mentioned in the family pedigree had coat armour, which has ever since continued, without variation, to be borne by his descendants, although their surnames have been at different periods written De la Wey, Dewy, De Vie, and Davie. From William De la Wey lineally descended

During the first mayoralty, in 1584, DON ANTONIO, King of Portugal, having been driven from his kingdom by PHILIP, King of Spain, landed at Plymouth, and thence removing to Exeter, was received, with his whole suite, by the mayor, and sumptuously lodged and entertained for a considerable time while he sojourned there, at the magistrate's expense, and in his own house.

Lineage.

WILLIAM, 2nd son of Richard, 4th Duke of Normandy, surnamed Ponce, or Poncius, was Earl of Arques and Tholouse, and came into England with his victorious nephew, Duke WILLIAM. He had three sons, WALTER, DREW, and RICHARD. Of the eldest, little is known; from the second, descend the families of Drew of the Grauge, co. Devon, and of Mocollop Castle, co. Waterford. (See Drew pedigree, registered in the College of Arms, Dublin, and also the Supplement to BURKE'S Landed Gentry.) The youngest son of the Earl of Arques,

RICHARD FITZ-PONTZ, m. Maud, dau. of Ralph de Toney, of Clifford Castle, co. Hereford; and their eldest son,

WALTER, assumed, upon inheriting Clifford Castle, the surname of CLIFFORD. From this Walter descended a race of powerful feudal barons, which we pass over to arrive at

ROBERT DE CLIFFORD, commonly called 1st Lord de Clifford, being summoned as such to parliament, 29 Dec. 1299, and the first of the family so dignified. His lordship was son of Roger de Clifford, a distinguished soldier in the reigns of HENRY III. and EDWARD I., who fell in the Welsh wars, on St. Leonard's day, 1283. This Roger m. Isabel, eldest dau. and co-heir of Robert de Vipont, Lord of Westmorland, and, in her right, held Brougham Castle, in that county, part of which he built, and part repaired, causing the words, "This made Roger," to be cut out in stone, over the portal of the inward gate. Robert, the 1st

Upon the decease of her father, George, 3rd Earl of Cumberland, a great contest arose between the Countess of Dorset and her uncle, Francis, 4th earl, regarding the Barony of Skipton, which endured for no less a period than thirty-eight years, and finally terminated in the lady's favour, by her outliving both the Earls of Cumberland. In 1617, the king undertook to adjust this acrimonious family contest, and made an award; but her ladyship, although urged by her then husband, the Earl of Dorset, refused to abide by it. Her ladyship claimed the BARONY OF CLIFFORD, in 1628, but accomplished nothing therein; she d. in 1675, and the barony remained dormant until 12 Dec. 1691, when the House of Lords allowed it to her grandson, House of La Warr.

The first of this family upon record,

JOHN LA WARR, had a ratification, in the 8th of JOHN, of a grant which that king had made, prior to his coming to the throne, of the lordship of Bristolton, (a member of the honour of Gloucester), to hold by the service of half a knight's fee. He d. in six years afterwards, and was s. by his son,

JORDAN LA WARR, who then paid two hundred pounds for livery of his lands. This feudal lord was in arms against King JOHN, but on paying a fine, with two palfrays, was re-admitted into favour. Nevertheless, we find him again fighting under the baronial standard, and again making his peace after the battle of Evesham. He was s. by JOHN LA WARR, who was sheriff of Herefordshire in the 3rd EDWARD I., and was s. by

ROGER LA WARR, who, in the reigns of EDWARD I. and EDWARD II., having had military summonses to attend the king in the wars of France, and being actively engaged in those as well as the Scottish wars, was summoned to parliament, as a BARON, from 6 Feb. 1299, to 16 June, 1311. His lordship m. Clarice, dau. and co-heir of John de Tregoz, Baron Tregoz; and dying in 1329, was s. by his son,

JOHN LA WARR, 2nd baron, summoned to parliament from 26 Aug. 1307, to 26 Feb. 1347. This nobleman, in the 2d EDWARD I., his father still living, was in the expedition then made into Flanders, and the next year he was in the wars of Scotland. In the 9th of the same reign, on the decease of his mother, Clarice, he inherited a moiety of the property of his grandfather, Lord Tregoz, (to which barony he was co-heir,) viz., Ewyas-Harold, co. Hereford; Alynnton, Wilts; and other lands in the cos. of Somerset, Salop, and Northampton. After this, during the remainder of the reign of EDWARD I., he was constantly engaged in the wars of Scotland, and was made a knight of the Bath. In the 14th EDWARD III., his lordship was in the great sea-fight off Sluy; in the 16th, he was in the expedition to France, assisting at the siege of Nantes; and in the 20th, he was in the van of the BLACK PRINCE at the glorious battle of CRESSY. His lordship m. Joan, sister and heir of Thomas de Gresley, Baron Gresley, whose chief seat was at Manchester, co. Lancaster; by which lady he acquired the great possessions of the Gresleys, and had a son,

JOHN, who predeceased his father, leaving by his wife, Margaret, dau. of Sir John de Holland,

1 ROGER, who s. his grandfather, as 3rd baron.

2 JOHN (Sir), of Bokampton, in Berks, which he held by sergeantry, in keeping the king's dogs, called harriers, when he should come into those parts. Sir John was in the wars of Brittany; and dying in the 34th EDWARD III. s. p., left his estates to his brother.

3 Catherine, m. to Sir Warine Latimer, Lord Latimer, of Braybrooke, and had issue,

John Latimer,
Sir Thomas Latimer, } successively barons.
Edward Latimer

CATHERINE LATIMER, m. to Thomas Griffin, and had a son,

JOHN GRIFFIN, whose descendant,

EDWARD GRIFFIN, was created BARON GRIFFIN of Braybrooke.

His lordship d. in 1347, and was s. by his grandson,

SIR ROGER LA WARR, 3rd baron; summoned to parliament from 14 Aug. 1362, to 1 June, 1363. This nobleman, in the 30th EDWARD III., shared in the glory of POICTIERS, wherein the French King with the Dauphin were made prisoners. Touching the capture of the King of France, it is recorded that much contention took place, as he defended himself with great valour; and the pressure upon him becoming great, such as knew him cried out, "Sir, surrender, or you are dead; whereupon he yielded, according to Froissard, to Sir Dennis Morbeck, a knight of Artois, in the English service; but being forced from that captain, more than ten knights and esquires claimed the honour of taking the royal prisoner. Amongst these, the pretensions of Sir Roger la Warr and Sir John Pelham (ancestor of the Felhams, Dukes of Newcastle, and of the Lords Yarborough and Pelham) having been acknowledged the strongest, Lord Delawarr had, in commemoration of so valiant an exploit, the crampet, or chape, of the captive prince's sword; and Sir John Pelham had the buckle of a belt as a memento of the same achievement. His lordship continued for several years after Poitiers in the French wars, and acquired greater renown in every subsequent campaign. He m. 1st, Elizabeth, dau. of Adam, Lord Welles, and had issue, JOHN and THOMAS, successively Barons Delawarr. Lord Denbigh is a Count of the Holy Roman Empire, master of the horse to Queen ADELAIDE, grand cross of the Guelphic Order of Hanover, and of the Ernestine Order of the Dukes of Saxony.

Lineage.

This family, which claims descent from the Counts of Hapsburg, settled in England in the reign of HENRY III.; and the occasion of its so settling is explained in an ancient manuscript, written about King EDWARD IV.'s time, wherein it appears, that Gefery, Counts of Hapsburg,*

* In the year 1026, Radboton, grandson of GONTRAM the Rich, Count of Brigau, founded the house of the Counts of Hapsburg, which derived its name from the Castle of Hapsburg, built by Werner, Bishop of Strasburg, upon the river Aar, in the canton of Berne. The princely line of Hapsburg became extinct in the person of CHARLES VI., after giving twenty-two sovereigns to Austria, sixteen emperors to Germany, eleven kings to Hungary and Bohemia, and six to Spain.

having been reduced to great poverty by the oppression of Rodolph, Emperor of Germany, one of his sons.

SIR GEFFRY, served HENRY III. in his wars in England, and assumed the surname of Feilding, or Filding, from his father's pretensions to the dominions of Laufenberg and Rinfilding; and it also appears that the English monarch, compassionate the said Geffery, gave him considerable support in rents and fees, lying in divers places. The son of this Geffery,

GEFFERY FEILDING, m. Agnes, dau. and heir of John de Napton, by whom he acquired the lordship of Munster-ton, co. Leicester, and was father of

WILLIAM FEILDING, who acquired, by marriage with Joan, dau. of William Prudhome, and granddau. and heir of Robert de Newnham, the manor of Newnham Paddox, co. Warwick, which has ever since continued the chief seat of the family. The grandson of this William,

SIR WILLIAM FEILDING, a staunch adherent of the house of Lancaster, fell at the battle of Tewkesbury, 9 May, 1740. Sir William m. Agnes, dau. and heir of John St. Liz, a branch of the noble house of St. Liz, Earls of Northampton and Huntingdon, with whom he had the lordship of Martinthorpe, co. Rutland, and a descent in blood from the great families of Vaux, Longvile, and Bellers. He was s. by his eldest surviving son,

SIR EVERARD FEILDING, K.B., who was sheriff of the cos. Warwick and Leicester in the 21st of EDWARD IV., and had a command in the king's army at the battle of Stoke, in 1487. Sir Everard was s. by his eldest son,

On the breaking out of the civil war, Lord Denbigh, adhering faithfully to CHARLES I., performed the part of a stout and valiant soldier in many engagements, but was at length mortally wounded in a sharp skirmish near Birmingham, 3 April, 1643, and died a few days afterwards. Lineage.

SIR EDMOND DENNY, Knt., one of the barons of the court of Exchequer in England in the beginning of the sixteenth century, was great-grandson of John Denny, Esq., who fell in the French war of HENRY V., and was interred at St. Denys. The judge d. in 1520, and there is a monument to his memory in the church of St. Bennett's, wives deceased, and those of William and Agnes, his father and mother. The fourth son of this learned person,

SIR ANTHONY DENNY, Knt., b. in 1500, was groom of the stole in 1518, and sworn of the privy-council to HEN. VIII.

proaching dissolution. HENRY had, however, so high an esteem for Sir Anthony, that he could perform that sad office with impunity, and the monarch presented him with a magnificent pair of gloves, worked in pearls, which still remain in the possession of the family. The grandson of Sir Anthony,

SIR EDWARD DENNY, Knt., was summoned to parliament, in 1604, as Baron Denny, and created, in 1626, EARL OF NORWICH. The latter dignity became extinct at his decease, without male issue, in 1630, while the barony devolved upon his only dau. and heir, Honoria, wife of James, Earl of Carlisle, at the decease of whose son, James Hay, Earl of Carlisle, in 1660, without issue, it expired. Lord Norwich (Sir Edward Denny) was buried at Waltham, and the following epitaph placed upon his tomb :

What Sir Edward Denny was :
A courtier in the chamber, a soldier in the field ;
Whose tongue could never flatter,
Whose heart could never yield.

This scarf, and those gloves, (with others, presented by HENRY VIII. and JAMES I.,) which were for many years out of the possession of the Denny family, were restored to it in the following manner:—In the year 1760, or 1761, the magnificent mansion of the Earl of Arran being to be sold by auction in London, the management of the sale devolved upon Mr. Herbert, (father of the late rector of Ledbury,) his lordship's executor, and the particular friend of Sir Thomas Denny, who discovered, in making preliminary arrangements for the sale, the gloves and scarf, with an old parchment manuscript, in a purple satin bag, by which, upon perusal, he was directed to the family to which they really belonged; and knowing how highly he should gratify his friend by the restoration of such inestimable relics, he purchased them for him—the gloves given to Sir Anthony Denny, by HENRY VIII., for 3*sh.* 1*7s.*; the gloves, given by JAMES I. to Sir Anthony's son, Sir Edward Denny, for 2*2s.* 1*s.*; the mittens, presented by ELIZABETH to Sir Edward Denny, Knight-Banneret, for 2*5s.* 4*s.*

ADAM DE ALDITHLEY attended Duke WILLIAM in his expedition to England, and was accompanied from Aldithley, in Normandy, by his two sons, Lydulph and Adam de Aldithley, and had large possessions conferred upon him by the CONQUEROR.

LYDULPH, eldest son, was father of Adam de Aldithley, which Adam was possessed, by right of his wife, Mabella, dau. and heir of Henry Stanley de Stoneley, of the manor of Stoneley and Balterley, co. Stafford, and was ancestor of the Barons Audley, of Healey Castle, co. Stafford; and

ADAM DE ALDITHLEY, second son, was father of WILLIAM DE ALDITHLEY, to whom Thomas Stanley, of Stafford, kinsman of Henry Stanley, of Stoneley, gave his only

* His sister, Anna-Maria-Draycott, m. in 1825, Sir Francis Shuckburgh, Bart., and d. 8 Nov. 1846.

dau. and heir, Joan, and with her, as a marriage portion, the manor of Thalk, co. Stafford: he having exchanged Thalk for Stoneley, and half the manor of Balterley, with his cousin Adam, made choice of Stoneley for his seat; and in honour of his lady, and the great antiquity of her family, (of noble Saxon descent,) who flourished in England many years before the Conquest, assumed the surname of Stanley, and became the immediate founder of the Stanleys. This William was s. by his son and heir,

WILLIAM STANLEY DE STONELEY, who was s. by his son,

SIR WILLIAM STANLEY, who had two sons, John Stanley, who d. s. p.; and

SIR ADAM STANLEY, second son, but heir, who was s. by his son and heir,

The eldest son,

SIR WILLIAM STANLEY, Lord of Stourton, &c., m. Alice, dau. of Hugh Massey, of Timperley, and sister of Sir Hamon Massey, of Dunham Massey, and d. in the 21st RICHARD II., by whom he had, beside one dau., three sons,

The second son,

SIR JOHN STANLEY, K.G., m. Isabel, dau. and heir of Sir Thomas Lathom, Knt. of Lathom and Knowsley, co. Lancaster, (descended from Robert Fitz-Henry, whose son, Robert, took the name of Latham, from his place of residence,) and thus acquired those estates. In 1385, Sir John Stanley was lord-deputy of Ireland, and had a grant of the manor of Blake Castle, in that kingdom. In 1405, he had a commission, in conjunction with Roger Leke, to seize on the city of York and its liberties, and also upon the ISLE OF MAN, on the forfeiture of Henry Percy, Earl of Northumberland; and in the 7th HENRY IV., being then treasurer of the household to the king, obtained licence to fortify a house at Liverpool, which he had newly built, with embattled walls. In the same year, having taken possession of the Isle of Man, he obtained a grant in fee of the said Isle, castle, and pile, anciently called Holm Town, and also the isles adjacent, as also all the regalities, franchises, &c., to be holden of the said king, his heirs, and successors, by homage, and the service of two falcons, payable on the days of their coronation. On the accession of HENRY V., he was made a knight of the Garter, and constituted lord-lieut. of Ireland for six years, in which government he d. in 1414, having had (beside two daus.) four sons, William (Sir), of Holt, who was beheaded as a participant in the conspiracy for placing Perkin Warbeck upon the throne. Sir William was the richest subject in the kingdom, having no less than 40,000 marks in ready money, and £3000 a year; to which circumstance, considering the rapacious disposition of HENRY VII., may be attributed his destruction more than to his political principles.

This gallant person commanded the rear of the English army at Flodden Field, 9 Sept. 1513, and forcing the Scots, by the power of his archers, to descend the hill, thus broke their line, and insured the triumph of the English arms, for which good service, HENRY VIII., keeping his Whitsun-tide at Eltham the next ensuing year, 1514, commanded that Sir Edward Stanley, for those valiant acts against the Scots, where he won the hill, and vanquished all that opposed him, as also that his ancestors bore the eagle in their crest, should be there proclaimed LORD OF MONTAGLE, and he had subsequently summons to parliament in that dignity. He was also elected a knight of the Garter. His lordship's grandson, WILLIAM STANLEY, 3rd Lord of Montague, d. in 1581, leaving, by Ellen, his wife, dau. of Sir Thomas Preston, of Preston Patrick and Levens, in Westmorland, an only dau., ELIZABETH, who became his heir, and marrying Edward Parker, Lord Morley, conveyed the BARONY OF MONTAGLE into that family. Lord Stanley m. 2ndly, Margaret, dau. and heir of John, Duke of Somerset, widow of Edmund Tudor, Earl of Richmond, and mother of Henry, Earl of Richmond. How far his lordship contributed to the victory of Bosworth is recorded in history; and his placing the crown of Richard upon the head of the victorious Richmond in the field is also a matter of historic record. In consideration of those eminent services, the new monarch advanced Lord Stanley.

27 Oct. 1485, to the dignity of EARL OF DERBY, and constituted him one of the commissioners for executing the office of lord-high-steward of England on the day of his coronation. EDWARD, 3rd earl, K.G., lord-high-steward at the coronation of Queen MARY, and chamberlain of Chester in the reign of ELIZABETH; so celebrated for magnificence and liberality, that Camden says, "that with Edward, Earl of Derby's death, the glory of hospitality seemed to fall asleep." His lordship d. 24 Oct. 1572, and was s. by his eldest* son, (by his 1st wife, Dorothy, dau. of Thomas Howard, Duke of Norfolk.)

HENRY, 4th earl, K.G.; one of the peers who sat upon the trial of MARY, Queen of Scots. His lordship m. FERDINANDO, 5th earl. This nobleman having been tampered with by one Heaket, said to be an agent of the Jesuits, to assume the title of king in right of his grandmother, and rejecting the proposition indignantly, is supposed to have been poisoned in consequence by the conspirators. His lordship m. Alice, dau. of Sir John Spencer, of Althorp, and had three daus., his co-heirs, viz.,

ANNE, m. 1st, to Grey, 5th Lord Chandos; and 2ndly, to Mervyn, Earl of Castlehaven.

His death occurred 16 April, 1594, when the BARONIES OF STANLEY AND STRANGE fell into abeyance amongst his daus., and the earldom devolved upon his brother,

WILLIAM, 6th earl, K.G. This nobleman bought from his nieces their claims on the Isle of Man. The earl dying in 1642, was s. by his son,

JAMES, 7th earl, K.G., b. 31 Jan. 1606; who had been summoned to parliament, in 1627, as Baron Strange, under an impression that such a barony was enjoyed by his father; that, however, not being the case, the summons amounted to the creation of a new peerage, which eventually devolved upon the ducal house of Atholl. His lordship was distinguished by his devoted attachment to the royal cause during the civil war; and falling into the hands of the enemy after the battle of Worcester, suffered decapitation, at Bolton, 15 Oct. 1651. He m. Charlotte, dau. of Claude de la Tremouille, Duke of Thouars, (this lady became famous for her gallant defence of Latham House, in 1644, when it was besieged by 2000 parliamentarians; and of the Isle of Man, in 1651,) and left issue,

JAMES, 10th earl; who m. Mary, dau. and sole heir of Sir William Morley, K.B., of Hainaker, but d. without issue, in 1735-6, when the ISLE OF MAN, with the BARONY OF STRANGE, created in 1627, devolved upon the Duke of Atholl, (all the other baronies fell into abeyance between the co-heirs of Ferdinando, the 5th earl,) and the Earldom of Derby reverted to

Lineage.

This is one of the very few houses still existing in England of undoubted Saxon origin; an origin confirmed not only by tradition, but by authentic family documents. One of its remote ancestors, DERING MILLS, (from the Saxon word Dering, signifying Terror), appears as witness to a deed, by which King ETHELWYF granted certain lands in Cucolinstone to the church of Rochester in 880, and this Dering is said to be descended in a direct line from ETHELWARD, King of Diera.

To pass, however, to more recent progenitors, we find SIR RICHARD DERING, Knt. of Heyden, Lieut. of Dover Castle in the reign of RICHARD II. His grandson,

RICHARD DERING, Esq. of Surrenden, d. in 1481, and was s. by his son,

JOHN DERING, Esq. of Surrenden-Dering. The 5th direct descendant from this gentleman,

i. SIR EDWARD DERING, Knt. of Surrenden-Dering, was created a Baronet, 1 Feb. 1626. This gentleman, who was Lieutenant of Dover Castle, was a man of talents and learning; but he adopted, upon one occasion, a very eccentric mode of evincing his erudition, that of presenting a bill from the gallery of the House of Commons, "for the extirpation of bishops, deans, and chapters," and prefacing his motion with two verses of Ovid, the classical application of which was said to have been his sole motive for the proceeding.

* The crest is derived from the family of Latham, of Latham, in Lancashire, now represented by the Stanleys.

In an old visitation of Lancashire, in the College of Arms, it is stated, that a child was found in an eagle's nest upon the estate, and adopted by one of the Lathams; and this, it is assumed, was the origin of the crest.

"Cuncta prius tentanda; sed irremedicabile vulnus
Ense recidendum est, ne pars sincera trahatur."

Lineage.

"That Peter, the ancestor of this great and noble family," says Dugdale, "did originally assume his surname in the time of HENRY I., from that lordship in Holderness, called Ros, where he then had his residence, needeth not to be doubted."

Roysia, dau. of William Trusbut, of Wartre, in Holderness, and at the decease of her brothers without issue, co-heir to her father's estate; which estate was eventually inherited by her descendants, the Lords Ros, her sisters and co-heirs leaving no posterity. Everard de Ros died about the year 1186, and was s. by his son,

ROBERT DE ROS, surnamed Furfan. This feudal lord, in the time of RICHARD I., was imprisoned in Normandy, and forced to pay a considerable sum for his deliverance. But, under King JOHN he regained the whole barony of his great-grandfather, Walter Espee, and was soon after employed as one of the commissioners to conduct WILLIAM, King of Scotland, into England. Robert de Ros was the founder of Hamlake Castle, in Yorkshire, and of Werke Castle, in Northumberland. During the troubles in King JOHN's reign, he espoused the baronial interests and was a leader in the baronial army. He m. Isabel, dau. of WILLIAM the Lion, King of Scotland, and had issue,

The family of SAUMAREZ, originally de Saumarez, is of Norman extraction, and of great antiquity in the island of Guernsey. By an act of EDWARD II., anno 1313, and one of EDWARD III., in the year 1331, it appears that Le Seigneur de Saumarez was appointed hereditary captain (or chateain) of the castle of Jerbourg, within the limits of that fief.

He went out a lieutenant on board his majesty's ship the Centurion, under the auspicious conduct of Commodore Anson, in his expedition to the South Sea. Lineage.

For a full account of this nobleman's paternal ancestors, the BYRNES of TIMOGUE, refer to BURKE'S History of the Landed Gentry.

The LEICESTERS (or LEYCESTERS, as formerly written,) are of very great antiquity in the co. Chester, and were possessed of land there in the time of King JOHN. The village of Nether Tabley, manor, and mansion, came to them with Margaret Dutton, dau. of Jeffrey Dutton, of Dutton, co. Chester, A.D. 1273, as appears in the History and Antiquities of Cheshire, by Sir Peter Leicester, Bart. "Jeffrey Dutton, (says Sir Peter,) son of Adam Dutton de Dutton, gave Nether Tabley to his dau., Margaret, and her heirs, about the end of the reign of HENRY III. This Margaret first married Robert de Denbigh, and had no issue; afterwards she married Nicholas de Leicester, by whom she had issue, and to whose succeeding progeny the manor of Nether Tabley still belongeth. He was afterwards Sir Nicholas Leicester, Knt., so styled in 1292, and was seneschal to Henry Lacy, Earl of Lincoln, constable of Cheshire." His son Roger's son and heir,

John.

The elder son of Nicholas,

JOHN LEICESTER, who served in the wars of France, under John of Gaunt, in 1373 and 1380, built the old manor hall of Nether Tabley. He was father of

WILLIAM LEICESTER, Esq. of Nether Tabley, the first that we find styled "De Tabley;" but this may be in consequence of the statute of additions passed in the 1st of HENRY V.; for previously to the enactment of that law, few were written either of the place, or with the title of esquire. Certain it is, that this William lived at his manor-house of Nether Tabley, which his father, John, had recently erected, and which continues the seat of the family to the present period. He m. twice, but had issue by his wife Agnes, sister of Sir John-Piers Dutton, Knt., only. He d. in 1428, and was s. by his eldest son,

Lineage.

This and the family of De Burgh, Marquesses and Earls of Clanricarde, derive from a common progenitor; namely, JOHN, Earl of Comyn, and Baron of Tonsburgh, in Normandy, son of BALDWIN II., founder of the house of Biols, in France. From the eldest son of this Earl John, descended the house of Clanricarde; and from the younger,

EUSTACE DE BURGH, Baron of Tonsburgh, that of which we are now to treat. This Eustace had two sons, Charles and John, both companions in arms of the CONQUEROR. The elder son,

CHARLES, built the castle of Knaresborough, in Yorkshire, and was s. by his brother,

JOHN, who m. Margaret, aunt of King STEPHEN, and was s. by his eldest son,

Lineage.

The COURTENAYS, one of the most illustrious races amongst the English nobility, deduce their paternal descent from ATHON, who sprang himself from PHARAMOND, founder of the French monarchy in 420, and common patriarch of all the kings of France. This ATHON* having fortified, during the reign of ROBERT the Wise, the town of COURTENAY, in the Isle of France, thence assumed his surname. But as the power of the Courtenays in England principally arose from the great alliances formed by the first members of the family who settled here, we shall pass at once to their maternal pedigree.

GODFREY, Earl of Ewe and Brion, natural son of Richard, 1st Duke of Normandy, was father of

GILBERT, Earl of Brion, who had two sons: Richard, ancestor of the house of Clare; and

* ATHON DE COURTENAY left a son and heir, JOCELYNE DE COURTENAY, who m. 1st, Hildegarde, dau. of Gaugade, Count of Gastinois, and had a daughter, Hodiherne, m. to Jeffery, 2nd Count of Joigny.

He m. 2ndly, about the year 1065, Isabel, dau. of Guy, Lord of Montlehery, and had three sons, MILo, ancestor of the English Courtenays. Joceline, one of the most eminent princes of the Crusade patriarch of the Counts of Edessa and Kings of Jerusalem.

Jeffery, likewise a distinguished soldier of the Cross, fell in conflict with the infidel in 1136.

The eldest son.

MILo DE COURTENAY, m., about the year 1095, Ermengarde, only dau. of Renaud (or Reginald), the 2nd Count of Nevers, (by his wife, Hadewise, dau. of ROBERT the Wise, King of France), and had three sons, viz.,

William, who d. in the Holy Land.

Joceline, of whom nothing is known.

REGINALD.

Milo de Courtenay founded, in 1124, the abbey of Fontaine-Jean for Cistercian monks, and was buried there in 1127. His youngest son,

REGINALD DE COURTENAY, set out for Palestine with LOUIS VII. of France, in 1147, but returned before that prince to his native country, and upon the death of his elder brothers succeeded to the paternal inheritance. In a contest between the monarch and his royal consort, ELEANOR, heiress of Aquitaine, Poitiers, &c., who had accompanied him to the Holy Land, arising from the king's suspicion of the lady's fidelity, Reginald de Courtenay was amongst those who vindicated the queen's honour, and he subsequently came into England with HENRY II., who had espoused that lady after she had been divorced from the French king. The great power of Courtenay in his native country is singularly shewn in a letter from Theban, Count or Earl of Champagne, to Sugerius, Abbot of St. Denis, governor of the realm during the king's absence, written after Reginald's return to the Holy Land:—"This is to let you know, that Renand de Courtenay hath done great injury to the king, and to you, who are the guardian of the realm; for he hath seized on certain royal merchants that are the king's subjects, who have discharged their toil at Orleans and Lens, and satisfied for all the customs and duties that are paid in the king's territories, and moreover, hath stripped them of all their goods: it is therefore necessary that you order him, in the king's name, and in yours, that they be set at liberty, and that all that belongs to them be restored to them again; but in case he should refuse to obey this order, and you should be driven to march an army against him to compel him thereto, let me know it, and I will send you aid, that you may be able to bring him to obedience." How this affair terminated is not recorded, but he must have been a powerful subject who required an army to reduce him to submission. This Reginald de Courtenay m. while in France, a sister of Guy de Donjon, one of the most famous knights of the age, and had two daughters, viz.,

ELIZABETH, m. to Peter, youngest son of LOUIS the Gross, King of France; and from this union (Peter having taken the name of Courtenay) sprang the illustrious branch of Courtenay in France, of which were the Emperors of Constantinople.

— m. to Avelon, Lord of Seligny.

WALDWIN DE BRIONIS, who, for the distinguished part he had in the Conquest, obtained from King WILLIAM the BARONY OF OAKHAMPTON, the custody of the co. of Devon, and the government of the castle of Exeter in fee, He m. Albreda, dau. of Richard, surnamed Goe, Count of Avrache, and had, with other issue,

RICHARD, surnamed DE REDVERS, Robert, governor of Briome.

Emma, m. 1st, to William Avenal; and 2ndly, to William de Abrincis; by the latter she had issue,

ROBERT DE ABRINCIS, who, upon the resignation of his uncle, Richard de Redvers, obtained a grant of the Barony of Oakhampton, the office of hereditary sheriff of Devon, and the governorship of Exeter Castle. He m. a dau. of Godwyn Dole, and left an only dau. and heir,

MAUD DE ABRINCIS, who m. 1st, — Deincourt, by whom she had a daughter, HAWISE,* who m. Sir Reginald de Courtenay.

Maud m. 2ndly, Robert Fitz-Edith, natural son of HENRY I., and had another daughter, Matilda, m. to William de Courtenay.

RICHARD DE ABRINCIS, surnamed DE REDVERS, having s. his father, was created, by HENRY I., EARL OF DEVON, and resigned the Barony of Oakhampton, the shrievalty of Devon, and the custody of the castle of Devon to his nephew,

ROBERT DE ABRINCIS, from whom that dignity, and those high offices, passed to the husband of his granddau., HAWISE, as above,

SIR REGINALD DE COURTENAY, who was s. by his eldest son,

ROBERT DE COURTENAY, as feudal Baron of Oakhampton, Viscount of Devonshire, and governor of the castle of Exeter. This Robert, in 1214, was made governor of Bridgnorth, in Shropshire, and the following year, sheriff of Oxfordshire, and governor of the castle of Oxford, when the king (JOHN) committed to him the coignage of tm in Devonshire and Cornwall. In the 4th year of HENRY III., his lordship gave the king a palfrey for permission to hold a yearly fair in his manor of Oakhampton, on the vigil and feast-day of St. James the Apostle, which fair still continues to be holden there. In the 16th year of the same prince, most of the castles and counties of England being resumed by the crown, the Courtenays were deprived of the honour and profit of the Viscounty of Devon, and government of the castle of Exeter, after those had been enjoyed nearly two hundred years by themselves and their ancestors; and Robert de Courtenay was thus despoiled of all his honours, save the simple Barony of Oakhampton. He m. Mary, youngest dau. of William de Redvers, surnamed Vernon, 6th Earl of Devon; and dying 26 July, 1242, was s. by his elder son,

JOHN DE COURTENAY, as feudal Baron of Oakhampton; who m. Isabel, dau. of Hugh de Vere, Earl of Oxford, lord-high-chamberlain of England; and dying in 1272, was s. by his only son,

HUGH DE COURTENAY, Baron of Oakhampton. This feudal lord m. Eleanor, dau. of Hugh de Spencer, the elder, Earl of Winchester, and was s. by his elder son,

HUGH DE COURTENAY, Baron of Oakhampton. This nobleman having distinguished himself in the Scottish wars of EDWARD I., was one of the three hundred persons of eminence knighted by that monarch at Westminster. In the reign of EDWARD II., he was created a Knight-Banneret; and was fifteen times summoned to especial treaties in parliament, as a baron, within the first eight years of EDWARD III., and twice in the 9th of the same monarch, by the name of Hugh de Courtenay, EARL OF DEVONSHIRE, being the last earl in order, as having been that year only restored to the dignity, in right of his great-grandmother, Mary, dau. of William de Redvers, Earl of Devon. His lordship m. Agnes, sister of the Lord St. John of Basing, and was s. at his decease, in 1340, by his eldest son,

HUGH DE COURTENAY, 2nd Earl of Devon; who had m. in 1323, Margaret, dau. of Humphry Bohun, Earl of Hereford and Essex, (lord-high-constable of England, and his wife, the Lady Elizabeth Plantagenet, dau. of EDWARD I., by whom he had (with nine daus.) eight sons, viz.,

i. Hugh, commonly called Hugh Courtenay le Fitz, one of the gallant soldiers of the martial reign of EDWARD III., a participator in the glories of Cressy, and an original knight of the Garter. He was summoned to parliament, as BARON COURTENAY, 8 Jan. 1371. His lordship m. Elizabeth, dau. of Guy Brian, Lord of Tor-Brian, in Devonshire, and sister of the famous Guy, Lord Brian, K.G., standard-bearer to the king at Cressy; and dying in the lifetime of his father, left an only son, Hugh, who m. Matilda, dau. of Thomas Holland, Earl of Kent, by Joan Plantagenet, his wife, the celebrated FAIR MAID OF KENT, granddau. of EDWARD I. (and mother, by the Black Prince, of RICHARD II.) Hugh Courtenay d. in 1377, a few years after his father, and before his grandfather, leaving no issue. His widow m. Walcran, Earl of St. Paul.

ii. Thomas, M.P. for Devonshire; d. before his father.

iii. EDWARD, of Godlington, (who d. also before his father,) m. Emeline, dau. and heir of Sir John D'Auney, Knt., and had issue,

1 EDWARD, successor to his grandfather, as 3rd earl.

2 Hugh (Sir), of Haccomb, m. 1st, Elizabeth, dau. of Sir William Cogan, and widow of Sir Fulk Fitzwarine, but by her had no issue. He m. 2ndly, Philippa, dau. and co-heir of Sir William Arcedekene, and had an only daughter, Joane, m. 1st, to Nicholas, Lord Carew; and 2ndly, to Sir Robert Vere.

Sir Hugh Courtenay m. 3rdly, Maud, dau. of Sir John Beaumont, of Sherwell, in Dorsetshire, by whom he had (with a dau., Margaret, m. to Sir Theobald Grenvill, Knt.) a son and heir,

HUGH (Sir), of Boconnock, who fell at Tewkesbury, leaving, (with four daughters,)

EDWARD, who was created, in 1485, Baron Oakhampton and EARL OF DEVON.

iv. William, Archbishop of Canterbury in 1381; and d. in 1396.

v. John, M.P. for Devonshire, temp. RICHARD II.

vi. PHILIP (Sir), of Powderham Castle, of whom hereafter as ancestor of the present Earl of Devon.

vii. Peter (Sir), K.G., standard-bearer to EDWARD III., constable of Windsor Castle, governor of Calais, and chamberlain to RICHARD II.; d. wsm. in 1409.

viii. Humphry.

Hugh, 2nd Earl of Devon, d. in 1377, and was s. by his grandson,

EDWARD, 3rd Earl of Devon, commonly called the Blind Earl. This nobleman served to the beginning of the reign of RICHARD II. as a naval officer, under JOHN of Gaunt, and THOMAS of Woodstock, respectively, and was appointed, in the 7th of the same monarch, admiral of all the king's fleet, from the mouth of the Thames westward. In the next year, being then EARL MARSHAL, his lordship was retained to serve the king in his Scottish wars. He m. Maud, dau. of Thomas, Lord Camois; and dying 4 Dec. 1419, was s. by his only surviving son,

HUGH, 4th Earl of Devon, K.B., who m. Anne, dau. of Richard, Lord Talbot, and sister of the renowned Earl of Shrewsbury; and dying in 1432, was s. by his son,

THOMAS, 5th Earl of Devon. This nobleman commenced his military career at the age of sixteen, and was engaged for several years in the French wars of HEN. VI., with whom he sided on the breaking out of the unhappy conflict between the Houses of York and Lancaster; and the Courtenays ever after adhered, with desperate fidelity, to the RED ROSS. In 1448, a dispute regarding precedence arose between the Earls of Devon and Arundel, which was decided by parliament in favour of the latter lord, owing to his feudal possession of Arundel Castle. The Earl of Devon d. 3 Feb. 1458, in the Abbey of Abingdon, upon his route to London, as a mediator, with other noblemen, between the king and the Duke of York. He m. Lady Margaret Beaufort, second dau. of John, Marquess of Somerset, and was s. by his eldest son,

THOMAS, 6th Earl of Devon. This nobleman inheriting the political principles, with the honours, of his deceased father, was a strenuous upholder of the Lancastrian interests, and falling into the hands of the Yorkists, at Towton-Field, he was beheaded at York, by order of EDW. IV., in April, 1462. His lordship was subsequently attainted, and the honours of the house thus became eclipsed; but his next brother,

HUGH COURTENAY, (7th earl, but for the attainder,) finding favour with the new king, had restoration of some part of the estates. Engaging, however, in the Lancastrian quarrel, with the zeal of his predecessors, he was himself attainted, 4 May, 1466, before the king and justices at Sarum, and beheaded, with the Lord Hungerford, on the same day.

(The greater part of the Courtenay estates having been conferred upon Humphrey Stafford, Baron Stafford of Southwicke, that nobleman was created Earl of Devon in 1469; but falling under the axe as a traitor, in the August following, the dignity expired.)

Upon the demise of Hugh Courtenay, his only surviving brother,

JOHN COURTENAY, assumed the EARLDOM OF DEVON, and the Lancastrian interest prevailing in 1470, by the expulsion of King EDWARD, his lordship was restored to the honours and possessions of his family by the parliament that replaced the crown upon the head of HENRY VI. The subsequent defeat, however, of Richard Nevill, the Stout EARL OF WARWICK, at Barnet-Field, 14 April, 1471, again placed the fortunes of the house of Devon in jeopardy, and the earl, joining MARGARET DE ANJOU, fell sword in hand, at Tewkesbury, 14 May following, at the head of MARGARET'S rear-guard. Thus the three brothers sealed with their blood their bond of fidelity to the house of Lancaster, and with them expired the senior branch of the ancient and illustrious house of Courtenay. The last earl was buried at Tewkesbury, and being attainted, the honours and estates of DEVON became again forfeited.

This branch being thus extinguished, we proceed to that founded by

SIR HUGH COURTENAY, of Haccomb, brother of EDWARD, 3rd earl, (revert to issue of Hugh, 2nd earl.) This gentleman's only son,

SIR HUGH COURTENAY, Knt., was of Boconnock, in Cornwall, and M.P. for that shire. He m. Margaret, dau. and co-heir of Thomas Carniuow, (the last heir male of that ancient family, whose other dau. and co-heir was m. to Sir Thomas Carew, of Mohun's Ottery,) and had issue, Isabel, m. to William Mohun.

Florence, m. to John Trelawny.

Sir Hugh, faithful to the Red Rose, fell, with his noble kinsman, the Earl of Devon, at Tewkesbury; and his eldest son,

SIR EDWARD COURTENAY, being involved, with his brother, in the conspiracy of Henry Stafford, Duke of Buckingham, in favour of Henry, Earl of Richmond, was forced to fly into Brittany upon the failure of the plot and the decapitation of the duke. Participating, subsequently, in the victory of BOSWORTH, he was elevated to the peerage by HENRY VII., (26 Oct. 1485,) as EARL OF DEVON, and he obtained grants, at the same time, of the greater part of the estates, manors, &c., which had belonged to the late Thomas Courtenay, Earl of Devon. His lordship m. Elizabeth, dau. of Sir Philip Courtenay, of Molland, and had an only son, William (Sir), K.B., who m. the Lady Katherine Plantagenet, dau. of EDWARD IV. In the year 1502, Sir William was arrested, with Lord William de la Pole, Sir James Tyrrel, and Sir John Wyndham, and accused of holding a traitorous correspondence with Edmund de la Pole, Earl of Suffolk, then a refugee at the court of his aunt, Margaret, Duchess of Burgundy, and he was attainted in 1504. Tyrrel and Wyndham were beheaded on Tower-hill, while Courtenay was doomed to incarceration during the king's reign.

The earl d. in 1509, and HENRY VIII. ascending the throne in the same year, that monarch immediately released

SIR WILLIAM COURTENAY, and took him into favour; but he died in three years afterwards, before he had either letters patent or a formal restoration of the earldom. He was buried, however, "with the honours of an earl," at the especial command of the king. By the Lady Catherine Plantagenet he left an only son,

EDWARD COURTENAY, who, having been restored in blood and honours, became second Earl of Devon of the new creation. In 1522, his lordship obtained a grant of Calcand, in Cornwall, and of "a fair mansion," situate in the parish of St. Lawrence, Poultry, in the city of London, forfeited by the attainder of Edward Stafford, Duke of Buckingham; and was advanced by letters patent, dated

18 June, 1522, to the dignity of MARQUESS OF EXETER. For some years this nobleman enjoyed the favour of the sickle HENRY, but he fell at length a victim to that monarch's jealousy of the house of POLE. He was committed to the Tower with Henry Pole, Lord Montacute, and Sir Edward Nevill, for conspiring to place Reginald Pole, dean of Exeter, upon the throne, and was beheaded with Sir Edward Nevill, 9 Jan. 1539. On the subsequent attainder of the marquess ALL HIS HONOURS EXPIRED, and the king annexed to the Duchy of Cornwall the lands in that county, which thus came to the crown. His lordship m. 1st, Elizabeth Grey, dau. and heir of John, Viscount Lisle, but by that lady had no issue. He m. 2ndly, Gertrude, dau. of William Blount, Lord Mountjoy, by whom he left an only child,

EDWARD COURTENAY, who, though but twelve years of age at the death of his father, was committed prisoner to the Tower, and detained there during the remainder of King HENRY'S reign, and that of EDWARD VI.; but upon the accession of Queen MARY he was released, and a patent, dated at Richmond, 3 Sept. 1663, was issued, creating him EARL OF DEVON. The words of this patent, though unusual, appear to have been adapted to the particular circumstances of the case:—"In consideration," it is said, "of the nobility of his birth, and his proximity in blood to the queen, she was pleased to create him Earl of Devon, with all pre-eminences, honours, &c., thereunto belonging, to hold the title and dignity of Earl of Devon, with the said honours and pre-eminences thereunto belonging to the aforesaid EDWARD, and HIS HEIRS MALE FOR EVER;" and the patent proceeds thus: "And further, of our more abundant grace we will, and by these presents do grant to the aforesaid now earl, that HE AND HIS HEIRS MALE may have, hold, enjoy, and possess, in all parliaments and other places, the same pre-eminence as any of the ancestors of the said earl, being hereafter Earls of Devon, hath held or enjoyed." In the Oct. following, he was fully restored in blood; but as the attainder of his father was never reversed, he did not succeed to the Earldom of Devon, created in the 1st HENRY VII., nor to the earldom created in the 3rd HENRY VIII., neither did he to the Marquisate of Exeter. His lordship had some command in suppressing Wyatt's rebellion, and yet was afterwards, with the Princess ELIZABETH, accused of being accessory thereto, and sent with her highness to the Tower. He was subsequently confined in Fotheringay Castle, but released, through the interposition of PHILIP of Spain, upon that monarch's marriage with the queen; the Lady ELIZABETH being liberated through the same influence. His lordship, after this, obtained the queen's permission to go abroad, and d. at Padua, not without suspicion of poison, 4 Oct. 1566. He d. unm., and his estates reverted to the issue of his great-aunts, and the four daus. of Sir Hugh Courtenay, of Boconnock, and sisters of Edward, 1st earl. At his lordship's decease, the EARLDOM OF DEVON was considered to have become extinct, and it remained dormant for no less than two hundred and sixty-five years. It was, however, re-established in another branch of the family, as HEIRS MALE of the deceased lord, (to which we shall now proceed,) by the decision of parliament, 15 March, 1831. It is clear, however, that the Courtenays themselves never once previously thought of the earldom's being in existence, or they would not have accepted a baronetcy and a viscounty.

The existing branch of the Courtenays was founded by SIR PHILIP COURTENAY, of Powderham Castle, (refer to issue of Hugh de Courtenay, 2nd of the original Earls of Devon,) who received the honour of knighthood from Edward, the Black Prince, with his brothers, Hugh and Peter, the day before the battle of Navaret, in Spain, and was constituted in 1383, lord-Lieutenant of Ireland for ten years. Sir Philip m. Anne, dau. of Sir Thomas Wake, by whom he left three sons and two daus., and was s. at his decease, in the 7th HENRY IV., by his eldest son,

RICHARD COURTENAY, Lord Bishop of Norwich. This prelate was one of the ambassadors sent by HENRY V. to the King of France, to demand the crown of that kingdom, as his right by descent, and to denounce war in the event of non-compliance. He d. in 1415, and was s. in his estates by his nephew,

SIR PHILIP COURTENAY, Knt., who m. Elizabeth, dau. of Walter, Lord Hungerford, and acquired by the alliance the manor of Molland Botreaux, in Devonshire. He had issue, beside two daus., seven sons, viz.,

His grace was nominated ambassador-extraordinary, in 1826, from his Britannic Majesty, to assist at the coronation of the Emperor Nicholas, of Russia. The Duke of Devonshire is lord-lieutenant and custos-rotulorum of the co. Derby.

Lineage.

The noble family of Cavendish, of which, in the last century, two branches attained dukedoms, laid the foundations of its greatness originally on the share of abbey lands, obtained, at the dissolution of the monasteries, by Sir William Cavendish, who had been gentleman-usher to Cardinal Wolsey, and d. in 1557; and, subsequently, by the abilities and the good fortune of Elizabeth, his widow, who remarried George, Earl of Shrewsbury, and d. in 1607, aged eighty-seven. But though thence arose the exalted rank and extensive possessions enjoyed at present by the Cavendishes, be it not supposed that their remote ancestors were obscure. Whether the first of the name who enjoyed the lordship of Cavendish, in Suffolk, was or was not the son of a member of the baronial family of Gernon, whom genealogists have stated to have owned that estate, it is clearly ascertained that

SIR JOHN CAVENDISH, who acquired the lordship of Cavendish-Overhall, by his marriage with Alice, dau. and heiress of John de Odyngeseles, was chief-justice of the Court of King's Bench in 1566, 1573, and 1577. In the 4th RICHARD II., his lordship was elected chancellor of the University of Cambridge, and was next year commissioned, with Robert de Hales, treasurer of England, to suppress the insurrection raised in the city of York; in which year the mob, having risen to the number of 50,000, made it a point, particularly in the co. Suffolk, to plunder and murder the lawyers, and being incensed in a more than ordinary degree against the Chief-Justice Cavendish, his son, John, having killed the notorious Wat Tyler, they seized upon, and dragged him, with Sir John of Cambridge, prior of Bury, into the market-place of that town, and there caused both to be beheaded. The younger son of the judge,

SIR JOHN CAVENDISH, Esquire of the body to King RICHARD II., is said to be the person who actually slew Wat Tyler. "For William Walworth, mayor of London, having arrested him, he furiously struck the mayor with his dagger, but being armed, hurt him not; whereupon, the mayor, drawing his baselard, grievously wounded Wat in the neck; in which conflict, an esquire of the king's house, called John Cavendish, drew his sword, and wounded him twice or thrice even unto death. For which service, Cavendish was knighted in Smithfield, and had a grant of £40 per annum from the king." The great-great-grandson of this Sir John Cavendish was

WILLIAM CAVENDISH, gentleman-usher to Cardinal Wolsey, and the faithful attendant of that celebrated churchman through all fortunes; so faithful, indeed, that after the death of the cardinal, King HENRY retained him in his own service, especially upon the grounds of his attachment to his late fallen master. In 1530, Mr. Cavendish was appointed one of the commissioners for visiting and taking the surrenders of divers religious houses, and in that year the prior and convent of Sheen surrendered their monastery to him. He had, subsequently, grants from the crown, received the honour of knighthood, and was appointed treasurer of the chamber to the king; an office which he filled in the ensuing reigns of EDWARD VI. and Queen MARY, when he was sworn of the privy-council. Lineage.

The surname of Dick is one of very great antiquity in North Britain, and it is supposed to have had the same origin as the Van Dyke (or Lord of the Dykes) in the Low Countries.

WILLIAM DE DYCK was alderman, or first magistrate, of Edinburgh, 1396, before the institution of the office of lord-provost, and from him descended

JAMES DICK, who was designated in a charter under the great seal, dated Jan. 1539, Merchant-Burgess of Arbroath; this James left a son, ALEXANDER DICK, who resided chiefly upon his landed property in the Orkneys; and after the Reformation, being a person of knowledge and learning, was appointed provost of the cathedral church of Orkney. He d. in 1580, and was s. by his only son,

JOHN DICK, a merchant of great eminence, who was s. by an only son,

SIR WILLIAM DICK. This gentleman, adopting from his youth the profession of commerce, became one of the most eminent bankers in Scotland, and acquired considerable wealth, even before the decease of his father, which appears by his advancing to the king £6000 sterling, to defray the household expenses when his majesty held a parliament in Scotland, in 1618. In 1628, he farmed the customs on wine, at £6922 sterling, and the crown rents in Orkney, at £3000 sterling per annum, and afterwards the excise. Mr. Dick was elected lord-provost of Edinburgh in 1638 and 1639; and after receiving the honour of knighthood in 1646, was created a Baronet of Nova Scotia. Sir William was fined by the parliamentarians, as a malignant, in no less a sum than £64,934; and afterwards coming to London to demand payment of moneys he had previously advanced upon government security, he was thrown into prison by the usurper CROMWELL, and d. at Westminster, 19 Dec. 1655, when the baronetcy passed to his grandson, but was not, we believe, assumed by that gentleman. The 4th son of Sir William,

ALEXANDER DICK, had already received from his father, in patrimony, the lands of Heug, near North Berwick, and was s. at his decease by his only son,

I. JAMES DICK, a merchant of great eminence and wealth in Edinburgh, who, having purchased the lands of Priestfield, or Prestonfield, was created a Baronet of Nova Scotia, 2 March, 1677, under the title of Sir James Dick, of Prestonfield. Sir James came from London, in 1682, with the Duke of York, and was with his royal highness in the Gloucester man-of-war, when that vessel struck upon a sand-bank. He was one of the few who took to the long-boat, (the prince and Mr. Churchill, afterwards the Great Duke of Marlborough, effecting their escape in another boat,) and so saved his life, whilst several persons of the first rank who remained in the ship perished. In the same year that he had this miraculous escape, Sir James was elected lord-provost of Edinburgh, and again in 1683. He m. Anne, dau. of William Paterson, Esq. of Drumure, co. Fife, by whom he had several children, but none to attain maturity, save one, Janet, who m. Sir William Cuninghame, Bart. of Caprington. Sir James being thus deprived of male issue, made an entail of his estates of Prestonfield and Corstorphine, in 1699, "to himself and the heirs male of his body; which falling, to the second and younger sons successively, of his dau., Janet, by the said Sir William Cuninghame," &c. He also got a Nova Scotia Baronetcy from Queen ANNE, 22 March, 1707, settling the dignity to go according to the entail of his estate. Sir James d. in 1728, and was s. in his estates by his aforesaid dau., to whom s. and to the baronetcy, her son,

II. SIR ALEXANDER DICK, (paternally Cuninghame,) of Prestonfield. This gentleman, previously to the decease of his brother, had studied medicine, and practised with great repute in the county of Pembroke, as Doctor Alexander Cuninghame. In the year 1756, he was unanimously chosen president of the royal college of Edinburgh; and for seven years afterwards successively had the same high honour conferred upon him; at his retirement, the fellows, as a testimony of the sense which they had entertained of his eminent services, hung up a portrait of the ex-president in their hall, a mark of distinction never previously bestowed on any member whatsoever. Sir Alexander m. 1st, in 1736, his cousin, Janet, dau. of Alexander Dick, Esq., by whom he had three daus.; and 2ndly, in 1762, Mary, eldest dau. of David Butler, Esq., of co. Family of Cunningham of Caprington.

This family is of very great antiquity in North Britain. According to Camden, the Cunnynghames came originally into Scotland from England, with King MALCOLM CANMORE; and he is probably correct, for we find them settled in the shire of Ayr very soon after the time of that monarch. Frederick Van Bussan, a learned Norwegian, who wrote an account of several Scottish families, says, that one Malcolm, son of Friskin, assisted MALCOLM, prince of Scotland, (afterwards King MALCOLM CANMORE,) to make his escape from the tyranny of MACBETH, who had murdered his father, DUNCAN; and being hotly pursued, he took shelter in a barn, where Malcolm concealed the prince by forking straw over him. The prince eventually made his escape into England, still attended by his faithful Malcolm. Prince MALCOLM was no sooner in possession of his kingdom, after his victory over MACBETH, than he rewarded his preserver by the thanedom of Cunnynghame, from which his posterity assumed their surnames, and took a sheaf-fork for their arms, with "Over fork over" for their motto.

ROBERT DE CUNNINGHAME, of Kilmaurs, (eldest son of Warnebalde de Cunningham, de Kilmaurs, co. Ayr,) m. in 1163, RICHENDA, only dau. of Sir Humphrey de Berkeley, of Gairtully, in Scotland, and was s. by his son,

SIR ROBERT CUNNINGHAME, of Kilmaurs, who swore fealty to EDWARD I.; but declaring afterwards for ROBERT BRUCE, had a charter from that monarch of the superiority of the lands of Lambrachtoun and Grugere, in Cunningham, to be holden of the king, as Alan la Suche and William de Ferrers held the same. He d. in 1336, and was s. by his elder son,

SIR WILLIAM CUNNINGHAME, of Kilmaurs, who had, by his first wife,

WILLIAM (Sir), continuator of the line of Kilmaurs, and grandfather of ALEXANDER CUNNINGHAM, of Kilmaurs, who was created EARL OF GLENCAIRN, in May, 1488, and fell the next month at Bannockburn.

Sir William m. 2ndly, ELEANOR BRUCE, Countess of Carrick, and was created, in her right, EARL OF CARRICK: by this lady he appears to have had no issue; and upon his lordship's decease, the Earldom of Carrick reverted to the crown. His 2nd son,

THOMAS CUNNINGHAM, was of Braidhead; and dying in 1285, was s. by his son,

ADAM CUNNINGHAM, who m. a dau. of Sir Duncan Wallace, the heiress of Caprington; and dying in 1431, was s. by his son,

This William Cunningham was one of the commissioners for the Covenanters in 1639. He was s. at his decease by his son,

I. SIR JOHN CUNNINGHAM, of Lambrughton and Caprington, who was created a Baronet of Nova Scotia 19 Sept. 1669. This gentleman, a very eminent lawyer, was appointed to plead against the Duke of Lauderdale, before CHARLES II. in council, and succeeded in establishing the mis-government of that nobleman. He m. Margaret, dau. of William Murray, of Polmaise and Touchadam, co. Stirling, by whom he had two sons, WILLIAM, his heir, and John, a distinguished lawyer, and one dau. He d. in 1684, and was s. by his elder son,

III. SIR JOHN. This gentleman, who was esteemed one of the most learned and polished personages of the period in which he lived, spent most of his time in literary retirement at his castle of Caprington, (a seat which is said to have belonged to the great Sir William Wallace, and was even then considered ancient.) He is reported to have read over once every year, for the last thirty years of his life, Homer and Ariosto; he was blessed with constant good health, and his faculties continued unimpaired to the last. Sitting at supper, at Caprington, 30 Nov. 1777, with his usual cheerfulness, he was seized with a fit of apoplexy, fell back in his chair, and calmly expired, in the 82nd year of his age. Sir John m. in 1749, Lady Elizabeth Montgomery, eldest dau. of Alexander, 9th Earl of Eglinton, and had two sons,

Owing to certain restrictions in the entail of Prestonfield, the baronet is obliged to retain solely the surname of DICK, otherwise he would add that of CUNINGHAM, originally KONIGHAM, and he contemplates doing so by the aid of parliament.

Lineage.

The original surname of this ancient family is said to have been TILTON, assumed from their residence at Tilton, co. Leicester; and the alteration is supposed to have taken place in 1256, when that abode was abandoned for Digby co. Lincoln.

In nearly two centuries afterwards, A.D. 1434, we find EVERARD DIGBY, Esq., filling the office of high-sheriff of the co. of Rutland, and representing that shire in parliament. He fell at the battle of Towton, in 1440, fighting under the banner of the unfortunate HENRY VI. He m. Jaqueta, dau. and co-heir of Sir John Ellys, of Devonshire, and left (with one dau.) seven sons, of whom the three eldest were,

EVERARD (Sir), Lord of Tilton and Drystoke, ancestor of the celebrated SIR KENELM DIGBY, Knt., one of the most faithful adherents of the royal cause in the civil war, and an exile, in consequence, during CROMWELL'S usurpation. This ornament of England, as he has been styled, wrote several learned books, was a great benefactor to the Bodleian library, by presenting it, 1 1633, with a large collection of MSS., recovered the reputation of his family, and rendered it famous throughout the Christian world. He returned to England in 1661, was appointed one of the council on the first settlement of the Royal Society; and d. at his house in Covent Garden, 11 June, 1665. He m. the renowned beauty, Venetia, dau. and co-heir of Sir Edward Stanley, K.B. of Tonge Castle, co. V. SIR ALEXANDER, who m. Lady Henriette Cunningham, sister to the 15th and last Earl of Glencairn,* and had an only son, ALEXANDER, and two daus., Elizabeth and Mary, whose melancholy fate is thus recorded:—"June 22nd, 1795.—The two Misses Don, dau. of Sir Alexander Don, Bart., accompanied by Miss Agnes Wilson, and Miss Jesse Ramsay, went for a walk by the bridge to the island in the water of Eden. On their return home, apprehensive of being too late for dinner, they resolved to cross the water at the nearest ford, although considerably swelled by the rains, rather than go round by the bridge. Miss Don and Miss Wilson got safely through; but Miss M. Don, in following, was carried down the current, when Miss Ramsay rushed in to her assistance, but without effect. This is all that Miss Ramsay recollected; nor could she even tell how she herself was afterwards saved; for Miss Don and Miss Wilson, there is no doubt, ran in to their aid, and both shared the unfortunate fate of the younger Miss Don. The distracted state of Miss Ramsay, upon getting out of the water and missing her companions, prevented any discovery of the fatal accident, till, going to cross the Eden bridge, she saw the body of Miss M. Don floating down the river, and immediately gave the alarm, but, alas! too late." Sir Alexander was s. at his decease by his son, DONEGAL, MARQUESS AND EARL OF, (George-Hamilton Chichester,) Earl of Belfast, Viscount Chichester, and Baron of Belfast, in the peerage of Ireland; Baron Fisherwick, of Fisherwick, co.

* His lordship's kindness to Robert Burns, and the beautiful "Lament" of the poet on the earl's decease, have added new lustre to the name of Glencairn. (For a detailed history of the noble house of Glencairn, see BURKE'S Extinct and Dormant Peerage, p. 725.)

His lordship, who had been created Baron Ennishowen and Carrickfergus, in the peerage of the United Kingdom, in Aug. 1841, s. his father, as 3rd marquess, 5 Oct. 1844. He is captain of the Yeomen of the Guard, and lord-lieut. and colonel of the militia of the county of Antrim.

Lineage.

The surname of the house of Donegal was anciently written Clencester, and the family appears to have been one of eminence in the co. of Devon; quartering, according to Sir William Pole, in his MS. Survey of Devonshire, the arms of the Raleighs, the Beaumonts, the Willingtons, &c. The first who settled in Ireland was,

SIR ARTHUR CHICHESTER, Knt., 2nd son of Sir John Chichester, Knt., high-sheriff of Devonshire in 1552 and 1578, and M.P. for the same co. in 1553 and 1562, by Gertrude, dau. of Sir William Courtenay, Knt. of Powderham Castle, co. Devon, (grandson of Edward Chichester, and great-grandson of John Chichester, Esq., by Margaret, his wife, dau. and heir of Hugh Beaumont, Esq. of Youlston, co. Devon, great-grandson of Sir William Beaumont and Isabel, his wife, dau. and co-heir of Sir John Willington, of Umberleigh and Willington Court.) In 1603, he was sworn of the privy-council; and in 1604, appointed lord-deputy of Ireland, in which year he established two new circuits, sending the first justices of assize into Connaught, and reviving the circuit of Munster, which had been discontinued for more than two hundred years, so that the circuits, which had previously been confined to the English pale, thenceforward included the whole kingdom, and with such effect that, in a very short time, there were not found in all the Irish counties so many capital offenders as in the six shires of the western circuit in England. Sir Arthur, in consideration of his services, military and civil, obtained considerable grants of land in the province of Ulster, and was created Baron Chichester of Belfast, in the peerage of Ireland, 23 Feb. 1612. His lordship continued in the government of Ireland for ten years successively, and was re-appointed in July, 1613; in which year the harp of Ireland was first marshalled with the arms of England, and has since continued to be impressed upon the coin of the realm. In Nov. 1615, he retired from his high office, and was appointed, in 1616, lord-high-treasurer of Ireland. Lord Chichester chiefly resided at Carrickfergus, where he erected, in 1616, a magnificent mansion, called Joymount. In 1622, he went ambassador to the palatinate, and thence to treat of a peace with the emperor. During his residence at the imperial court, being besieged in the city of Mainz, or Mannheim, by Count Tilly, he remonstrated against the violation of the law of nations in besieging an ambassador; to which Tilly replying, that he noticed not his being an ambassador; his lordship thus answered the messenger:—"Had my master sent me with as many hundred men as he hath sent me on fruitless messages, your general should have known that I had been a soldier as well as an ambassador." His lordship m. Letitia, dau. of Sir John Perrott, sometime lord-deputy of Ireland, widow of Vaughan Blackham, Esq.; and d. in London, 19 Feb. 1624, when, leaving no issue, the barony expired, while his large estates passed to his brother,

SIR EDWARD CHICHESTER, in whose favour the peerage was revived, with the additional honour of Viscount Chichester of Carrickfergus, 1 April, 1625. His lordship m. 1st, in 1605, Anne, dau. and heir of John Copicestone, Esq. of Eggesford, co. Devon, by whom he acquired a large estate, and had two sons and a dau. He m. 2ndly, Mary, dau. of — Denham, Esq. of Wortham, in the same shire, but had no other issue. He d. in 1648, and was s. by his elder son,

ARTHUR, M.P. for the co. of Antrim in 1639; who, in consideration of his services against the rebels when Colonel Chichester, and at the express solicitation of the Marquess of Ormonde, had been elevated to the peerage of Ireland, 30 March, 1647, as EARL OF DONEGAL, with limitation of the honour to the male descendants of his father. His lordship was one of the four hostages sent by the Marquess of Ormonde, in 1647, to the English parliament, as surety for the delivery of Dublin and other garrisons to their commissioners. After the Restoration, he was governor of Carrickfergus; and in 1668, his lordship established a mathematical lecture in the University of Dublin. He m. 1st, Dorcas, dau. of John Hill, Esq. of Honley, co. Warwick, by whom he had an only dau., Mary, who m. John St. Leger, Esq. The earl m. 2ndly, Lady Mary Digby, dau. of John, 1st Earl of Bristol, but by that lady he had no surviving issue; and 3rdly, Letitia, only surviving dau. of Sir William Hickee, Bart. of Rookshot, and by her left one surviving dau., Anne, who m. 1st, John Butler, Ear Gowran, and 2ndly, Francis Aunger, Earl of Longford, but had no issue. The Earl of Donegal d. 18 March, 1674, when his honours devolved, according to the limitation, upon his nephew,

SIR ARTHUR CHICHESTER, as 2nd earl, (eldest son of the Hon. John Chichester, by Mary, youngest dau. of Roger Jones, Viscount Ranelagh.) His lordship m. Jane, dau. of John Itchingham, of Dunbrody, co. Wexford, and was s. by his eldest son,

ARTHUR, 3rd earl. This nobleman, having distinguished himself in the military service of his own country, was appointed, by the Prince of Hesse, in 1704, major-gen. of the Spanish forces, and fell, 10 April, 1706, at Fort Monjuich. His lordship's 2nd lady (by the first, Lady Barbara Boyle, he had no surviving issue) was Lady Catherine Forbes, dau. of Arthur, Earl of Granard, upon whom the following lines were written by Swift:

"Unerring heaven, with bounteous hand,
Has form'd a model for your land,
Whom love endow'd with every grace—
The glory of the Grandeur race;
Now destined by the powers divine
The blessing of another line.
Then, would you paint a matchless damo
Whom you'd consign to endless fame.
Invoke not Cytherea's aid,
Nor borrow from the blue-eyed maia,
Nor need you on the Graces call;
Take qualities from Donegal."

By this lady he had two sons and six daus.; three of the latter, Jane, Frances, and Henrietta, were unfortunately burnt to death in the house of Belfast, consumed by the carelessness of a servant: His lordship was s. by his elder son,

ARTHUR, 4th earl; at whose decease, without issue, in 1757, the honours devolved upon his nephew,

ARTHUR, 5th earl, b. in 1739, (eldest son of the Hon. John Chichester, M.P. for Belfast in 1745, by Elizabeth, eldest dau. of Sir Richard Newdigate, Bart. of Arbury, Warwickshire;) who was created a British peer, by the title of Baron Fisheroick, of Fisheroick, co. Stafford, 3 July, 1790; and advanced in the Irish peerage, 27 June, 1791, to the dignities of Earl of Belfast and MARQUESS OF DONEGAL. His lordship m. 1st, in 1761, Anne, eldest dau. of James, 5th Duke of Hamilton, by Elizabeth, dau. and heir of Edward Spencer, Esq. of Rendlesham, co. Suffolk, and by her (who d. in 1780) had issue,

SIR JOHN STEWART, Bart. of Grandtully, (brother and successor of Sir George Stewart, of Balcaskie, who inherited the estate of Grandtully, and 2nd son of Sir Thomas Stewart, of Balcaskie, created a Baronet of Nova Scotia, 2 Jan. 1683, m. for his second wife,

THE LADY JANE DOUGLAS, only dau. of James, 2nd Marquess of Douglas, by whom he had two sons, (twins), Sholto, the younger, who d. in infancy; and

ARCHIBALD STEWART, b. 10 July, 1748. This gentleman, upon the demise of his uncle, Archibald, Duke of Douglas, without issue, 21 July, 1761, (when the dukedom expired,) was returned heir of line and provision to that nobleman; but the Duke of Hamilton, who had inherited his grace's Marquisate of Douglas, disputing his return, on the ground of Mr. Stewart's birth being surreptitious, and the Scotch courts determining in favour of Hamilton, an appeal was made to the House of Lords, which reversed the Scottish judgment, 27 Feb. 1769. This suit (known so well by the name of the "Douglas cause") made a noise all over Europe, and is one of the most extraordinary ever litigated.* Mr. Stewart becoming thus entitled to the estates, assumed the surname and arms of "DOUGLAS," and was elevated to the peerage as BARON DOUGLAS of Douglas Castle, 9 July, 1790. Frances-Elizabeth, m. in 1826, to William Moray-Stirling, Esq. of Ardoch, N.B.

Mary-Sidney, m. in 1821, to Robert Douglas, Esq. of Strathany.

* Sir John Stewart asserted that he had twin sons by the Lady Jane Douglas, born at the house of a Madame le Brun, 10 July, 1748, in the Fauxbourg St. Germain, at Paris, her ladyship being then in her 51st year. One of these children, Sholto, died an infant, and against the other, ARCHIBALD STEWART, inheriting the estates of his maternal uncle, Archibald, Duke of Douglas, on that nobleman's decease, 21 July, 1761, to whom he was returned heir of line and provision, the guardians of James-George, (the minor,) Duke of Hamilton, instituted a suit-at-law, and the Scotch courts determined in favour of his grace. From the decision an appeal was made to the House of Lords, which eventually reversed it, and confirmed Sir Archibald in the possession of the Douglas estates. One of the guardians of the duke and institutors of the suit, Sir Andrew Stuart, subsequently published, in Jan. 1773, some very strong letters, addressed to Lord Mansfield, arraigning the conduct of his lordship during the progress of this celebrated litigation, and maintaining the rectitude of the Scottish decision.

DOUGLAS.

DOUGLAS, SIR ROBERT, of Glenberrie, co. Kincardine, b. 19 July, 1837; s. as 3rd bart., at the decease of his father, 1 Nov. 1843.

Lineage.

If a long line of illustrious ancestors, distinguished by the highest titles of honour, and connected with the most august houses in Europe, can add importance to a name, there is not one in the empire more dignified than that of Douglas. The family has been connected with the first nobles of Scotland, England, and France; and it has intermarried no less than eleven times with the royal houses of Scotland, and once with that of England. The traditional, but probably fabulous, account of the origin of the house is, that about the year 770, in the reign of SOLVATINUS, King of the Scots, one Donald Bene, of the Western Isles, having invaded the Scottish territory, and routed the royal army, a man of rank and figure came seasonably, with his friends and followers, to the king's assistance, who then renewed the conflict, and obtained a complete victory over the invader. The king being desirous of seeing the person who accomplished for him so important a service, that individual was pointed out to the monarch, by his colour or complexion, in these words of the old Gaelic or Celtic language, Sholto du Glas; in English, "Behold the black or swarthy-coloured man;" from which, the story goes, he was named Sholto the Douglas. The king rewarded this hero with grants of lands in the co. of Lanark, which were denominated Douglas; and hence the family surname. This Sholto is said to have left two sons: Hugh, ancestor of the Douglasses, in Scotland; and William, progenitor of the Scotti Douglassii, in Italy.

THE HON. SIR WILLIAM DOUGLAS, of Glenberrie, 2nd son of Archibald, 5th, and commonly called the Great Earl of Angus, obtained from his father in patrimony, the lands and barony of Braidwood, in Lanarkshire, about the year 1510; and by his marriage with Elizabeth, dau. and heir of Sir John Auchinleck, of Auchinleck, co. Ayr, acquired the lands and barony of Glenberrie, in the shire of Kincardine, which became subsequently the principal seat of the family; and in consequence of this marriage, Sir William and his posterity have ever since continued to quarter the arms of Auchinleck with their own. Sir William, with his brother, the Hon. George Douglas, fell at the fatal battle of Flodden-Field, in 1513, and left an only son,

SIR ARCHIBALD DOUGLAS, Knt., whose eldest son, SIR WILLIAM DOUGLAS, Knt. of Glenberrie, obtained a charter from JAMES V., in 1591, confirming all the ancient privileges of the family of Douglas, namely, the first vote in council, or parliament; to be the king's hereditary lieutenant; to have the leading of the van of the army in the day of battle; and to carry the crown at coronations; to himself and his heirs male. All these were again confirmed by a charter under the great seal, in 1602. Sir William, upon the demise of Archibald, the 8th Earl of Angus, without male issue, succeeded to the earldom as heir male, and became the 9th earl. WARREN-HASTINGS.

Lineage.

This family is of great antiquity both in England and France, whence it came to England at the period of the Conquest, and was created feudal Baron of Hocknorton, in Oxfordshire, and hereditary constable of Oxford Castle (anno 1067) by King WILLIAM the Conqueror. The family afterwards divided into two branches: 1st, the D'Oylys of Chislehampton, co. Oxon, who were created baronets in 1666, (whence diverged the Bucks D'Oylys, in the time of HENRY VII., one of whom was created a baronet in 1821;) and 2ndly, this family, dignified in the same manner in 1663.

SIR JOHN D'OYLY, Knt., a younger son of the Oxon house, living temp. HEN. III., founded his branch, by marrying Rose de Duston, the ward of his maternal uncle, Walter de Grey, the celebrated Archbishop of York, dau. and co-heir of Sir William de Duston, of Duston, co. Northampton, by Joane, his wife, dau. and co-heir of Thomas Noel, Lord of Raunton, co. Stafford, elder brother of Philip, ancestor of the Noels, Earls of Gainsborough. This match brought Raunton into the family; whereupon these D'Oylys adopted the Dustons' arms of stags' heads, and Raunton remained the chief seat of their descendants till the time of

EDWARD D'OYLY, Esq. of Raunton, (sixth in descent from, and heir male of Sir John,) who was returned among the Staffordshire gentry, in 1433. He m. Anne, dau. of Helming Legat, Esq., high-sheriff and escheator of Essex, temp. HEN. IV., (granddan. maternally of Sir Thomas Mandeville, of Black Notley, in Essex,) and sister and heiress, ex parte paterna, of Thomas Legat, Esq., lord of Pondhall, in Hadleigh parish, co. Suffolk, who fought at Agincourt, temp. HEN. V. By this match, Pondhall became the chief possession, and thence the chief seat of the family, whither it removed about 1447. Edward and Anne were grand-parents of

EDWARD D'OYLY, Esq. of Pondhall, co. Suffolk, who m. Anne, dau. of Sir Thomas Cotton, of Landwade, co. Cambridge, (ancestor of the present Baronet Cotton,) grand-dau. maternally of Sir Philip Wentworth, of Nettlested, (ancestor of the Earls of Cleveland,) by his wife, a Clifford, descended, through Percy and Mortimer, from the royal family. Their son and heir,

SIR HENRY D'OYLY, of Pondhall, knighted at EDWARD VI.'s coronation, was thrice married; and by his first wife, Jane Ellwyn, au heiress, (a connexion of his mother's,) had two sons, HENRY, his heir; and Thomas D'Oyly, D.C.L., F.S.A., progenitor of D'Oyly of Overbury Hall.

HENRY D'OYLY, Esq., son and heir, m. his stepmother's dau., Anne Whyte, heiress of the Whytes of Shottisham, co. Norfolk, whose ancestor, Sir John le Whyte, was slain at the siege of Roan, in Normandy, temp. HEN. V. By her he acquired Shottisham, settled there about 1559, and had several children. His eldest,

EDMOND D'OYLY, Esq. of Shottisham and Pondhall, d. in 1613, and was buried with heraldic pomp. He was twice married. His 2nd wife was Catharine, dau. of Sir Henry Neville, of Billingbere, co. Berks, privy-councillor to HEN. VIII., progenitor of Lord Braybrook, and brother of Lord Abergavenny, (and directly descended from Ralph Neville, Earl of Westmorland, by King EDW. III.'s grand-dau.,) and grandniece, maternally, of Sir Thomas Gresham, founder of the Royal Exchange. By her he had several children, inter alios,

- I. SIR HENRY, his heir.

Susan, dau. of Sir Lionel Talmache, of Helmingham, ancestor of the Earl of Dysart, by Catharine, his wife, dau. of Henry, Lord Cromwell, and his wife, Mary, dau. of John Poulett, Marquess of Winchester, and left by her an only son, EDMUND D'OYLY, Esq. of Shottisham and Pondhall, who m. He m. Mistress Margaret Randall, of Pulham, co. Norfolk, spinster, an heiress, step-dau. of Sir Robert Bacon, Bart.; and dying in 1677, left several children by her: the eldest of whom,

Sir Thomas s. to all the estates of his great-uncle, Sir Francis-Henry Drake, Bart., under that gentleman's will, dated 31 Dec. 1792. He is an officer in the army, and served throughout the greater part of the Peninsular war.

Lineage.

This family of Drake was founded by the eminent SIR FRANCIS DRAKE, one of the most eminent of the naval heroes who immortalized the reign of ELIZABETH. Born near Tavistock, in 1545, Drake attained the height he eventually achieved by his own enterprising spirit and transcendent merit alone. He had the good fortune of being allied to Sir John Hawkins, and was brought up at the expense and under the care of that gallant seaman. When eighteen years of age, he appears to have held the situation of purser of a ship trading to Biscay, and at twenty, he made a voyage to Guinea. The next year he had the honour of being appointed captain of the Judith, and in that capacity was in the harbour of St. Juan de Ulloa, in the Gulf of Mexico, where he behaved most gallantly in the glorious actions under Sir John Hawkins, and returned to England rich in reputation, but in nothing else. At this period, he announced his intention of making reprisals upon the King of Spain; and no sooner proclaimed the project, than hundreds volunteered to embark in it. In 1570, he made his first expedition, with two ships, the DRAGON and the SWAN; and the next year in the SWAN alone, wherein he returned safe, if not rich. And having now means sufficient to perform greater matters, he laid before the public the plan of a more important design against his enemies. This he put into execution 24 March, 1572, on which day he sailed from Plymouth, himself in the PASCHA, of seventy tons burden, and his brother, John Drake, in the SWAN, of twenty-five tons, their whole strength consisting of no more than seventy-three men and boys. With this inconsiderable force, he attacked, on the 22nd July, the town of NOMBRE DE DIOS, and took it in a few hours, by storm. Here, however, he obtained but little plunder, and was obliged, eventually, to retire to his ships, having been severely wounded in the action. His next attempt was upon VERA CRUZ, which he carried and pillaged, and in returning to his vessels fortunately fell in with a string of mules laden with plate, of which he took possession. From this successful expedition he came back to England in Aug. 1573. He subsequently served as a volunteer in Ireland, under Walter, Earl of Essex; and upon his return, was introduced by Sir Christopher Hatton to Queen ELIZABETH, when her majesty immediately took him under her protection; and he was enabled, by her royal favour, to undertake and accomplish, within three years, his celebrated voyage round the world. This famous expedition, consisting of the PELICAN, commanded by Drake himself; the ELIZABETH, Capt. John Winter; the MARYGOLD, a bark of thirty tons, Capt. John Thomas; the SWAN, a fly-boat of fifty tons, Capt. John Chester; and the CHRISTOPHER, a pinnace of fifteen tons, Capt. Thomas Moon, sailed from Plymouth, 15 Nov. 1577, and returned to the same port, 3 Nov. 1580. In a few months after leaving England, Drake committed what has been termed in gentle language, "the least commendable action of his life," but to which a much more severe description might with justice be applied. Having arrived at PORT ST. JULIAN, 18 June, he took up his abode there for two months, while he made the necessary provision for passing the Straits of Magellan. In 1588, when the Spanish armada menaced the shores of England, Sir Francis Drake was appointed vice-admiral under Charles, Lord Howard of Effingham, and had the good fortune to capture the great galleon, commanded by Don Pedro de Valdez, the reputed projector of the enterprise, by which himself and his crew divided 55,000 ducats. Sir Francis Drake m. Elizabeth, (settlement after marriage dated 25 Aug. 1595,) only dau. and heir of Sir George Sydenham, of Combe Sydenham, co. Devon, but had no issue. Lineage.

MAURICE DRUMMOND, a native of Hungary, accompanied Edgar Atheling and his two sisters to Scotland, in the year 1066. One of these ladies, MARGARET, the elder, m. Malcolm Canmore, and under her auspices Drummond acquired large possessions in Scotland, and was the progenitor of the noble family of Drummond of Perth, of which Drummond of Hawthornden is a cadet. Late in the fourteenth century, William Drummond, a younger son of the family, and brother to Annabella, the Queen of ROBERT III. of Scotland, m. Elizabeth, dau. and one of the co-heiresses of Sir William Airth, of Airth, and by this marriage acquired the barony of Carnock, in Stirlingshire. The elder branch of the line of Carnock is reputed to have terminated in the person of Sir John Drummond, who sold the Carnock estate to Sir Thomas Nicolson, and afterwards fell in the battle of Alford, in 1645, fighting under the banner of the celebrated Marquess of Montrose. John Drummond (afterwards Sir John), 2nd son of Sir Robert, of Carnock, purchased the barony, and founded the family of Hawthornden.

It appears from a charter in the possession of the family, in favour of Eleana de Abernethy, filia natu maxima de Laurentii Abernethy, militis de Hawthornden, that the barony of Hawthornden belonged, in the year 1388, to the Abernethys, by whom it was sold to the family of Douglas, and by them sold to Drummond of Carnock, with whom it has since remained. The families of Abernethy and Drummond became united by the marriage of Bishop Abernethy and Barbara Drummond.

The most remarkable member of this family was William Drummond, b. in 1885, (son of Sir John Drummond, of Hawthornden,) and unquestionably the most celebrated poet of his day. His "History of the Five Jameses, Kings of Scotland," is also well known; though perhaps it is as a poet, rather than an historian, that he is indebted for his literary fame. It is an historical fact, that the famous Ben Jonson travelled from London to Scotland on foot, solely for the purpose of visiting Drummond at his beautiful and romantic seat at Hawthornden. An account of this visit is recorded in Jonson's, as well as Drummond's, works.

ROBERT FORBES, Esq. of Corse, in the co. of Banff, son of John Forbes, of Corse, and a cadet of the Pittalogo family, m. Anne, dau. of John Abernethy Esq. of Cosbie, and sister of Bishop William Abernethy-Drummond, heir male of the Abernethys of Saltoun, and was father of, occasion Mr. Forbes assumed the additional surname and arms of DRUMMOND; by this lady he had an only surviving dau.

MARGARET-ANNE FORBES-DRUMMOND, who m. Francis, eldest son of the late James Walker, Esq. of Dalry, in Mid-Lothian, (a descendant of the ancient family of Walker, of St. Fort, Fifeshire,) by Jane Hay, his wife, dau. of Richard Hay-Newton, Esq. of Newton, grandson of John, Marquess of Tweeddale, and the Lady Jane Maitland, his wife, only child of John, Duke of Lauderdale. On his marriage, Francis assumed the surname and arms of DRUMMOND.

Mr. Forbes-Drummond was created a Baronet 27 Feb. 1828, with remainder to his son-in-law above mentioned, and dying 28 May, 1829, was s. according to the limitation, by,

II. SIR FRANCIS-WALKER DRUMMOND, b. in 1781; m. 4 Jan. 1810, Margaret-Anne, only surviving child of Sir John Forbes-Drummond, Bart., and had issue,

Sir George, who was formerly lieut.-col. of the West Essex militia, and represented the borough of Lymington in parliament, inherited, as 2nd baronet, at the decease of father, in 1822.

Lineage.

The ancient family of Duckett, Duket, or Dukcett, is lineally descended from

I. RICHARD DUKET, who was a judge of the 9th of HENRY III. A.D. 1224, and acted as such for the counties of Cambridge, Huntingdon, Bedford, (of which he was archdeacon), Buckingham, Norfolk, Suffolk, Northampton, and Rutland. He held the manor of Fillingham, in the county of Lincoln; (see Dugdale's Origines Judiciales, Chronica Series, p. 8; Burn's History of Westmoreland and Cumberland, vol. i. p. III. 114; and Foss's Judges of England, p. 193, vol. II.) He m. Beatrice, by whom he had William, a commoner, 16th of EDWARD I. (A.D. 1289), and,

II. STEPHEN, who was the father of

III. RICHARD, who was the father of

IV. HUGH, the father of

V. JOHN, (living temp. RICHARD II., A.D. 1378,) who m. Margery, the dau. and heir of William de Windesore, with whom he obtained the manor of Grayrigg,* and other possessions in Westmoreland, which his descendants enjoyed for twelve generations following. By Margery, the heiress of Windesore, John had a son and heir,

VI. RICHARD DUCKETT, Lord of Grayrigg, Eversham, and Morland, in Westmoreland, who m. a daughter of Sir Richard Redman, of Over Levins, Knt., and by her had issue,

* The manor of Grayrigg belonged to the Barons of Kendal, and was granted by William de Lancastr (or Talebois) Baron of Kendal, to Alexander de Windesore, son and heir of William de Windesore, on his marriage with Agnes de Talebois, his daughter, by Gundreda, whose first husband was Roger de Newburgh, Earl of Warwick, and who was the dau. of Gundreda and William, Earl of Warren, and grand-dau. of King WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR, by Maud, dau. of Baldwin, Count of Flanders. The deed of grant runs thus: "Willelmus de Lancastr, omnibus amicis et omnibus probis hominibus suis, tam futuris quam presentibus, salutem et amorem. Sciatis me concessisse, et cum assensu Willelmi de Lancastr, filii mei et haeredis praesenti chartâ confirmasse, Alexandro de Windesore, simul cum Agnete filiâ meâ, et haeredibus suis, in liberum maritagium, quicquid haec in Haversham, Grayrigge, et Morlande, cum omnibus pertinentiis suis; concessi etiam praefatis Alexandro de Windesore, simul cum Agnete filiâ meâ, et haeredibus eorum, libertatem firmandi stagna, et molendine super meum dominicum, ubicunque locum competentem inveniunt ad usum suum; ac etiam libertatem assartandi, et faciendi, et habendi assarta sua in boscis suis ubicunque voluerint infra divisas suas. Quare volo, quatenus praenominati Alexander et Agnes filia mea, et haeredes sui habeant et teneant praedictas terras et praenominatas libertates, cum omnibus assamentiis, de me et haeredibus meis, sicut liberum maritagium, in feodo et haereditate, bene et in pace, libere et quiete, et honorifice, et plenarie, in bosco et plano, in pratis et pasturis, in visis et semitis, in mossis et mariscis et montanis, in molendinis et stagnis, in pannagis et assarti; et in omnibus libertatibus, sicut haec chartâ meâ confirmavi." (Rawlinson.) [The arms of De Lancastr were, gules, a lion, passant, or.] This said Alexander had a son, William de Windesore, who was a juror in several inquisitions post mortem in the reign of King EDWARD I.; which William had a son, Alexander, who levied a fine of the manors of Grayrigg and Morland, in the 11th year of the reign of EDWARD II., A.D. 1317. This last Alexander had a son, William de Windesore, who was knight of the shire for Westmoreland, 28 EDWARD III., A.D. 1354, and was sheriff of Cumberland in the 41st and 42nd of the same king. By the inquisition post mortem of Joan de Coupland aforesaid, in 49 EDWARD III., A.D. 1375, he appears to have held of the said Joan, the manors of Eversham, Morland, and Grayrigg. Margery, the daughter of William, married, as above, John Duckett. The arms of Windesore were — Gules, a saltire, argent, between twelve cross-crosslets, or.

VII. SIR RICHARD DUCKETT, of Grayrigg, Eversham, and Morland, Knt., who m. Mabel, dau. of Sir Roger Bellingham, of Burneshead, Knt., and in the 5th year of the reign of HENRY IV. (A.D. 1403) represented the county of Westmoreland in parliament. He had issue, THOMAS, of whom hereafter; Alice, who m. Wm. Stanley, Esq. of Dalegarth, co. Cumberland (see BURKE'S Landed Gentry); and Andrew Duckett, at whose intercession, Margaret of Anjou, wife of HENRY VI., obtained licence of the same king to build Queen's College, Cambridge, in 1448, and purchased lands of the yearly value of £200 for the endowment thereof, dedicating the same to the honour of St. Margaret and St. Bernard, but she died, and left it unperfected. The same Andrew Duckett was rector of St. Botolph's in Cambridge, some time principal of St. Bernard's Hostel, and the first president of Queen's College, Cambridge. He was formerly a friar, and had gathered of divers persons so much money as bought a piece of ground, called Goose Green, whereon the college stands. Afterwards he purchased, and gave unto this college, the same St. Bernard's Hostel, and by his own money, and help of others, bought certain other tenements, and (as Stow saith) built the college: he gave much in lands and moneys, procuring gifts from diverse great personages.*

VIII. SIR THOMAS DUCKETT, of Grayrigg, m. Elizabeth, dau. of Thomas Middleton, Esq. of Middleton Hall, by Isabel, dau. of Sir Richard Musgrave, of Hartley Castle. This Thomas espoused the cause of the Lancastrians, and was slain at the battle of Edgecote field, in the reign of King HENRY VI. He had issue,

IX. RICHARD DUCKETT, Esq., who m. Eleanor, dau. of William Harrington, who had considerable possessions both in Lancashire and the barony of Kendal. He had issue,† Richard; William; Robert; Anne, wife of Thomas Wessington, of Holland, Westmoreland; and Mabel, wife of John Whittington, of Berwick. The second son,

X. WILLIAM DUCKETT, of Flintham, in the county of Nottingham, Esq., m. a dau. and heir of — Redman, of Harwood, by whom he had issue, Lyonel and John Lyonel: the eldest son, engaged in commerce, afterwards became Sir Lyonel Duckett, Knt. and lord mayor of London 1573.‡

* Vide Speed's History of England, p. 1663. 4.

† Richard Duckett, the eldest son, married Agnes, dau. of John Fleming, Esq. of Ridal. He seems to have had a second wife of the name of Catherine Culwen. He had issue, Antony, James, Walter, Randolph, and two daus., Elizabeth, and Dorothy, the latter of whom was married to — Salkeld, of Rosgill.

Antony Duckett, Esq., son and heir of Richard, married Dorothy, one of the daughters and co-heirs of Sir Robert Bellingham, of Burneshead, and by her had issue, Richard, Charles, Jasper, William, and Gabriel. To his second wife, he married Alice, daughter of Thomas, Lord Dacre, of Gilsland, and by her had issue, Lionel, Alan, and Agnes, married to John Miller, of the Temple, London. This Lionel was fellow of Jesus College, Cambridge, and a great benefactor to that college; at which place there is a monument of him, with this inscription:

LIONELL DUCKETT, Westmorlandiensis, e generosis ortus parentibus, collegii divi Johannis olim alumnus, Academiae Cantabrigiensis quondam procurator; Sanctae Theologiae baccalaureus; et nuper hujus Collegii Jhesu senior socius. Obiit Aprilis 6^o, anno Domini 1503, aetatis sua 39.

About the year 1684, Antony Duckett, the last of this branch of the Ducketts, of Grayrigg, sold the estate to Sir John Lowther, and he and his brothers died without issue male, and the name and family in Westmoreland are now extinct.

‡ He was partner with Sir Thomas Gresham, who built the Royal Exchange, and was a man of such considerable property, that he is reported to have given the sum of 8000 marks to each of his three daughters; an enormous sum in those days, but deemed so inferior to what his known riches could have entitled him to have given, that he is said to have answered to some one, who questioned him upon it, that it was not becoming in him to give more, since his Royal mistress (Queen ELIZABETH) had only received £10,000. There is a picture of him in the possession of the present Sir George Duckett, Bart. by Hans Holbein, with a ring upon his finger, quartering the arms of Duckett, Redman, Windesore, and Mowbray. He married first, Mary, daughter of Hugh Leighton, Esq. of Leighton, in the county of Salop, by whom he had a son, George, who died young; and to his second wife, Jane, daughter of Humphrey Packington, Esq. relict of Humphrey Baskerville, by whom he had Sir Thomas Duckett, who died without issue.

* There is an account in this gentleman's own handwriting of his maternal ancestor, Lady Hopton (living temp. HENRY VIII.); the account runs thus, and is given verbatim: "I will give you as good an account as I can remember of our wise and good grandmother—Hopton who I think was one Hall's daughter of Devonshire without Title and had an elder brother without child who said to his younger brother's wife (who was then with child) if she would come to his house and lye in he would give his Estate to the child if a daughter & if a son it should fare never the worse so she had my grandmother and he bred her up & marry'd her to Sir Arthur Hopton of Somersetshire who had 4000l. p. annuum and she as much, by him she had 18 children, 10 daughters marry'd whose names were Lady Bacon (wife of Sir Nathaniel Bacon K.B. of Stiffkey, co. Norfolk, temp. QUEEN ELIZABETH), Lady Smith, Lady Moreton, Lady Banister & Lady Fittplace Bingham, Basket Cole, (4 last of Dorset) Thomas & Eyrle. Their daughters and their children have made a numerous company of relations."

"The Duke of Richmond (Extinct Peerage) and Lord Maynard marry'd our Aunt Banister's two daughters & heiresses (see 2nd Baron Maynard, A.D. 1639—BURKE'S Peerage), Fittplace which was also Lord Jones his daughter an heiress marry'd Lord Lumley, now Scarborough, Coles heir to Popham of Wilts & Hungerford & Warrford marry'd Jones & some Mackworth & Wyndham & in Wales some Morgan & Cornish & Kern and many others that I have forgot. The sons were Sir Tho. Sir Arthur & Robert. Robert had one son which was Lord Hopton of great worth who marry'd Lt. Lawm's widow & had no child so the estate went to the daughters but our grandfather Hopton having so good an estate thought he might live as high as he pleased and not run out, but one day he was going from home, but cou'd not go, He told his Lady she would be left in a great deal of trouble for the great debts he had made on his estate and that he knew he should live but a few days and would not dye in peace to think what affliction he should leave her in, She desired him to be no ways concerned about his debts, for he owed not a penny to any one so died of a gangren in his toe in a few days. Now she had set up an Iron-work & paid all she owed unknown to him & she marry'd all her daughters to great estates and families. Lady Hopton's manner of living was very grand, she had 100 in her family, she rose at 6 o'clock herself went to her Iron work & came back at 9 then went with all her family to prayers and after dinner she & her children & great grandchildren went to their several works with her in the dining-room where she spun the finest sheets you have: every year she had all her children and grandchildren with her at her house & before they went away would know if any little or great animosities were between any of them, if so would never let them go till they were reconciled, each of her daughters had a pair of these sheets without a seam," (and a pair of them are in possession of the present Sir Geo. * Of the Scottish family of BLACKWOOD, the celebrated ADAM BLACKWOOD, privy-councillor to MARY Queen of Scots, was a distinguished member. Faithfully and zealously attached to his mistress, this eminent person published, in 1687, his "Martyrdom of MARY STUART, Queen of Scotland," written with all that bitterness of resentment which such an act of flagrant injustice could not but excite in a man of feeling and spirit, who was at once deprived of his sovereign, his friend, and his benefactress. Having departed from his native shores in disgust, for France, he became, and continued for many years, a counsellor or senator of the presidial court at Poitiers, where he died in 1613, leaving ample proofs of his talents as a civilian, a poet, and a divine, in his writings, which were collected and published at Paris, by Sebastian Cromeoisy, in 1644.

Amongst the most eminent of the Anglo-Norman families in Ireland is that of BUTLER; at its head stands the illustrious house of ORMONDE, while it boasts, besides, no less than four extant earldoms, the attainted Viscounty of Galmoye, and the barony of which we are now about to treat.

THOMAS LE BOTILLER, 3rd son of Theobald, (from whom the whole of the illustrious race sprang, and who flourished temp. HENRY III.,) having married Synolda, dau. and heir of William le Petyt, Lord of Dunboyne and Mullingar, was summoned to parliament as a Baron, 17 EDWARD II. His son and heir,

PETER or PIERCE LE BOTILLER, Lord Le Botiller, was direct ancestor of

Lineage.

This family, which derived its surname from the Barony of Cochrane, co. Renfrew, is of great antiquity in North Britain; and, under the name of Blair, was of baronial rank many centuries previously to its attaining the honour of the peerage.

WARDEN DE COCHRANE, in the reign of ALEXANDER III., was witness to the grant made by Dungal, the son of Swaine, to Walter Cumming, Earl of Montleith, of sundry lands in the co. of Argyll; and his successor,

WILLIAM DE COCHRANE, performed homage to EDWARD I. From this person descended

WILLIAM DE COCHRANE, who erected, from the foundation, the ancient seat of Cochrane, and ornamented it with extensive plantations. This gentleman left by his wife, Margaret, dau. of Sir Robert Montgomery, of Skelmorlie, co. Ayr, an only dan.,

ELIZABETH COCHRANE, who m. Alexander, younger son of John Blair, of that ilk, (for pedigree of BLAIR OF BLAIR, see BURKE'S Landed Gentry), which

ALEXANDER BLAIR assumed the surname and arms of Cochrane. Of this marriage there were seven sons and three daus. The eldest son,

SIR JOHN COCHRANE, a col. in the army of CHARLES I., dying without issue, was s. by his brother,

SIR WILLIAM COCHRANE, Knt. of Cowdon, who was elevated to the peerage, 27 Dec. 1647, as Baron Cochrane of Dundonald; and advanced, 12 May, 1669, to the dignity of EARL OF DUNDONALD; being at the same time created Lord Cochrane of Paisley and Ochiltree, with remainder, in default of male issue, to the eldest of his heirs female, without division, who should bear or assume the name and arms of Cochrane, and in failure, to his heirs general. His lordship m. Eupheme, dau. of Sir William Scott, of Ardross, co. Fife, by whom he had, (with a dau., Grizel, m. to George, 10th Lord Ross),

1. WILLIAM, Lord Cochrane, who m. Lady Catherine Kennedy, 2nd dau. of John, 6th Earl of Cassilis; and dying before his father, left,

2 William, of Kilmarnock, m. Lady Grizel Graham, 3rd dau. of James, Marquess of Montrose; and dying in 1717, left, with five daus., one son,

THOMAS, who inherited as 6th earl.

3 Thomas, of Rolskelly, m. Diana, dau. and heir of Sir David Cunynghame, Bart. of Robertland; and d. s. p. in 1694.

4 Alexander, of Bolinshaw, the male line of whom ceased in 1710.

6 Helen, m. to John, 15th Earl of Sutherland.

7 Jane, m. 1st, to John, 1st Viscount Dundee; and 2ndly, to William, 3rd Viscount Kilsyth.

II. John (Sir), of Ochiltree. This gentleman having been concerned in the Rye-house plot, was compelled to seek an asylum in Holland during the remainder of the reign of CHARLES II.; but afterwards invading Scotland (1665) under Argyll, his estates were confiscated; and being made prisoner with his son, John, he was ignominiously conducted by the hangman, bound and bareheaded, to the Tolbooth of Edinburgh. His life was, however, spared, and his lands were restored to him after the Revolution. Sir John m. Margaret, dau. of Sir William Strickland, of Boynton, co. York, (one of CAOMWELL'S lords of parliament,) and was s. by his elder son, DUNLOP.

DUNLOP, SIR JAMES, of Dunlop, co. Ayr; b. 27 Aug. 1830; an officer Coldstream Guards; s. his father, as 2nd bart., 3 April, 1839.

Lineage.

Of the establishment of the family of DUNLOP of that ilk, we have no authentic accounts. The first is in the reign of ALEXANDER III., when

DOM. GUILIELMUS DE DUNLOP appears as one of those who sate on an inquest to settle a dispute between Dom. Godfrey de Ross and the borough of Irvine, anno 1260. In 1296,

NIEL FITZ-ROBERT DE DUNLOP signed the Ragman's Roll. In 1381,

JAMES DUNLOP was in possession of Dunlop, as appears from an old valuation of the county of Ayr. He was s. by JOHN DE DUNLOP, who had a charter from Hugh de Blair, dated 1407.

ALEXANDER DUNLOP, mentioned by Rymer, as Alexander Dunlop, of that ilk, in the reign of JAMES I., and in the early part of JAMES II., appears to have been s. by

CONSTANTYNE DUNLOP, as there is a charter in the Dumbarton Rolls, from Constantyne Dunlop, of that ilk, to his son, Alexander Dunlop, of the lands of Hanthall, dated 1471. This son, his successor,

ALEXANDER DUNLOP, of Dunlop, was father of

CONSTANTYNE DUNLOP, whose retour as Dunlop of that ilk, is dated 1476. He was s. by his son, CONSTANTYNE DUNLOP, of that ilk, who was appointed by parliament, in 1489, among other lords (as they were termed) to collect the by-gone rents and casualties of the crown. He is also mentioned as a member of an inquest on the retour of Mathew, Earl of Lennox. Constantyne Dunlop d. in 1505, leaving (with a dau., Janet, m. to

James Stuart, sheriff of Bute, great-grandson of King ROBERT II.) a son and successor,

JOHN DUNLOP, of that ilk, whose infeoffment is not dated till 1507. This gentleman m. in 1492, Marion Douglas, and had one son, ALEXANDER, and a dau., who m. Hugh Maxwell, of Auld House. He d. in 1509, and was s. by his son, ALEXANDER DUNLOP, of that ilk, who m. Ellen Cunningham, of the house of Glencairn, and had five sons, JAMES, William, Constantyne, Robert, and Andrew; by the eldest of whom,

JAMES DUNLOP, of that ilk, he was s. at his decease in 1549. This gentleman m. Isabel, dau. of Gavin Hamilton, of Orbleston, and had two sons, JAMES and ALLAN. He was s. at his decease by the elder,

JAMES DUNLOP, Esq. of that ilk, who m. in 1574, Jean, dau. of Somerville, of Cambermathan, descended from Sir John Somerville, son of John, third Lord Somerville, and had issue,

JAMES, his heir.

John, who purchased the lands of Garnkirk.

Thomas, who m. Grizell, dau. of Cochrane, of that ilk, and from this alliance are descended the Dunlops of Househill.

The laird of Dunlop d. in 1616, and was s. by his son,

JAMES DUNLOP, Esq. of that ilk. This gentleman m. in 1614, Margaret, relict of John Campbell, Bishop of Lismore, or Argyll, and dau. of Gavin Hamilton, Bishop of Galloway, son of John Hamilton, of Orbleston, slain at the battle of Langside. By her he had a son, JAMES, who eventually succeeded. Resisting the government of CHARLES I. in its attempt to introduce episcopacy into Scotland, the laird of Dunlop, for the purpose of security, executed a deed making over his estate to his brother, John of Garnkirk. This deed was acted on in 1633, when his brother took possession, and, in five years after, made a resignation to his nephew,

JAMES DUNLOP, Esq. of that ilk, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of Alexander Cunningham, Esq. of Corsehill, by Mary, dau. of Sir Patrick Houston, of that ilk, and had issue,

ALEXANDER, his heir.

John, of whom nothing is known.

Jean, m. in 1674, to William Ralston, Esq. of Ralston.

Marion, m. to David Montgomery, Esq. of Lainshaw.

During the civil wars Dunlop appears to have acted a prominent part. He was subsequently a warm supporter of the presbyterians, and was obliged in consequence to make over a considerable portion of his estates to Lord Dundonald. From 1666 to 1667, he suffered imprisonment, but was liberated in the latter year, under a bond of 12,000 marks, notwithstanding which we find him, within a few months only, joining in the raising of the Pentland Hills. He was s. at his demise, by his elder son, ALEXANDER DUNLOP, Esq., who does not appear ever to have obtained possession of the barony of Dunlop which his father had made over to Lord Dundonald. This laird was a zealous supporter of the cause of liberty and the covenant. Upon suspicion of being concerned in the raising of Bothwell Bridge, he was arrested on the 30th July, 1685, compelled to surrender a portion of his estates, and to execute a bond for £12,000 to appear in the November following. He was indicted anew in April, 1684, when he made over to his son, John, the lands which had been settled upon him on his marriage. He emigrated soon after to America, and was appointed, in 1685, sheriff of South Carolina. He m. in 1667, Antonia, dau. and heiress of Sir John Brown, of Fordal, by Mary Scott, dau. and co-heiress of Sir John Scott, of Rossie, quartermaster-general to the army in the early part of CHARLES the First's reign. He left a son and heir,

JOHN DUNLOP, Esq., who obtained the barony of Peacock Bank and other farms from his father, in 1684; and in the following year the Earl of Dundonald resigned to him the possessions which he had acquired from his grandfather. In 1687, the laird of Dunlop, by an adjudication in his favour, recovered all his grandfather's estates, though heavily burdened by expenses and fines. He does not appear ever to have been married, and dying in 1706, was s. by his brother,

FRANCIS DUNLOP, Esq. of that ilk. This gentleman was one of those who were appointed, 26 March, 1707, to see the regalia of Scotland built up in the crown room in the castle of Edinburgh, as appears from the minute of proceedings taken at the time, and left amongst his papers. In 1715, he took an active part against the Chevalier, and was lieutenant-col., under the Earl of Kilmarnock, of a regiment of fencible cavalry then raised. Colonel Dunlop m. 1st, in 1709, Susan, only dau. and heiress of John Leckie, Esq. of Newlands, by whom he had three sons and one dau., viz.,

John, his heir.

Antonia, m. to Sir Thomas Wallace, Bart. of Craigie.

The laird of Dunlop m. 2ndly, a dau. of Sir — Kinloch, of Gilmourton, by whom he had two daus., Frances, d. unm., and Magdalene, m. to Robert Dunlop, Esq. He d. in 1748, and was s. by his son,

JOHN DUNLOP, Esq. of that ilk, who was deputed, in 1745, by the gentlemen of Ayrshire, together with Sir Thomas Wallace, of Craigie, to offer the assistance of the county to the Duke of Cumberland. He m. Frances-Anne, last surviving child of Sir Thomas Wallace, of Craigie, (by Eleanor, his wife, dau. and heiress of Agnew, of Lochryan,) and had, with five daus., five sons, viz.,

THOMAS, who s. his maternal grandfather, and assumed the surname and arms of WALLACE. He m. Eglington, dau. of Sir William Maxwell, Bart., and had a son, Gen. Sir J. - A. DUNLOP-AGNEW-WALLACE, Bart. (See that title.)

Andrew, who d. unm. in 1804. This gentleman entering into the military service of his country, served in the first American War, and attained the rank of major. He afterwards raised a regiment of horse called the Ayrshire fencible cavalry, which he commanded, until its reduction in 1800.

In 1787, he proceeded to India, as captain of the 77th regt., where he remained thirteen years; and commanded one of the assaulting columns at the storming of Seringapatam, where he was severely wounded. He returned soon after to England, and was employed at home. In 1810, having attained the rank of major-general, he was appointed to the command of a brigade, in the 5th division of Lord Wellington's army, and he remained at the head of that division during the campaign of 1811. In 1812, Gen. Dunlop was elected member for the stewardry of Kirkcudbright, as he was in the two ensuing parliaments. DUNSANDLE.

DUNSANDLE, AND CLAN CONAL, BARON, (Denis-St.-George Daly,) of Dunsandle, co. Galway, in the peerage of Ireland; one of the representative peers; s. his father, 7 Aug. 1847.

Lineage.

The family of Daly, or O'Daly, is of very ancient origin, deducing its descent from Nial Naolgialach (Nial of the nine hostages), monarch of Ireland in the 4th century, who was also common ancestor of the O'Neils of Tyrone, O'Donnells of Tyrconnell, and from whom the pedigree of this family is lineally traced in the Herald's office. Dalagh was 10th in descent from Nial, whence the name Daly, and from him also the O'Donnells are sometimes styled by the old Irish annalists, "Siol na Dalagh," or the clan of Daly. Of his descendants, there were several kings of Meath, and from thence a branch removed into Thomond, and afterwards into Connaught.

In 1578, DERMOT O'DALY, of Killymore, co. A short time before the year 1641, the lords-justices had supplied the lords of the pale with arms, but suddenly recalled them, which occasioned much discontent among the catholic lords, who, having assembled, appointed Lord Dunsany to assure the justices of their attachment and loyalty, and of their readiness to co-operate in every measure that could be conducive to the peace of the country. The lords-justices, however, took no further notice of this proffered service than by confining his lordship in the castle of Dublin, where he remained for several years; but on the restoration of CHARLES II., he again took his seat in the House of Lords, and continued to sit until 1666. This nobleman adhering to the falling fortunes of his legitimate sovereign, JAMES II., was outlawed in 1691; but being included in the treaty of Limerick, his estates were restored; neglecting, however, the forms necessary to re-establish himself in the privileges of the peerage, neither his lordship nor his immediate descendants had a seat in the House of Lords. DYMOKE OF SCRIVELSBY.

DYMOKE, SIR HENRY, Bart. of Scrivelsby Court, co. Lincoln, the Honourable the Queen's Champion; b. 5 March, 1801; m. 14 Jan. 1823, Emma, 2nd dau. of William Pearce, Esq., by whom he has an only dau., EMMA-JANE.

Sir Henry is the 17th of his family who has inherited the ancient office of Champion. He was created a Baronet in 1841.

Lineage.

This family ranks in point of antiquity, male and female, with the most ancient in the kingdom. It derives the singular office of champion from the celebrated baronial house of Marmyon, or Marmyon, with the feudal manor of Scrivelsby, to which the championship is attached.

SIR JOHN DYMOKE, Knt., (grandson of Henry Dymok, living temp. EDWARD III.,) acquired, upon marrying Margaret de Ludlow,* sole heiress of the manor of Scrivelsby, in Lincolnshire, that baronial estate and the office of king's champion. In the 46th and 47th of EDW. III., Sir John Dymoke represented, with William Marmyon, the county of Lincoln in parliament, and in the 1st RICH. II., he was again one of the knights for Lincolnshire. At the coronation of this monarch he executed the office of king's champion, and was the first person so officially employed at the coronation of an English prince. Sir John d. in the 4th of the same reign, leaving Margaret, his wife, surviving, who d. in the 2nd HENRY V., at which time Thomas, her son and heir, was sixty years of age and upwards. The said

SIR THOMAS DYMOKE, was one of those eminent persons who, immediately prior to the coronation of King HEN. IV., was made a knight of the Bath, at the Tower. On the coronation day he performed the office of champion, as deputy to his mother, then living: and again at the coronation of the renowned HENRY V., he executed the duties of the same office, in the same manner, on behalf of his mother. Sir Thomas m. Elizabeth, dau. and heir of Sir Richard Hebdon, Knt., (by his wife, the dau. and heir of Rye,) and dying in the last year of HENRY V., was s. by his son,

SIR PHILIP DYMOKE, then twenty-two years old and upwards, who officiated as champion of HENRY VI. Upon this occasion a mandate was made by the king to the keeper of his wardrobe, to deliver to the said Philip Dymok (then not knighted) such furniture &c. as his ancestors had been accustomed to have upon these occasions. This champion m. Joane, dau. of Sir Christopher Conyers, of Sokeburn, and d. in the 33rd HENRY VI., leaving his son and successor,

SIR THOMAS DYMOKE, then twenty-seven years old and upwards. This champion made a conspicuous figure in the reign of EDWARD IV. His connexion, however, with the Lords Welles, and a suspicion that he favoured the Lancastrian interest, led him to a premature death upon the scaffold. Sir Thomas m. Margaret, second dau., and eventually one of the co-heirs of Lionel, Lord Welles, by Joane, his wife, dau. and heir of Sir Robert Waterton, of Waterton, and had a son and heir,

He was a military man, and one of the principal commanders at the siege of Tournay, where, after the surrender of the city, he was constituted king's treasurer. He was a knight-banneret, and was sheriff of Lincolnshire in the 2 RICHARD III., 18 HENRY VII., and 1 HENRY VIII. His lordship s. to the peerage upon the decease of his grandmother, 22 Sept. 1840, but to the baronetcy at the decease of his father, in 1833.

Lineage.

The very ancient family of Tollemache claims Saxon descent, and the name is said to be a corruption of the word "tollmack," tolling of the bell; the Tollemaches having flourished with the greatest honour, in the co. of Suffolk, since the first arrival of the Saxons in England, a period of more than thirteen centuries.

TOLLEMACHE, Lord of Bentley, in Suffolk, and Stoke-Tollemache, co. Oxford, lived in the 6th century, and upon the old manor house at Bentley appeared the following inscription:

"Before the Normans into England came,
Bentley was my seat, and Tollemache was my name."

HUGH DE TOLLEMACHE subscribed the charter some date, (about the reign of King STEPHEN,) made by John de St. John to Eve, the 1st Abbess of Godstow, in Oxfordshire. This Hugh, in his old age, assumed the cow! at Gloucester, and bestowed upon that monastery a moiety of the town of Hampton, which his son, Peter, confirmed, in the time of the Abbot Hamblin. The descendant of Peter,

SIR HUGH DE TOLLEMACHE, in the 25th of EDWARD I., held of the crown the manor of Bentley, and the fourth part of the village of Aketon, by knight's service. In the 29th of the same monarch,

WILLIAM AND JOHN TOLLEMACHE had summons to attend the king at Berwick-upon-Tweed, previous to his expedition into Scotland. This John took the black cross, and his arms are now remaining in the minster at York.

SIR LIONEL TOLLEMACHE, of Bentley, flourished in the reigns of HENRY VI. and EDWARD IV., and was a personage of great influence and authority. He m. the heir of Helmingham, in Suffolk, and by that alliance acquired the inheritance. His son, John, was father of

LIONEL TOLLEMACHE, who was sheriff of Norfolk and Suffolk in 1513; and in 1546, obtained from HENRY VIII. grants of the manor of Wansden, with the rectory thereof; the manor and rectory of Le Church Hey; the manors of Bury-Hall Willows and Overhall, to hold of the crown by knight's service. This gentleman was s. by his son,

SIR LIONEL TOLLEMACHE, of Helmingham, high-sheriff of Norfolk and Suffolk in 1567. In 1561, Queen ELIZABETH honoured Helmingham with her presence, and remained there from the 14th to the 18th of Aug., inclusive, being most hospitably and sumptuously entertained. During her majesty's visit she stood sponsor to Sir Lionel's son, and presented the child's mother with her lute, which is still preserved at Helmingham Hall, co. Suffolk, the seat of John Tollemache, Esq., M.P. Lady Tollemache was dau. of Sir Richard Wentworth, of Nettledest. Sir Lionel was s. by his son, Warwick, nephew of James, 3rd Duke of Chandos, and 1st cousin of the late Duchess of Buckingham.

Lineage.

The elder branch of this family emigrated from Kent in the reign of JAMES I., and was amongst the earliest settlers in the co. of Armagh. One of its descendants, Capt. John East, joined the adventurers under Penn and Venables, for the conquest of Jamaica; and, with other officers engaged in that enterprise, obtained, soon after the Restoration, a grant, under patent from the crown, of an estate in Leganea, in the parish of St. Andrew's in that island; which estate was afterwards considerably augmented by the purchase of other properties, and has remained ever since in the family, having come by lineal descent to the present baronet. The noted "Hortus Eastensis," of which Bryan Edwards, in his History of Jamaica, has given a catalogue, was founded by a member of the East family, and was purchased some years since of the baronet by the assembly of Jamaica, for a public horticultural institution: another member of this family held office in the court of JAMES I., by whom he was much favoured; and whilst in this service, on some suggestion, it is said, of his majesty, who supposed him to be allied to the family of Modena, changed the spelling of the name from East to Este; and a third, a clergyman of the established church, having accompanied Primate Bolter to Ireland, in 1724, there settled and became Archdeacon of Armagh, and subsequently Bishop of Osoery. A third branch settled in Berkshire, of which was Sir William East, of Hall Place, Berks, created a Baronet in 1766. The family of Edmonstone is of great antiquity in North Britain. It dates its origin about the latter end of the 11th century. Among the many foreigners who attended Margaret, dau. of Edgar Atheling, into Scotland, in 1070, and who afterwards rose to distinction, was Edmundus, supposed to be a younger son of Count Egmont, of Flanders. This Edmundus obtained a grant of land in the co. Edinburgh, to which he gave his name, and those lands, called Edmunistoun, thus became the distinctive appellation of the family.

SIR JOHN EDMONSTONE, Knt., had several charters of lands, temp. DAVID II., A. D. 1369. His son,

JAMES II. conferred a grant of the lands and barony of Duntreath upon Sir William Edmonstone and the Countess of Angus, by a charter bearing date 1452. Lord Howard of Effingham d. 21 Jan. 1573, and was s. by his eldest son,

CHARLES, 2nd baron; who was installed a knight of the Garter 24 April, 1574; and having been appointed, by Queen ELIZABETH, commander-in-chief of the fleet fitted out to oppose the Spanish armada, in 1588, his lordship (a Roman catholic) had the high honour of preserving the shores of his country inviolable, by dispersing and totally destroying that powerful armament. On the 22nd Oct. 1596, Lord Howard was created EARL OF NOTTINGHAM, and after the accession of JAMES I., (at whose coronation he officiated as lord-high-steward of England,) his lordship was engaged in several diplomatic missions of importance. The earl m. 1st, Catharine, dau. of Henry Cary, Lord Hunsdon, by whom he had two sons and three daus.; and 2ndly, Margaret, dau. of James Stewart, Earl of Murray, by whom he had two sons. Fuller, in his quaint manner, thus speaks of this gallant and eminent personage:

"An hearty gentleman, and cordial to his sovereign, of a most proper person, one reason why QUEEN ELIZABETH (who, though she did not value a jewel by, valued it the more for, a fair case) reflected so much on him.

"His service in the 88th is notoriously known, when, at the first news of the Spanish approach, he towed at a cable with his own hands, to draw out the harbour-bound ships into the sea: I dare boldly say, he drew more, though not by his person, by his presence and example, than any ten in the place. True it is, he was no deep seaman, (not to be expected from one of his extraction,) but had skill enough to know those who had more skill than himself, and to follow their instructions; and would not starve the queen's service by feeding his own sturdy wilfulness, but was ruled by the experienced in sea matters, the queen having a navy of Oak, and an admiral of Osier."

GEORGE PERCEVAL, Esq., Lord of Tykenham, &c., m. Elizabeth, dau. of Sir Edward Bamfylde, of Poltimore, in Devon; and dying about 1599, left, with a dau., Elizabeth, m. to Richard Gilbert, Esq., a son,

RICHARD PERCEVAL. The life of this ultimately successful person was chequered and eventful in no ordinary degree. He was b. in 1550, and educated at St. Paul's School, then the most celebrated seminary in England, whence he was sent to Lincoln's-Inn, to acquire some general idea of the laws, esteemed, in those days, an accomplishment of the highest description. In both his progress was brilliant, but his conduct dissipated and disorderly, so much so indeed, that he incurred the displeasure of his father, who, upon his marriage with Joan, dau. of Henry Young, Esq. of Buchorn Weston, co. Dorset, entirely abandoned him, observing, that as he had ruined himself by his riots, he might recover himself by his wits. Thus unnaturally cast off, Mr. Perceval found means, by the credit of his reversionary estates, and the assistance of his friends, to maintain himself several years, during which time he had three sons and two daus.: but at length, through a failure of resources, and the increasing expenses of his family, he was obliged to quit the kingdom, and travelled into Spain, where he remained about four years. Being then informed of his wife's decease, he returned to England, hoping, now that the principal cause of his father's displeasure had been removed, he might again recover his good opinion; but that hope proving delusive, ais relations, and particularly Roger Cave, Esq. of Stamford, who had married the Lord-Treasurer Burghley's sister, engaged on his side, and by that gentleman's means, he contracted an acquaintance with Lord Burghley, who, being pleased with his talents, and moved by his misfortunes, and having endeavoured in vain to procure a reconciliation with his father, determined to promote his fortune by employing him in the management of those state affairs which required the greatest trust and secrecy. Thus he continued till the year 1586, when, whilst the court of Spain was meditating the armada, an English ship succeeded in taking from a Spanish vessel letters from the Low Countries, which, by intimations from abroad, were known to contain the secret. Those letters being brought to Lord Burghley, were laid by his lordship before Queen ELIZABETH in council; but the contents being in cipher, the lord-treasurer proposed that the papers should be entrusted to this Richard Perceval, who returned them the next day after they were placed in his hand to her majesty in person, deciphered, translated, and fairly transcribed in Spanish, Latin, and English. This was the first certain intelligence of the Spanish design, and Perceval was admitted instantly into the queen's favour, and from that moment his road to honour and fortune was open and unimpeded. Having subsequently filled the office of secretary of the Court of Wards in England, for several years, he was nominated, in 1616, registrar of the Court of Wards in Ireland, where, after obtaining considerable landed property, he d. in 1620, and was s. by his son, (by his second wife, Alice, dau. of John Sherman, Esq. of Ottery St. Mary's, co. Mr. Bruce had

issue, ROBERT, of Blairhall; Edward; Sir George, of Carnock; and William. The second son,

EDWARD BRUCE, of Kinloss, was appointed a lord of Session in 1597, and accredited by JAMES VI., in 1600, with the Earl of Mar, to the court of ELIZABETH, to congratulate her majesty upon the suppression of Essex's rebellion. He then placed the affairs of his royal master in such a train with Secretary Cecil as to pave the way to the peaceable succession of the Scottish monarch to the English throne. Upon his return, he was created a peer of Scotland, 2 Feb. 1601-2, as Baron Bruce, of Kinloss, in the co. of Elgin. Accompanying King JAMES into England, on his accession, he was sworn of the new monarch's privy-council, and constituted master-of-the-rolls for life, when he resigned the office of lord of Session. His lordship m.

* SIR GEORGE BRUCE, of Carnock, settled at Culross, where he established extensive and flourishing coal-works. He also carried on the manufacture of salt to a great extent, and was engaged in a considerable foreign trade. The coal was wrought to a distance under the sea, and was shipped at a moat under the sea-mark. JAMES VI., visiting Sir George Bruce, and expressing a desire to inspect the coal-works, was conducted through them to the moat, to his majesty's no small dismay at finding himself in the midst of the sea: he was conducted back, however, in a pinnace, and sumptuously entertained by Sir George, at the abbey of Culross. By those spirited commercial exertions Sir George Bruce accumulated great wealth. He was M.P. for Culross, and one of the commissioners appointed by the parliament of Scotland to treat of a union with England, in 1604. Sir George m. ALEXANDER, 2nd earl. This nobleman took a prominent part in Scottish affairs after the Restoration, and the government of Scotland was placed, anno 1667, in the hands of his lordship, the Earl of Tweeddale, and Sir Robert Murray. The Earl of Kincardine was an eccentric character, and had the misfortune of losing his sight some years before his death, which happened in Nov. 1705, æm., when a competition arose for the honours between his lordship's sister, Lady Mary Cochrane, and Sir Alexander Bruce, of Broomhall, which terminated in favour of the latter, (refer to the 2nd son of Sir George Bruce, of Carnock,) who s. as

* At the great contest for Westminster, in 1750, Mr. Murray took an active part in favour of the anti-ministerial candidate. I can have no further communication with you but in arms. If you have any humanity, pray send clothing for your unfortunate prisoners in my possession; leave it at a distance, to be taken up for them, because I will admit of no contact for the future but such as is hostile to the most inveterate degree." His lordship, who was raised to the peerage as Earl of Ellesmere, &c., is second son of George Granville, late Duke of Sutherland, and grandson of Granville Marquess of Stafford and Louisa, his wife, dau. and eventually co-heir of Scroope, 1st Earl of Bridgewater. He s. to the great Bridgewater estates, in Lancashire, at the decease of his father, in 1833, and assumed then the surname and arms of EGERTON only.

Lineage.

SIR THOMAS EGERTON, b. in 1540; the illegitimate son of Sir Ralph Egerton, of Ridley, by Alice Sparke, having been brought up to the bar, arrived at the highest honours of his profession, and filled, during the reign of ELIZABETH, successively, the important offices of solicitor and attorney-general, master of the rolls, and lord keeper of the great seal. Of his lordship, Collins gives the following account:—"Queen ELIZABETH had such a sense of the lord keeper's sufficiency and great abilities, that she employed him in her councils on several weighty affairs. In 40 ELIZ., he was in commission for treating with the Dutch, in order to lessen our charge of the war with Spain; and with others, signed a new treaty at London, with the ambassadors of the States, whereby the queen was eased of no less than 120,000*l.* per annum, besides other advantages. In 43 ELIZABETH, he was commissioned with others for negotiating affairs with the senate of Denmark. That he was a friend to the Earl of Essex, appears from his letter to that lord, when in disgrace, printed in the Supplement to the Cabala, p. 37, wherein, with great strength of reason and judgment, he endeavours to persuade him to submit to the queen. The earl in answer to it, begins thus: 'My very good lord,— Though there is not that man this day living whom I would sooner make judge of any question that might concern me than yourself, yet you must give me leave to tell you, that in some cases I must appeal from all earthly judges,' &c. After which, the earl concludes—'I must crave your lordship's patience to give him that hath a crabbed fortune leave to use a crooked style. But whatsoever my style is, there is no heart more humble nor more affected to your lordship, than that of your lordship's poor friend, Essex.' But when the Earl of Essex had with his dependants assembled in an hostile manner at Essex House, in the Strand, the lord-keeper Egerton, with the Earl of Worcester, Sir William Knolles, comptroller of the household, the earl's uncle, and Popham, lord chief justice of England, were sent to know the cause thereof. And being, after some difficulty, admitted into the court-yard, (but without their attendants,) the lord-keeper found the earl in the midst of a confused rabble, and addressing himself to him, said, 'That the queen had sent him and the others to know the cause of their concurrence, and if they had suffered any grievances, to promise them a fair and equitable redress.' Whereupon Essex answered him in a louder tone than ordinary, 'That there was a conspiracy against his life; that some were employed to murder him in his bed; that a great deal of treachery had been used against him; and that letters had been counterfeited under his hand and seal; that they were met in defence of themselves,' &c. Thereupon the lord-keeper pressing him once more to discover his grievances (as privately as he pleased) the rabble interrupted him, crying out, 'Let us begone, they do but abuse your patience; they design nothing but to destroy and abuse you, and in the meanwhile we lose time!' Then the lord-keeper bade them on their allegiance lay down their arms; and the Earl of Essex retiring into the house, the lord-keeper, with the rest, followed, on purpose to have some discourse with him in private; the mob, in the meantime, uttering these expressions, 'Cut their throats!' 'Away with that great seal!' 'Clap them up in custody!' When they were in the inner apartments, Essex ordered the doors to be bolted on them, saying, 'That if they would have but a little patience, he would go and advise with the lord-mayor and the sheriffs, and be back again in a very short time.' Thus were these four of the privy council confined, and left in custody of a rabble, in peril of their lives. In the interim, Essex having tried the affections of the citizens, and found none would join with him, and that the lord-admiral was advancing with a strong party against him, resolved to return home, in hopes of obtaining the queen's favour by the lord-keeper, and the three others confined in his house. But when Sir John Levlson, who commanded a party of men at Ludgate, had refused Sir Ferdinando Gorges the liberty for a free passage for Essex, Gorges, consulting his own interest, persuaded the earl to send him to his house to discharge the counsellors, and with them to intercede with the queen for his pardon, while there was no blood split, and her majesty remaining in some suspense, as well as the citizens. The earl consented that the lord chief justice Popham should be released, and none else; but he refusing to accept of his liberty except the lord-keeper might enjoy the same, Gorges discharged them all, and went with them by water to the court. Essex having met with a repulse near the west gate of St. Paul's church (wherein some were killed) got to Queen-Hithe, with a few friends that stood firm to him, and there took boats, and retired to his house. He was very angry at the finding the lord-keeper and the council discharged, and laying aside all hopes of assistance from the city, began to make his own house as strong as he could. But how that unhappy nobleman surrendered, and suffered death, is no part of my present work. I shall only observe, that after he had received his sentence, he desired to speak with some of the privy council; whereupon the lord-keeper, the lord-admiral, the lord-treasurer, and Sir Robert Cecil, were sent to him. After he had asked the lord-keeper's pardon for detaining him in custody, and

Cecil's for accusing him in the matter of the infants, he told them the queen could never be safe as long as he lived, and discovered his whole designs, impeaching several persons. When the earl was executed, it being thought necessary that some punishment should be inflicted on those who were his confederates, the lord-keeper was in a special commission, with others of the greatest note, to call before them all such as were concerned with Robert, late Earl of Essex, Henry, late Earl of Southampton, &c., and to treat and compound with such offenders for the redemption and composition of their lands; and on sealing, and sufficient surety given for the payment of such fines, &c., so assessed by them, to cause a pardon to be made out for the said treasons, and of every their said lands. In 1602, he was in commission, with others of the privy council, to relieve and stay from execution all such persons convicted of any robbery or felony as they should think convenient, and to commit them to serve in some of the queen's gallees for such time as they should assign. In 45 ELIZABETH, he was in commission for putting the laws in execution against Jesuits, seminary priests, &c., ordained according to the rites of the Romish church." Upon the accession of JAMES I., Sir Thomas was appointed lord high chancellor of England, and elevated to the peerage, (21 July, 1603,) as Baron of Ellesmere, in the county of Salop; and further advanced, 7 Nov. 1616, to the dignity of Viscount Brackley. His lordship m. thrice, but had issue by the first marriage only. He d. 15 March, 1616-17, in the 77th year of his age, having received an intimation, immediately before his decease, that it was his majesty's intention to confer upon him the dignity of an earl, and an accompanying pension. This learned and distinguished nobleman was s. by his son, JOHN, 2nd viscount, K.B.; who was created, 27 May, 1617, EARL OF BRIDGEWATER. His lordship was appointed lord president of Wales, and the marches thereof, 12 May, 1633; and to this appointment the world is indebted for Milton's immortal masque of Comus. Warton gives the following account of the circumstance which afforded the subject to the poet: "I have been informed, from a manuscript of Oldys's, that Lord Bridgewater, being appointed lord president of Wales, entered upon his official residence, at Ludlow Castle, with great solemnity. On this occasion, he was attended by a large concourse of neighbouring nobility and gentry. Among the rest, came his children; in particular, Lord Brackley, Mr. Thomas Egerton, and Lady Alice.

— to attend their father's state,
And new-intrusted sceptre.

They had been on a visit at a house of the Egerton family, in Herefordshire; and, in passing through Staywood forest, were benighted, and the Lady Alice even lost for some time. This accident, which in the end was attended with no bad consequences, furnished the subject for a masque for a Michaelmas festivity, and produced Comus."  of Session in 1586; constituted one of the eight commissioners of the Treasury called OCTAVIANS, in 1595; appointed secretary-of-state in 1598; and continuing to rise in the king's favour, the lands belonging to the Cistercian Abbey of Balmerinloch, in Fife, were erected into a temporal lordship in favour of himself, his heirs male, and heirs of tailzie and provision, by charter under the great seal, dated 20 Feb. 1603-4, and he took his seat accordingly as a peer in parliament, by the title of LORD BALMERINO. His lordship was eventually tried and convicted of treason, for having, in his capacity of secretary of state, obtained surreptitiously the signature of his royal master, JAMES VI., to a letter addressed to Pope CLEMENT VIII., soliciting a cardinal's hat for his kinsman, Drummond, Bishop of Veizon.
 He did not suffer, however, under the conviction. From this nobleman we pass to his descendant,

Arthur, 6th Lord Balmerino, the stanch, but ill-fated adherent of the house of Stuart. This nobleman engaged in the risings of 1715 and 1745. In the latter, he was made prisoner after the battle of Having repulsed the assailants, young Creighton made a sally, at the instant that a corps of Enniskilleners was approaching to the relief of the castle, which movement placed the besiegers between two fires, and caused dreadful slaughter. The enemy, attempting to accomplish his retreat across an arm of Lough Erne, near Crum Castle, that spot became the scene of such carnage, that it has ever since borne the name of the "Bloody Pass." ERROLL.

ERROLL, EARL OF, (William-Harry Hay,) and Baron Hay, of Slains, in the peerage of Scotland; Baron Kilmarnock, of Kilmarnock, co. Ayr, in the peerage of the United Kingdom; hereditary lord-high-constable of Scotland, knight marechal of that kingdom; b. 3 May, 1823; an officer in the army; s. his father, 19 April, 1846; m. 20 Sept. 1848, at Montreal, Canada, Eliza-Amelia, eldest dau. of Major-Gen. the Hon. Charles Gore. His lordship is the 22nd high-constable: and as such is, by birth, the first subject in Scotland after the blood-royal, having a right to take place of every hereditary honour, which was granted to his lordship's father on the visit of GEORGE IV. to North Britain.

Lineage.

The traditional origin of the noble house of Hay is thus related:—In the reign of KENNETH III., anno 980, the Danes, who had invaded Scotland, having prevailed at the battle of Luncarty, near Perth, were pursuing the flying Scots from the field, when a countryman, with his two sons appeared in a narrow pass, through which the vanquished were hurrying, and impeded for a moment their flight. "What!" said the rustic, "had you rather be slaughtered by your merciless foes, than die honourably in the field? Come, rally, rally!" and he headed the fugitives, brandishing his ploughshare, and crying out that help was at hand; the Danes, believing that a fresh army was falling upon them, fled in confusion, and the Scots thus recovered the laurel which they had lost, and freed their country from servitude. The battle being won, the old man, afterwards known by the name of Hay, was brought to the king, who, assembling a parliament at Scone, gave to the said Hay and his sons, as a just reward for their valour, so much land on the river Fay, in the district of Gowrie, as a falcon from a man's hand flew over till it settled; which being six miles in length, was afterwards called Erroll; and the king being desirous to elevate Hay and his sons from their humble rank in life to the order of nobility, his majesty assigned them a coat of arms, which was, Argent, three escutcheons, gules, to intimate that the father and two sons had been the three fortunate shields of Scotland. So much for tradition. But the incontrovertible fact is, that the noble houses of Tweeddale and Erroll claim a common progenitor in

WILLIAM DE HAYA, who obtained a grant of the lands of Erroll from WILLIAM the Lion, and was king's butler in that monarch's reign. He m. Juliana, dau. of Ranulph de Souils, Lord of Liddesdale, and had two sons, WILLIAM, his heir; and Robert, ancestor of the house of Tweeddale. The elder son,

SIR WILLIAM DE HAYA, was father of DAVID DE HAYA, who m. Helen, dau. of Gilbert, Earl of Strathern, and had two sons, viz.,

GILBERT, his heir.

WILLIAM, from whom spring the HAYS of LEYS, of PITFOUR, SGOUIDEN, &c. (See BUREE'S Landed Gentry.)

From the elder son, GILBERT, descended

Gifted with the most powerful eloquence, Mr. Erskine attained at once the summit of his profession as an advocate; in which capacity he continued until the year 1806, when he was appointed Lord-High-Chancellor of Great Britain, and elevated to the peerage, 8 April, in the same year, as Baron Erskine of Restormel Castle. Lord Erskine m. 2ndly, Miss Sarah Buck, by whom he also left issue. The success of this eminent lawyer is, probably, the most remarkable upon record as to promptitude; for almost immediately after he was called to the bar he was fortunate enough to find an opportunity for the display of his extraordinary powers. Capt. Baillie, who had been removed from the superintendance of Greenwich Hospital, by the Earl of Sandwich, was proceeded against by that nobleman for the publication of a libel, and the attorney-general having to move the Court of King's Bench for his lordship upon the subject, Mr. Erskine was retained by Capt. Baillie to oppose the motion; upon which he displayed so much eloquence and spirit, that he received, when leaving the court, no less than thirty retainers from attorneys who happened to be present. But of all Erskine's cases, those which raised the advocate's reputation the highest were his splendid defences of Lord George Gordon and of Admiral Keppel. He was likewise distinguished in an eminent degree for the prisoners in the memorable state prosecutions against John Hoare Tookes, Hardy, &c.

ESMONDE.

ESMONDE, SIR THOMAS, of Ballynastra, co. Wexford; b. 10 Dec. 1786; s. as 8th bart., upon the demise of his uncle, 19 Dec. 1803; m. Mary, only dau. of — Payne, Esq., but by her (who d. 7 March, 1840) had no issue.

Lineage.

This family is of very ancient establishment in the co. of Wexford, where we find John Esmond was consecrated Bishop of Ferns, about the middle of the fourteenth century.

The immediate founder of the present house, JOHN ESMONDE, Esq., of Johnstown, co. Wexford, m. Isabel, dau. of Thomas Rosseter, Esq. of Rathmacknee Castle, and left a son,

LAURENCE ESMONDE, Esq. of Johnstown. This gentleman m. Eleanor, dau. of Walter Walsh, of the Mountains, by whom he had two sons, and was s. by the elder,

WILLIAM ESMONDE, Esq., who m. Margaret, dau. of Michael Furlong, Esq. of Horetown, and had, with seven daus., four sons, viz.,

ROBERT, living in 1618, who continued the line of Johnstown, which became extinct a few years since in the male line.

LAURENCE, of whom presently.
James. Patrick.

The second son,

SIR LAURENCE ESMONDE, abandoning the religious creed of his ancestors, declared himself a partisan of ELIZABETH, and a convert to protestantism. In 1601-2, he commanded a troop of 180 foot and horse in her majesty's service, was knighted by Sir Henry Sydney, the viceroy, and served in Connaught in the same corps d'armée, on the expeditions of the Irish chieftains, Morough-ni-doe O'Flaherty, Dynast, of West Connaught, and Sir Theobald Bourke, first Viscount Mayo, who, to preserve their estates, had made their submission a short time previously to the lord-deputy, and accepted commands in the queen's service. Sir Laurence Esmonde's zeal and activity in his military operations procured for him, in an especial degree, the favour of the court, and his ambition increasing with his fortune, he was raised to the peerage, in 1622, (being at the time major-gen. of all the king's forces in Ireland, and governor of Duncannon Fort.) as LORD ESMONDE, Baron of Limerick, co. Wexford. During one of his campaigns in Connaught, having fallen in love with the beautiful sister of O'Flaherty, he m. her and had one son, THOMAS. It happened, however, that Lady Esmonde, a devout Roman catholic, fearing that her child might be brought up a protestant, formed the resolution of carrying off the infant by stealth, and returning to her family in Connaught. This act of maternal devotion appears to have been not at all disagreeable to Sir Laurence, as affording him a pretext for casting suspicion on the legality of his union, that of a protestant with a catholic; yet, without resorting to legal measures to annul the marriage in due form, he sometime after m. Elizabeth, 2nd dau. of the Hon. Walter Butler, 4th son of James, 9th Earl of Ormonde, but by her had no issue. His lordship d. 26 March, 1646, bequeathing all his extensive estates to his only son,

I. SIR THOMAS ESMONDE, 1st baronet. The severity and singularity of his case created considerable interest; and there is scarce a doubt that, but for the melancholy state of civil war, usurpation, and destruction of property, at that period, the conduct of Lord Esmonde towards his lady, and the legality of his second marriage, his first undivorced wife still living, upon legal investigation into the matter, and the accompanying circumstances, Sir Thomas Esmonde's right of succession to his father's peerage could not fail to have been acknowledged. Before, however, that could have taken place, Sir Thomas died; and his successor had to occupy himself with entering into possession of his grandfather's property. Sir Thomas Esmonde, as already noticed, was reared and educated with his maternal relations; and upon his uncle being raised in the peerage to the dignity of Viscount Bourke of Mayo, by privy-seal, dated at Westminster, 8 Feb. 1626, and by patent, 21 June, 1627, Sir Thomas, who had already been knighted for his eminent services in the cause of royalty, as general of horse in the armies of CHARLES I., was created, through Lord Mayo's influence, a few months later, (28 Jan. 1628,) a Baronet of Ireland. Sir Thomas m. Ellis, widow of Thomas Butler, 4th Lord Cahir, and dau. of Sir John Fitzgerald, of Dromana, co. Waterford, (of the line of Deamonde,) and had issue,

I. LAURENCE, his heir.

II. JAMES, of Ballynastragh, who m. Barbara Vincent, of the co. of Limerick, and had issue,

LAURENCE, his heir.

Patrick, Chevalier d'Esmonde, col. in the Austrian service, who was for a considerable time in captivity in Turkey. He left an only dau. and heir, who m. Charles, Count Kavanagh, (of the family of Borris,) general of cavalry in the imperial army.

The elder son,

LAURENCE ESMONDE, Esq. of Ballynastragh, d. at the age of 84, from a fall from his horse while hunting. He m. 1st, Elizabeth, dau. of Henry Brownrigg, Esq. of Wingfield, in Wexford; 2ndly, Mrs. Wyse, of the Manor of St. John, (previously Miss Masterson, of Castletown); and 3rdly, Miss Bagg; but had issue only by his first wife, viz.,

JAMES, his heir, who s. as 6th baronet.

Elizabeth, m. to O'Doyle of Barrahora.

Frances, m. to Howard Kyan, Esq. of Mount Howard and Ballymurtagh, and had issue, John-Howard Kyan, James Kyan, Major-Gen. Francis Kyan, and Esmonde Kyan, who lost his life in the rebellion of 1798.

Mary, m. to Francis Macgan, Esq. of Emoe, in Westmeath, (uterine brother of the O'Connor Don,) and had three sons, Richard, James, and Thomas; and three daus., Elizabeth, m. to John Bonynge, Esq. of Bonynghagh; Margaret,

m. to Mathieu de Montmorency Morres, Esq. of Rath, or Rathlin Lodge, in the co. of Tipperary; and Anne, m. to Christopher Fitzgerald, Esq., father of the late Thomas Fitzgerald, Esq. of Fane Valley, M.P. for Louth.

II. SIR LAURENCE, generally resided at Huntingdon Castle, near Clonegall, co. Carlow, which he built and called after the ancient seat of his ancestors at Huntingdon, in Lincolnshire. He m. Lucia, eldest dau. of Colonel Richard Butler, of Kilcash, co. In his youth he had been an officer in the French service, but returned to Ireland on his father's death; he m. Ellice, only dau. and heir of James Whyte, Esq. of Pembrokestown, co. Waterford, by whom he had three sons, Kildare, and of Helen, dau. of Michael Caulfield, of Levitstown, in the same co., by Helen, his wife, dau. of John Taylor, of Swords House, co. Dublin. By this lady he had issue,

SIR WILLIAM CAPELL, Knt., alderman of London, and lord-mayor in 1503, (2nd son of John Capel, Esq. of Stoke Neyland, in Suffolk.) Attracting, by the immense wealth he had acquired, the notice of Ermpson and Dudley, the well-known extortioners of HENRY VII., was fined £1600, to which he submitted; but to a second imposition of £2000, in some years afterwards, under the pretence that, during his mayoralty, he had not duly punished a party brought before him for coining, he demurred, and was committed to the Tower, where he remained until the death of the king. He m. Margaret, dau. of Sir Thomas Arundel, Knt. of Lanhern, in Cornwall; and dying in 1515, left (with two daus., Elizabeth, m. to William Paulet, 1st Marquess of Winchester; and Dorothy, m. to John, Lord Zouch of Harringworth) an only son,

Lineage.

This family flourished originally in the co. of Salop, at a place now called Evelyn, but formerly written Avelyn and Ivelyn. From Shropshire, it removed to Long Ditton, in Surrey; thence to Harrow-on-the-Hill, co. Middlesex, temp. HENRY IV.; and to Klugston, in Surrey, in the reign of HENRY VIII.

GEORGE EVELYN, Esq., the founder of this branch of the Evelyns, in Surrey, was the first person to bring the art of making gunpowder to perfection in England; and for the convenience of his works in the neighbourhood, purchased the estate at Wotton. This gentleman left, at his decease, six sons and two daus. Thomas, the eldest son, was father of Edward, of Long Ditton, who was created a Baronet in 1682; but dying without issue, in 1692, the dignity expired. John, the 2nd son, was father of John, of Godstone, who was created a Baronet in 1680; but dying without issue, the honour ceased. He (John, the 2nd son) was also father of

GEORGE EVELYN, Esq., who d. in 1603, and was s. by his only surviving son,

RICHARD EVELYN, Esq., who m. Eleanor, only dau. and heir of John Stansfield, Esq. of Lewes, co. Sussex; and dying in 1640, was s. by his eldest son,

JOHN EVELYN, Esq., the elegant and distinguished author of "Silva," and other celebrated literary works. Mr. Evelyn visiting, in 1647, the French capital, and being recommended to Sir Richard Browne, Bart., the king's minister there, m. the only dau. of that gentleman, and, in her right, became possessed of Saye's Court, near Deptford, in Kent. After the Restoration, Mr. Evelyn was most graciously received at court; and upon the establishment of the Royal Society, about the close of the year 1662, he was appointed one of the first Fellows and council thereof. In 1669, he was honoured with the degree of doctor of civil laws by the University of Oxford. After the Revolution, he was treasurer of Greenwich Hospital, and though far advanced in years, wrote some pieces, and translated others, which will confer imperishable fame upon himself and his country. The period of this learned person's life and labours terminated almost together; as he d. soon after he had prepared the 4th edition of his "Silva" for the press, in the 86th year of his age, 27 Feb. 1705-6. Bishop Burnet styles him a most ingenious and virtuous gentleman; and informs us, that he was not satisfied to have advanced the knowledge of his age by his most useful labours, about planting and divers other ways, but he was ready to contribute everything in his power to perfect other men's endeavours. Mr. Evelyn was s. by his only surviving grandson,

Lineage.

The first who derived dignity from the city of Exeter was JOHN DE HOLLAND, Earl of Huntingdon, 3rd son of Thomas de Holland, Earl of Kent, by the great heiress, JOANS PLANTAGENET, "Fair Maid of Kent," who was advanced, in 1397, in open parliament, to the DUKEDOM OF EXETER; but joining in a conspiracy with the Earl of Kent, he was attainted, and beheaded in 1400, when his honours expired. The duke had m. the Lady Elizabeth Plantagenet, dau. of John of Gaunt, and left issue. In sixteen years afterwards, Sir Thomas Beaufort, Earl of Dorset, youngest son of John of Gaunt, by Katherine Swineford, was created, for life only, DUKES OF EXETER. His grace d. 27 Dec. 1436, without issue, when all his honours became EXTINCT; from that period the city of Exeter remained without a duke for seventeen years, when JOHN DE HOLLAND, eldest surviving son of John, the first and attainted duke, was created DUKES OF EXETER, by patent dated 6 Jan. 1443. His grace, who was a knight of the Garter, lord-high-admiral of England, Ireland, and Aquitaine, and constable of the Tower of London, d. in 1446, and was s. by his son, HENRY, as 2nd duke, a staunch Lancastrian, who sharing the temporary triumphs and the defeats of his party was eventually, in 1461, attainted, when the dukedom expired. COMINES reports, that he saw this unhappy nobleman in such deep distress (after the battle of Barnet, it is presumed) that he ran on foot, barelegged, after the Duke of Burgundy's train, begging his bread, for God's sake, but that he uttered not his name, and that when he was known, the duke conferred upon him a small pension. More than threescore years subsequently elapsed before the title of Exeter was again borne, when at length EDWARD COURTENAY, the restored Earl of Devon, was created, by letters patent, 18 Jan. 1525, MARQUESS OF EXETER. This nobleman, who was a distinguished personage in the reign of HENRY VIII., sat in judgment on the trial of the unfortunate ANNE BOLEYN, but the year after, incurring the displeasure of the king, he was convicted of high treason, and beheaded in 1540, when the Marquisate of Exeter became EXTINCT. His son and heir, the unhappy EDWARD COURTENAY, was imprisoned in the Tower during the remainder of the reign of HENRY VIII., but upon the accession of Queen MARY, released, he was restored to the Dignity of MARQUESS OF EXETER. He d. unm. in 1566, and was the last of the Courtenay family to bear the dignity. In about half a century afterwards, the title of Exeter, as an EARLDOM, was conferred upon the present family of CECIL, spelt at different times, Sitallt, Sicell, Seycill, and Cyssel, and founded by one of the most remarkable men in English history.

WILLIAM CECIL, b. at Bourne, in Lincolnshire, 18 Sept. 1520, (son and heir of Richard Cyssel, an officer of the court in attendance upon HENRY VIII., particularly at the celebrated interview between that monarch and FRANCIS, King of France, upon the field of the cloth of gold,) having attracted the attention and attained the subsequent favour of his sovereign, by a successful disputation with two intemperate chaplains of O'Neal, the Irish chieftain, on the power of the Roman pontiff, the king granted him a reversion of the office of custos-brevium; and from that period he resolved to pursue a political, rather than a forensic course, which latter he had originally intended to adopt, having entered himself at Gray's Inn, in 1541. In the reign of EDWARD VI., Mr. Cecil was appointed secretary of state, when he received the honour of knighthood, and was sworn of the privy council. Under the rule of MARY, although a zealous reformist previously, Sir William, with the tact of the renowned churchman of Bray, doffed his protestant mantle, and conformed to the ancient faith; outwardly, saith his recent biographer, Dr. Nares; but certainly so far as engaging a catholic domestic chaplain, humbling himself at the confessional, and kneeling before the altar of the real presence, constitute such a conformation. This outward demonstration proved not to have been assumed in vain, for we find the wily politician enjoying again the sunshine of royal favour, and actually nominated, with Lord Paget and Sir Edward Hastings, to conduct Cardinal Pole, then invested with a legate commission, into England. In this reign Cecil represented the co. of Lincoln in parliament. Immediately upon the accession of ELIZABETH, however, (when he became once more a staunch denouncer of popish errors,) the star of his fortune arose, and few statesmen have been guided through a more brilliant course. His first official employment was the resumption of the secretary-of-stateship, and in that so sensible was his royal mistress of his important services, that she elevated him to the peerage, by the title of Baron Burghley, in 1571, although at this period his private fortune does not appear to have been much advanced, for by a letter written by himself just after his elevation, he says, "that he is the poorest lord in England." A conspiracy was soon afterwards discovered against his life, and the two assassins, Barney and Matter, declared, at their execution, that they were instigated by the Spanish ambassador; for which, and other offences, his excellency was ordered to depart the kingdom. As a consolation for these perils, the secretary was honoured with the order of the Garter in June, 1573; and in the Sept. following, at the decease of the Marquess of Winchester, appointed lord-high-treasurer and was chancellor of the University of Cambridge from 1588 to 1598. His lordship m. 1st, in 1561, Mary, sister of Sir John Cheke, tutor to EDWARD VI., by whom he had,

THOMAS, his successor.

His first lady dying after a short period, he m. 2ndly, in 1546, Mildred, dau. of Sir Anthony Coke, Knt. of Giddy Hall, co. Essex, by whom he had surviving issue,

ROBERT, who was created Earl of Salisbury. (See MARQUESS OF SALISBURY.)
 Anne, Countess of Oxford.

Elizabeth, m. to William, eldest son of Lord Wentworth.

The last memorable act of the lord-treasurer's life was an attempt to bring about a peace with Spain, in which he was vehemently opposed by Essex, then in the fire of youth. The young soldier becoming heated in the debate, the venerable minister was induced to pull out a prayer-book, and point to the words, "Men of blood shall not live out half their lives." Burghley has been universally condemned for his participation in the destruction of the unhappy MARY of Scotland—and justly. Of the manner of living adopted by this eminent person, we are informed that, suitable to his rank and the custom of the times, he kept up an extraordinary degree of splendour in his houses and gardens, and everything belonging to him. He had four places of residence—his lodgings at court, his house in the Strand, his family seat of Burghley, and his own favourite seat at Theobalds. At his house in London, he had fourscore persons in family, exclusively of those who attended him at court. His expenses there, as we have it from a person who lived many years in his family, were, £30 a-week in his absence, and between £40 and £50 when present. At Theobalds he had thirty persons in his family; and, besides a constant allowance in charity, he directed £10 a-week to be laid out in keeping the poor at work in his gardens, &c. The expenses of his stables were a thousand marks a-year. He kept a standing table for gentlemen, and two other tables for persons of meaner condition, which were always served alike, whether he were in or out of town. Twelve times he entertained the queen at his house for several weeks together, at the expense of two or three thousand pounds each visit. At his decease he left about £4000 a-year in land, £11,000 in money, and in valuable effects about £14,000. His lordship d. 4 Aug. 1598, and was s. by his elder son,

WILLIAM, of Walton, whose direct descendant, (fifth in succession,)

SIR THOMAS FAIRFAX, of Walton, was created, in 1629, Viscount Fairfax, of Emeley, co. Tipperary, in the peerage of Ireland, a dignity that expired with Charles-Gregory, Viscount Fairfax, in 1773, when his estates eventually devolved on Charles-Gregory Pigott, who assumed the surname of Fairfax, and is the present CHARLES-GEORGE FAIRFAX, Esq. of Gilling Castle.

SIR GUY FAIRFAX, of Steeton, who, having served the office of attorney-general, was appointed one of the justices of the Court of King's Bench, 29 Sept. 1478. This learned person m. Margaret, dau. of Sir William Ryther, of Ryther, and was s. at Steeton Castle, co. York, which he had erected, by his eldest son,

Crawford mentions that this gentleman was with the Duke of Bourbon at the sacking of Rome, and that his father, being highly offended therewith, settled Steeton on his youngest son, Gabriel. Sir Thomas m. Dorothy, dau. of George Gale, Esq. of Asham Grange, and had, besides two daus.,

Sir Thomas was s. by his eldest son,

Ferdinando, 2nd baron. This nobleman, at the beginning of the civil war, was the parliamentary general for York, and became eminently distinguished. After defeating the Earl of Newcastle in 1642, Lord Byron, in 1643, and Col. Bellasis, whom he took prisoner, in April, 1644, at Selby, he had the chief command at the battle of Marston Moor, in the July of the same year, and there, defeating the royal army under Prince Rupert, he took possession of the city of York as governor. His lordship m. 1st, Lady Mary Sheffield, dau. of Edmund, 1st Earl of Mulgrave; and 2ndly, Rhoda, dau. and co-heir of Thomas Chapman, Esq. of London; by the former of whom he had three sons and six daus.,* and was s. at his decease, in 1647, by his eldest son and companion in arms,

THOMAS, 3rd baron; who had distinguished himself as a republican military leader, as "Sir Thomas Fairfax." He was a participator in the victory obtained by his father at Selby, and he commanded the right wing of the parliamentarians at Marston Moor. In the 34th year of his age he was appointed general-in-chief of the parliament's armies, and soon after routed the king at Naseby, retook Leicester, beat Col. Goring, took Bridgewater, Dartmouth, Bristol, defeated Lord Hopton, forced the Prince of Wales to retire into France, and then, reducing the entire of the west, drove the king from Oxford, in May, 1646; in which year he was made governor of the Tower of London. After succeeding to the barony, he reduced Colchester; but he took no part in the subsequent proceedings of the independents, and was entirely free of any participation in the death of the king. In 1650, he resigned the command of the army to Cromwell; and, nine years afterwards, his lordship, coalescing with Monk, assisted zealously in restoring the monarchy, and was one of the commissioners deputed, upon that occasion, to the king. Soon after this event, Lord Fairfax represented the co. of York in parliament; but he passed the latter end of his life in rural retirement. His lordship m. Anne, dau. and co-heir of Sir Horatio Vere, Lord Vere of Tilbury, by whom he had an only child, Mary, who m. George Villiers, 2nd Duke of Buckingham. He d. in 1671, when the barony devolved upon his cousin,

HENRY, 4th baron; grandson of the 1st lord, through his 2nd son, the Hon. and Rev. Henry Fairfax, of Oglethorpe, co. York, by Mary, dau. of Sir Henry Cholmley. This nobleman m. Frances, dau. and heir of Sir Robert Barwick, of Tolston, Yorkshire, by whom he left two sons,

i. THOMAS, his successor.

ii. Henry, of Tolston, co. York; m. Anne, dau. and co-heir of Richard Harrison, Esq., and had, with other issue,

1 HENRY, who d. s. p. in 1759.

2 WILLIAM, who settled in New England, whence he removed to Virginia, and became manager of his cousin's, Lord Fairfax, estates there. He m. twice, and had three sons. The youngest, but survivor, BRYAN, a clergyman, s. as 8th baron.

His lordship d. in 1685, and was s. by the elder,

THOMAS, 6th baron; col. in the guards, and M.P. for the co. of York, which seat he was obliged to relinquish at the union, upon ceasing to be a commoner in England. His lordship m. Catherine, dau. and heir of Thomas, Lord Colepepper, by whom he had,

i. THOMAS, his successor.

ii. Henry-Colepepper, d. unm. in 1734.

iii. Robert, who s. as 7th lord.

iv. Margaret, m. to the Rev. David Wilkins, D.D., prebendary of Canterbury.

v. Frances, m. to Denny Martin, Esq.; and dying in 1791, left issue.

1 DENNY-MARTIN, in holy orders; who inherited at the decease of his uncle, Robert, 7th lord, Leeds Castle, and the other estates in Kent, when he assumed the name of FAIRFAX. He d. s. p. in 1800.

2 PHILIP-MARTIN, lieutenant-gen. in the army; who inherited from his brother Leeds Castle, and assumed the name of FAIRFAX. He d. unm. in 1821, when Leeds Castle passed to the representative of his aunt and heir-at-law, the late FRANCES WYKHAM MARTIN, Esq.

The baron was s. in 1710, by his eldest son,

THOMAS, 6th baron. This nobleman inherited from his mother a splendid fortune, consisting of several manors in Kent, estates in the Isle of Wight, and a tract of land in Virginia, called the Northernneck, comprised within the boundaries of the rivers Potomack and Rappahanock, containing, by estimation, 5,700,000 acres. From his father he inherited Denton Hall and other property in Yorkshire, but he was obliged by his mother and grandmother to dispose of those, in order to redeem the Colepepper manors. His lordship had a commission in the horse-guards, but visiting his American estates about the year 1739, he was so captivated with the soil, climate, and beauties of Virginia, that he resolved to spend the remainder of his life there; and he soon after erected two mansions, Belvoir and Greenway Court, where he continued ever afterwards to reside in a state of baronial hospitality. His dress was plain and simple, his manners modest and unaffected, and his style of living magnificent. Such was his generosity, that he gave up his English estates to his brother Robert, and the surplus of his American income was distributed among his poor neighbours. His principal amusement was hunting; and after the chase he was wont to invite the whole field to partake his hospitality. He had been educated in revolutionary principles, and had imbibed high notions of republican liberty. He was lieutenant and custom-house officer of Frederick county, and presided at the provincial courts of Winchester, where, during the session, he kept an open table. His lordship d. unm., at Greenway Court, in 1782, when the title devolved upon his only surviving brother,

ROBERT, 7th baron. This nobleman m. twice, but d. without issue, in 1793, when his Kentish property devolved upon his nephew, the Rev. Denny Martin, and the barony was confirmed by the House of Lords in 1800 to his kinsman, THE REV. BRYAN FAIRFAX, who then became 8th Lord Fairfax. He m. Miss Cary, and was s. by his son, THOMAS, 9th lord; b. in 1762; who resided at Vaulouse, Fairfax County, in Virginia, N.A.; and d. there, 21 April, 1846. His grandson and successor is CHARLES-SNOWDEN, the present and 10th lord.

SIR ROBERT CARY, Knt., who, among other feats of arms, vanquished an Arragonian knight in Smithfield, and as a reward for his valour, received the honour of knighthood, and the permission to adopt the armorial ensigns of his defeated rival, namely, On a bend, three roses. The elder son,

SIR JOHN CARY, Knt., m. Joice, sister of Sir Anthony Denny, Knt., and left issue,

SIR EDWARD CARY, Knt. of Berkhamstead, master of the Jewel-office to ELIZABETH and JAMES I. This gentleman m. Catherine, dau. of Sir Henry Knevett, and widow of Henry, Lord Paget, by whom he had a son,

SIR HENRY CARY, K.B., who was elevated to the peerage of Scotland, 10 Nov. 1620, as VISCOUNT FAULKLAND. His lordship was constituted LORD-LIEUTENANT OF IRELAND in 1622, and continued in office seven years. He m. Elizabeth, only dau. and heir of Sir Laurence Tanfield, chief-baron of the Exchequer, and had issue, LUCIUS, his successor.

Lawrence, killed fighting under Sir Charles Coote, when he defeated the Irish at Swords, in 1642.

Anne, m. to James, 2nd Earl of Home.

Amongst the papers of the viscount, who was a man of letters, was found, and printed in 1680, "The History of the most unfortunate Prince EDWARD II., with choice political observations on him, and his unhappy favourites, Gaveston and Spencer." His lordship is remarkable for an invention to prevent the counterfeit of his signature—that of artfully concealing within the writing the successive years of his age. He d. in 1633, and was s. by his elder son,

LUCIUS, 2nd viscount. This eminent person was born at Burford, about the year 1610, and carried by his father into Ireland, when that nobleman was appointed lord-deputy, in 1602, where he received part of his education at Trinity College, Dublin; he was afterwards of St. John's College, Cambridge. At the age of nineteen, he inherited the fortune of his maternal grandfather, and thus became possessed of a landed estate of about £2000 per annum, with considerable personal property. His lordship, after the decease of his father, retired to his seat at Great Tew, and devoted himself entirely to literature. Previously to the breaking out of the civil wars, he was member of parliament for Newport, and a strenuous opponent of the court; but so soon as actual rebellion commenced, he as strenuously supported the royal cause. He attended the king at Edgehill, at Oxford, and at the siege of Gloucester. But a view of the calamities brought upon his country, and the still greater impending evils, entirely broke down his lordship's spirits, and though no military man, he sought death as a relief in the field of battle. Frequently, when sitting amongst his friends, after a long silence and deep sighs, he would cry out with a shrill voice "PEACE," declaring himself incapable of living in such a state of perpetual grief and anxiety. This extreme uneasiness seems to have hurried him on to destruction. Putting himself into the first rank of Lord Byron's regiment, at Newbury, 20 Sept. 1643, he received a musket-shot wound, and falling from his horse, his body was not found until the next morning. "Thus Falkland died, the generous and the just." Lord Clarendon, speaking of Falkland, says, that he was a person of such prodigious parts of learning and knowledge, and of that inimitable sweetness and delight in conversation, and of so flowing and obliging a humanity and goodness to mankind, and of that primitive simplicity and integrity of life, that, if there were no other brand upon the odious and accursed civil war than that single loss, it must be most infamous to all posterity. His lordship at one time filled the office of secretary-of-state to CHARLES I. He m. Letitia, dau. of Richard Morrison, Esq. of Tooley Park, co. Leicester, and was s. by his eldest son,

HENRY, 3rd viscount. His lordship represented, after the Restoration, Arundel in parliament, and was nominated lord-lieutenant of the co. Oxford. He was committed to the Tower during the usurpation, upon suspicion of being concerned in Sir George Booth's rising for the restoration of CHARLES II. Lord Falkland was author of the "Marriage Night," a comedy. He m. Margaret, dau. of Anthony Hungerford, Esq.; and dying in 1663, was s. by his eldest son,

ANTHONY, 4th viscount. This nobleman filled some high official situations during the reigns of CHARLES II. and WILLIAM III., but incurred the displeasure of the House of Commons, which resolved, 17 Jan. 1693-4, that Viscount Falkland, one of its members, by begging and receiving £2000 from his majesty, contrary to the ordinary method of issuing and bestowing the king's money, was guilty of a high misdemeanor and breach of trust, and that he be committed to the Tower. His lordship m. Rebecca, dau. of Sir Rowland Lytton, of Knebworth, Herts; and dying in 1694, left issue a dau., Frances, m. to John Villiers, 1st Earl of Grandison, and a son and successor, LUCIUS-HENRY, 5th viscount; who m. 1st, Dorothy, dau. of Francis Molineux, Esq., by whom he had issue,

Comte de Rothe, col. of the Irish regiment of Rothe, in the service of the King of France; and d. 7 Feb. 1804. His lordship d. in 1730, and was s. by his eldest son,

LUCIUS-CHARLES, 6th viscount. This nobleman m. 1st, in 1734, Jane, dau. and heir of Richard Butler, Esq. of London, and widow of James, Viscount Villiers, by whom he had,

The very ancient and honourable family of Shirley has had the good fortune to have been illustrated by an historical narrative, compiled by a distinguished member of its own house. Sir Thomas Shirley, of Botolph's Bridge, composed three distinct MS. histories of the Shirleys, all of which are preserved in the British Museum.

SIR RALPH DE SHIRLEY, in the 7th year of EDWARD I., held the manor of Eatendon, co. Warwick, of Edmund, Earl of Lancaster, the king's brother, by the service of two knights' fees. In the 28th of the same reign, he had the custodies of the cos. Salop and Stafford, with the castle of Shrewsbury, committed to his charge, and was sheriff of the cos. Derby and Nottingham in the 27th, 28th, and 30th of the same king. In the 3rd EDWARD II. he was constituted one of the justices of the co. Warwick for the gaol delivery, and in two years after was elected to parliament for that co. He m. Margaret, dau. and co-heir of Walter de Waldeshalef, of Fulrife, co. Derby, cup-bearer to EDWARD II.; and dying in 1327, was s. by his son,

SIR THOMAS SHIRLEY, Knt. M.P. for the co. Warwick in the 14th year of EDWARD III. This Sir Thomas is said to be "the great founder of the family of Shirleys, famous

In his time for his valour, and for the many services &c. rendered to the Kings of England, against the French." He m. Isabel, grandda. of Ralph, Lord Basset of Drayton, and eventually heir of her brother Ralph, the last Lord Basset of that line, (since whose decease that barony has been in abeyance,—see BURKE'S Extinct Peerage;) and dying in 1362, was s. by his son,

SIR HUGH SHIRLEY, Knt., who s. also to the estates of his uncle, Lord Basset of Drayton. RALPH SHIRLEY, constable of Melbourne Castle, and of the castle in the Peak of Derbyshire; m. 1st, Margaret, dau. and sole heir of John de Staunton, of Staunton Harold, co. Leicester, by whom he had an only son, JOHN, his successor. Lineage.

This family is of Saxon origin, and was seated at Fetherston, in Northumberland, before the Conquest; that part of the county having been allotted to its progenitor, a Saxon officer, for his gallant conduct against the Britons.

The surname is said to have been thus derived:—The house in which the family resided was formerly upon a hill, (where were two stones, called fether stones,) and was moated round, as a barrier against the Scots; but upon being destroyed, a new edifice was erected in the holme, or valley, under the hill, which valley was locally denominated a haugh, and thence the appellation of "Fetherstonhaugh."

The family of Fetherstonhaugh was first raised to the dignity of Baronet in 1660, in the person of HENNAOS, grandson of CUTBERT FETHERSTONE, of Hathery Clough, in the parish of Stanhope, co. Durham, who settled in London towards the latter end of the 16th century. The honour, however, expired with his last surviving son and heir.

Sir HENRY FETHERSTONHAUGH, who enjoyed his heir-at-law to obtain a revival of the same; which heir, FIFE, EARL OF, (James Duff, K.T., G.C.H.) Viscount Macduff and Baron Braco, of Kilbryde, co. Cavan, in the peerage of Ireland; Baron Fife, in the peerage of the United Kingdom; lord-lieut. of the co. Banff, knight of the Spanish order of St. Ferdinand, b. 6 Oct. 1776; s. to the Irish honours, upon the decease of his father, 17 April, 1811; and obtained the barony of the Empire, by patent of creation, dated 27 April, 1827. The earl distinguished himself during the Peninsular war, having volunteered his services, and obtained the rank of major-general in the Spanish patriotic army; he was wounded at the battle of Talavera, and again at the storming of Fort Matagorda, near Cadiz.

Lineage.

This noble family derives from FYFE MACDUFF, a chieftain of great wealth and power, who lived about the year 834, and who afforded to KENNETH II., King of Scotland, strong aid against his enemies the Picts. In reward of these services, Macduff received from the monarch a grant of all the lands then called Othelina, which he himself had conquered from the Picts, and which extended from Fifeness to Clackmannan, from east to west, and from the river Forth on the south, to the rivers Tay and Erne, on the north. Of that tract of land, which he called Fife, Macduff was appointed hereditary thane. The 8th in descent from him was the

MACDUFF, with whom the genius of Shakespeare has made the world familiar. This powerful thane having mainly contributed to the destruction of the usurper, MACBETH, and to the restoration of MALCOLM CREANMOHR, the latter king confirmed to him his co. of Fife, of which he created him earl in 1061. The 13th earl,

DUNCAN, dying in 1353, without issue male, the earldom became extinct. His descendant, however, DAVID DUFF, received, in 1401, from ROBERT III., a grant of considerable lands and of the Barony of Muldavit, which continued to be one of the chief titles of the family, until alienated in the beginning of the reign of CHARLES II. The descendant of David Duff.

WILLIAM DUFF, Esq., was elevated to the peerage of Ireland, by the Queen Regent CAROLINE as Baron Braco of Kilbryde, 28 July, 1735; and advanced to a viscounty and earldom, 26 April, 1759, by the titles of Viscount MacDuff and EARL OF FIFE.  Henrietta-Maria.

His lordship s. his father, as 9th earl, 30 July, 1836. He is a privy councillor in Ireland.

Lineage.

This noble family is of Danish origin, but its settlement in Ireland is so remote that nothing certain can be ascertained as to the precise period. So early as the 11th century, we find

JOHN PLUNKETT was seated at Beaulen, or Bewley, co. Meath, the constant residence of the elder branch of his descendants. The successor at Bewley, in the beginning of the 13th century,

JOHN PLUNKETT, living temp. HENRY III., had two sons; John, ancestor of the Lords Louth, and

RICHARD PLUNKETT, of Rathregan, co. Meath, who, with his son and heir, RICHARD PLUNKETT, by royal writs of parliamentary summons, was summoned to, and sat in the parliaments and great council of 1374; the one as a baron, and the other "de concilio regis." To the same parliament and council was also summoned as a baron, "Walter de Cusack Militi," Lord of Killeen, whose heir general afterwards, as wife of Christopher Plunkett, was heretofore thought to have first brought the dignity of a parliamentary barony into this branch of the Plunkett family, but how erroneously may best be seen by reference to the writs of summons of the 48th of EDWARD III., before alluded to. The younger Richard Plunkett was father of

SIR CHRISTOPHER PLUNKETT, Knt. This gentleman, as a recompence for the services he had rendered in the wars of Ireland, and an indemnity for the expenses he had incurred, had a grant of a sum of money from HENRY VI., in 1426; before which time he was sheriff of Meath; and in 1432, was deputy to Sir Thomas Stanley, Knt., lord-lieut. of Ireland. Sir Christopher m. in 1403, Joan, only dau. and heir of Sir Lucas Cusack, Knt., Lord of Killeen, Dunsany, and Gerardston, co. Meath, and became, in her right, proprietor of the barony of Killeen. He d. in 1445, and was s. by his eldest son,

JOHN PLUNKETT, 2nd Lord of Killeen, who was s. by his son,

SIR CHRISTOPHER PLUNKETT, (who in an act of parliament, 27th HENRY VI., is called "Christofre Plunkett le peigne Seigneur de Killeen,") 3rd Lord of Killeen. This feudal lord m. twice; 1st, Genet, dau. of Bellew of Bellewstown, by whom he had two sons; the younger of whom, Broughton, fell at the battle of Stoke, in 1487, fighting for Lambert Simnel. Sir Christopher m. 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. of Sir William Wells, lord-chancellor of Ireland, by his wife, a dau. of Barnewall of Crickston, by whom (who was m. 2ndly, to John Fleming, of Newcastle, Lord Slane) he had a dau., who m. Nicholas, 16th Baron of Howth, and two sons. Sir Christopher d. in 1487, and was s. by his elder son,

CHRISTOPHER PLUNKETT, 4th Lord of Killeen; who had summons to parliament in 1643, and is called in a statute of that year, "Christophe Plunkett, Esquire, Fitz and Heire de Christophe Plunkett, Chevalier, Jadedz Seigneur de Killeen." He d. without issue, and was s. by his brother and heir male,

EDMUND, Lord of Killeen, whose titles and descent are set forth in a statute of the year 1470, and who is styled, in the roll bearing date 1481, as Edmundus Plunkett, Dominus de Killeen. He had issue a son and heir,

SIR JOHN PLUNKETT, Lord of Killeen, who was sworn of the privy-council to HENRY VIII., and was found by inquisition to have had four sons,

Patrick, his heir, who d. s. p.

CHRISTOPHER, who was heir to his brother.

Henry, who d. s. p. James.

The second son,

CHRISTOPHER PLUNKETT, who s. to the titles and estates, as heir to his brother, Patrick, was an active and gallant nobleman, who discharged many high functions and commissions under the royal authority. He sat in the parliament of 1509, and having married the granddaun. of the Baron of Slane, left issue, three daus., his co-heirs, Mande, m. to the Baron of Louth.

Catherine, m. to David Sutton, Esq.

Margaret, m. to Nicholas Aylmer, Esq. of Dullardston.

Christopher was s. by his brother and heir male,

JAMES PLUNKETT, Lord Killeen, whose inheritance of the ancient family dignity was not opposed or questioned by the daus., co-heirs of his deceased brother, and he took his place in the House of Peers, in the year 1585. On the 15 April, 1589, he enfeoffed trustees in his family estates, and was s. at his decease by his son and heir,

CHRISTOPHER PLUNKETT, Baron of Killeen, when aged 31, who sat in the parliament of 1613; and dying soon after, was s. by his eldest son,

LUCAS, the 10th lord, styled Lucas More. This nobleman had a large grant of territory in 1613, and was created EARL OF FINOALL, 26 Sept. 1628, JAMES I. precluding the honour by a most flattering letter, dated Westminster, 28 June, in that year, beginning thus:—"That having received good testimonies of the virtuous and many good parts of his right trusty and well-beloved subject, the Lord Baron Killeen, being one of the ancient nobility of Ireland, his majesty was pleased," &c. &c. His lordship m. four times, and had issue by his second marriage with Susannah, fifth dau. of Edward, Lord Brabazon (only), of which,

CHRISTOPHER, the eldest son, succeeded to the honours.

George, the 4th son, a capt. of foot at the siege of Drogheda, in 1641, and afterwards colonel in the rebel army. He m. Cicely, dau. of Sir William Hill, of Allenston, co. Meath, and had,

JAMES, who m. 1st, Catherine, dau. of Edward Plunkett, of Loughcrew, and niece of Oliver Plunkett, titular primate of all Ireland in 1681, a clergyman of great virtues and ability, who fell a victim to the times in which he lived, being most unjustly executed in 1681, as one of the conspirators in the pretended popish plot. By this lady he had a dau., Mary, m. to William O'Mara. He m. 2ndly, Mary, dau. of Robert Cusack, Esq. of Jerristown, co. Meath, and had, with other issue,

ROBERT, who s. as 6th earl.

His lordship d. in 1687, and was s. by his eldest son,

CHRISTOPHER, 2nd earl. This nobleman having been made prisoner at the battle of Rathmines, died in the castle of Dublin fourteen days afterwards, A.D. 1649, and was s. by his son, (by Maecell, dau. of Nicholas, Viscount Kingsland.)

LUKE, 3rd earl; who was restored to his estates and honours, by the Court of Claims, and was s. at his decease by his only son,

PETER, 4th earl. This nobleman was outlawed by the name of Luke, in 1691, for his loyalty to his legitimate sovereign JAMES II., but the outlawry was reversed in six years afterwards, A.D. 1697. His lordship m. Frances, 3rd dau. of Sir Edward Hales, Bart.; and dying 24 Jan. 1717 left issue, JUSTIN, his successor.

Margaret, m. to J. Nugent, Esq. of Coolamber.

Emilia, m. to Robert, Earl Nugent.

Mary, m. to Maurice O'Connor, Esq. of Mount Pleasant, King's Co.

His lordship was s. by his only son,

JUSTIN, 5th earl; who d. in 1733, without issue, and intestate, and was s. in his titles and estates by his cousin and heir male,

ROBERT, 6th earl, (refer to George, 2nd son of Lucas, 1st earl;) who enjoyed the honours without opposition or question on the part of the three daus. and heirs lineal of Peter, 4th earl. In about a century afterwards, however, the grandson of the youngest dau., Maurice O'Connor, Esq., made claim to the Barony of Killeen, as a barony created by writ, and, as such, inheritable through females. Like all other claims of the same nature, it has been unsuccessful, though brought forward at a time when the feelings of the Irish government were violently excited against the Earl of Fingall. Robert, 6th Earl of Fingall, was a captain in Berwick's regiment, in the service of France. He m. Mary, dau. of Roger Magenis, Esq. of Iveagh, co. Down; and dying in 1738, left, with a dau., Anne, wife of William Saltmarsh, Esq. of Yorkshire, a son and successor,

ARTHUR-JAMES, 7th earl, then in his seventh year. His lordship m. in 1755, Henrietta-Maria, only dau. and heir of William Wollascot,* Esq. of Woolhampton, co. Berks, by whom (who d. 12 March, 1806) he had issue,

ARTHUR-JAMES, his heir.

Luke, a capt. in the Austrian service; killed in Italy, in 1794.

Robert, b. 15 Sept. 1765; and d. unm. in 1823.

William, b. in 1770; a col. in the Austrian service; d. at Prague, in 1806.

Theresa, m. to the late James Dease, Esq. of Turbotstown, co. Westmeath, and has, with other children, Gerald Dease, Esq. of Turbotstown.

His lordship d. 31 Aug. 1793, and was s. by his son,

ARTHUR-JAMES, 8th earl, K.P., b. 9 Sept. 1759; who was created a peer of the United Kingdom, 20 June, 1831, by the title of Baron Fingall, of Woolhampton Lodge, co. Berks. He m. 18 Dec. 1785, Frances, only dau. of John Donelan, Esq. of Bally Donelan, in the co. Galway, by whom (who d. 30 Jan. 1835) he had issue,

ARTHUR-JAMES, present earl.

Harriet, m. 11 Sept. 1817, to John Jones, Esq. of Llanarth Court, in the co. of Monmouth, who d. 22 April, 1848. (See BURKE'S Landed Gentry.)

FISHERWICK, BARON, co. Stafford.

See MARQUESS OF DONEGAL.

* William Wollascot is supposed by the Rev. Thomas Wharton, in his "History and Antiquities of Kiddington," to be of the same family as the Wellescots, or Welleumscots, who formerly held that manor. "Of the name of Wellescote, corrupted from Welleumscott, there is," says Mr. Wharton, "a family seated at Woolhampton, near Newbury, in Berkshire. They write Wollascote. The last heiress, as I apprehend, intermarried with the Earl of Fingall, an Irish peer, within these last twenty years (1733), who is now living in that place."

After the Restoration, he presented a petition to CHARLES II., praying to be reinstated in the property of which CROMWELL had deprived him; but the act of settlement having passed, his petition was in vain. In consequence of the destruction of the castle of Clenglish, the baronet established himself at the castle of Ishen, co. Lineage.

In 1556, Hugh Fitz William, Esq. of Sprotburgh, co. York, collected the records of his family, and from these records the following particulars are partly deduced:—

SIR WILLIAM FITZ GODRIC, cousin to King EDWARD the Confessor, left a son and heir,

SIR WILLIAM FITZWILLIAM, who, being ambassador at the court of WILLIAM, Duke of Normandy, attended that prince in his victorious expedition against England, as marshal of the army, A.D. 1066; and for his valour at the battle of Hastings, the CONQUEROR presented him with a scarf from his own arm. This Sir William was father of

SIR WILLIAM FITZWILLIAM, Kent., who m. Eleanor, dau. and heir of Sir John Elmley, of Elmley and Sprotburgh, by which marriage the Fitzwilliams obtained the lordships of Elmley and Sprotborough, which continued with them until the reign of HENRY VIII., when those lordships were carried, by co-heirs, into the families of Suthill and Copley. Sir William was s. by his son,

SIR WILLIAM FITZWILLIAM, Lord of Elmley and Sprotburgh, living in 1117, as appears from a grant made by him of a piece of the wood in Elmley to the monks of Piland. To this grant, in a round seal, is represented man on horseback, completely armed, and circumscribed, S. Willmi Fitz Willmi Dni de Emmalaia; and on the reverse, the arms of Fitzwilliam; viz., Lozeagy. This Sir William, or one of his descendants, caused a cross to be set up in the high street of Sprotborough, with these words engraven on brass:—

“Whoso is hungry, and list, will eate,
Let him come to Sprotburgh to his meate;
And for a night, and for a day,
His horse shall have both corn and hay,
And no man shall ask him where he goeth away.”

Which cross was pulled down in 1590. From this Sir William we pass to his descendant,

SIR JOHN FITZWILLIAM, who founded in 1373 the Chantry of St. Edward, in the church of Sprotburgh; and having m. Elizabeth, dau. of William, Lord Clinton, had three sons, the eldest of whom,

SIR WILLIAM FITZWILLIAM, m. Maud, dau. of Ralph, Lord Cromwell of Tattershall, and co-heir of the Lord-Treasurer Cromwell, by whom he had one son and two daus., and was s. by the former,

SIR JOHN FITZWILLIAM, who m. Eleanor, dau. of Sir Henry Green, of Drayton, and had six sons and a dau. The youngest son,

JOHN FITZWILLIAM, Esq. of Milton and Green's Norton, in Northamptonshire, m. Eleanor, dau. of William Villers, Esq. of Brokeby, co. Leicester, by whom he had three sons and two daus., and was s. by his eldest son,

SIR WILLIAM FITZWILLIAM, of Milton and Gainspark, co. Essex, and also of the city of London, of which he was sheriff in 1566, and subsequently alderman of Bread-street Ward. He had been for some time in the train of Cardinal Wolsey, and retiring afterwards to his house at Milton, there gave his old master, the cardinal, in the hour of his disgrace, a kind reception; for which conduct, being brought to task by King HENRY, he replied, that he had not acted in contemptuous disobedience of his highness's orders, but in gratitude to the fallen minister, who had been his master, and partly the founder of his good fortune: at which answer the king was so pleased, that he immediately knighted Mr. Fitzwilliam, and made him one of his privy council. Sir William m. 1st, Anne, dau. of Sir John Hawes, Knt. of the city of London, and had,

WILLIAM, his heir.

Richard, of Ringstede, Northamptonshire, and had a son, John, who d. s. p. in 1568.

He m. 2ndly, Mildred, dau. of Richard Sackville, of Buckhurst, co. Sussex, and had three sons and two daus.,

Thomas, of Northborough, in Northamptonshire.

Eleanor, m. to Sir Nicholas L'Estrange, Knt. of Hunstanton.

Mary, m. 1st, to Sir William Shelley, Knt.; and 2ndly, to Sir John Gullford.

Sir William d. in 1534, and was succeeded by his eldest son,

SIR WILLIAM FITZWILLIAM, Knt., who m. Anne, dau. of Sir Richard Sapcote, of Elton, co. Huntingdon, and left at his decease three sons, and one dau., Christian, m. 1st, to Sir Richard Wingfield, Knt., and 2ndly, to Sir George Delves, Knt. The eldest son,

SIR WILLIAM FITZWILLIAM, was lord-deputy and lord-justice of Ireland, from 1560 to 1594. This eminent person is thus noticed by Fuller, in his Worthies of England:—“Sir William Fitzwilliam was five times lord-deputy of Ireland, a sufficient evidence of his honesty and ability, Queen ELIZABETH never trusting twice where she was once deceived in a minister of state. And she also preserved him in the power of his place, that sending over Walter, Earl of Essex, to be governor of Ulster, the earl was ordered to take his commission from the lord-deputy.” Sir William m. Agnes, dau. of Sir William Sydney, and aunt of the 1st Earl of Leicester, and had issue,

His lordship s., upon the demise of his father, 4 May, 1843, as premier baron of Scotland, and 18th in succession.

Lineage.

The surname of Forbes was assumed from the lands of Forbes, co. Aberdeen, granted by ALEXANDER II., about the middle of the 13th century, to the progenitor of this noble family.

JOHN DE FORBES, the first upon record, was a man of rank and importance in the reign of King WILLIAM THE LION. He was father of FERDUS DE FORBES, from whom all the Scottish families of the name have descended. The eldest son and successor of this Ferigus,

ALEXANDER DE FORBES, a man of great personal valour, lost his life in defence of the castle of Urquhart, in Murray, against EDWARD I. The fortress was taken by storm, after a gallant resistance, and the whole garrison put to the sword, none escaping but the wife of the governor, who fled into Ireland, and there gave birth soon afterwards to a son,

ALEXANDER FORBES, who returned to Scotland, and attaching himself to the fortunes of King ROBERT BRUCE, obtained grants of land equivalent to those of which his father had been despoiled. He fell at the battle of Duplin, in 1332, and was s. by his son,

SIR JOHN FORBES, Knt., who lived and was eminently distinguished in the reigns of ROBERT II. and III. He m. Elizabeth, dau. of Kennedy, of Denure, (an ancestor of the noble house of Cassilis,) by whom he had four sons, viz.,

ALEXANDER (Sir), his successor, and 1st lord.

William (Sir), ancestor of the Lords Pitsligo.

John (Sir) ancestor of the Forbes's of Culloden, Water-toun, and Foveran.*

Alexander, the younger, ancestor of the Forbes's of Brux, &c.

Sir John d. in 1405, and was s. by his eldest son,

SIR ALEXANDER DE FORBES. This gentleman, who was distinguished as a patriot, went to France to oppose the English under HENRY V., and carried with him in his

* Descended from Sir John Forbes was DUNCAN FORBES, M.P., provost of Inverness, who purchased the barony of Culloden from the Laird of Mackintosh, in 1626. Duncan had two brothers, JOHN, whose son Malcolm, became Marquis of Montilly, in France; and PATRICK, (commonly Black Patrick, baillie of Inverurie,) from whom descended the family of Forbes of Foveran. Duncan Forbes d. 14 Oct. 1654, aged eighty-two. By his marriage with Janet, eldest dau. of James Forbes, of Corsinday, (a family also descended from that of Lord Forbes,) Duncan had, with two daus., (Elizabeth, m. to William Baillie, of Duncan; and Anna, m. 1st, to Evan Macpherson, of Cluny, and 2ndly, to Alexander Mackintosh, of Connedge,) three sons, JOHN, his heir; James (Capt.), of Caithness; and Duncan (Capt.), of Assynt. The eldest son,

JOHN FORBES, the second of Culloden, m. (contract dated 1643) Anna, eldest dau. of Alexander Dunbar, of Grange, by his first wife, Jean Campbell, dau. of Sir John Campbell, of Cawdor, (a family since raised to the Earldom of Cawdor,) and by the said Anna had six sons and two daus., viz., I. DUNCAN, his heir; II. DAVID (Sir), of Newhall, one of the Judges of the Court of Session, an eminent lawyer and man of letters, an influential patron of Allan Ramsay; III. THOMAS, IV. ALEXANDER, who went to New England; V. JONATHAN, M.D. of Elgin; VI. JOHN (Lieut.-Col.), of Pitcairnieff; I. JEAN, m. to Sir Robert Munro; and, II. NAOMI, m. to Robert Dunbar, of Burgie. John Forbes was provost of Inverness, (we believe M.P. for the county,) and the friend and coadjutor of the Marquis of Argyll. He d. about the year of the Revolution, 1688, and was s. by his eldest son,

DUNCAN FORBES, the third of Culloden, who m. (contract dated 1668) Mary, dau. of Sir Robert Innes, of that ilk. By this lady he had two sons, JOHN, his heir, b. about the year 1673; and DUNCAN, afterwards lord president, and seven daus. The eldest, Jean, m. to Sir Harry Innes, of that ilk; the second, Anna, to Peter Forbes, of Phyline, in Assynt; the third, Mary, (contract dated 1698,) to Robert Urquhart, of Burdsyards; the fourth, Margaret, (contract dated 1699,) to George Munro, of Newmore; the fifth, Isobell, to Fraser, of Achnagairn; the sixth, Naomi, to Dr. Alexander Paterson, of Inverness; and the seventh, Grizell, (contract dated 21 April, 1709,) to David Ross, of Kincaide. Duncan Forbes latterly served in parliament for the co. of Nairn, and d. in 1704. He was s. by his eldest son,

JOHN FORBES, the fourth of Culloden, M.P. for Inverness-shire. He m. (contract dated 1699) Jean Gordon, dau. of Sir Robert Gordon, of Gordonstone, by Margaret, eldest dau. of William, Lord Forbes, and dying without issue, in the year 1734, was s. by the Lord Advocate of Scotland, his only brother,

THE RIGHT HONOURABLE DUNCAN FORBES, fifth laird of Culloden, the celebrated Lord President of the Court of Session, so distinguished in the great political events of his time, and so pre-eminently serviceable to government during the rising of '45. From the Edinburgh Review, (Feb. 1816,) of the "Culloden Papers, comprising an extensive and interesting correspondence, from the year 1625 to 1748," discovered in 1812, by the late Hugh-Robert Duff, Esq. of Muirtown, and under his superintendence, published by Cadell and Davies, in 1815, we extract the following passage:—"The Culloden Papers are a collection of documents, consisting chiefly of letters of correspondence, which were lately found in Culloden House, belonging to the family of Forbes, in the vicinity of Inverness. That family had long been distinguished as the head or principal member (it is now indifferent which) of one of the great highland clans, and was formerly still more conspicuous by the share which it took in all the public transactions of its native land. But the most brilliant and honourable part of its history, is that which records the life of Duncan Forbes, who died President of the Court of Session, in the year 1747. This eminent man raised himself to that high station by the unassisted train one hundred horse and forty lances. He was elevated to the peerage of Scotland by JAMES II., prior to 1436, by the title of BARON FORBES. His lordship m. Lady Elizabeth Douglas, dau. of George, Earl of Angus, and granddau. of ROBERT III.; and dying in 1448, was s. by his eldest son,

JAMES, 2nd baron. This nobleman m. Lady Egidin Keith, dau. of William, the 1st Earl Marischal, by whom he had one dau., and three sons, WILLIAM, his successor.

Duncan,* of Corsindie, ancestor of the Forbes's of Pitsligo, and other families of the name.

Patrick,* of Corse, armour-bearer to JAMES III., whose grandson, Sir Arthur Forbes, was progenitor of the Forbes's, Earls of Granard, in Ireland.

His lordship was s. at his decease (about 1460) by his eldest son,

WILLIAM, 3rd baron; who m. Christian, dau. of Alexander, 1st Earl of Huntley, and was s. by his eldest son,

ALEXANDER, 4th baron; at whose decease, without issue, the dignity devolved upon his brother, excellence of a noble character, by the force of which he had previously won and adorned all the subordinate gradations of office. He took the lead in all affairs touching Scotland, for nearly half of the last century, was particularly active during the two rebellions—maintained a constant intercourse with all the great men of his day, both Scotch and English, and died, leaving behind him a bright and unenvied reputation, of which the recollection is scarcely yet effaced in this country. Forbes displays one of those characters which are sometimes to be found in what Hume calls the corners of history, but which deserves to be blazoned at large on its broadest page. He is in every situation so full of honour, of gentleness, of true wisdom, of kindness and intrepidity, that we doubt if there be any one public man of his part of the empire, or of the age that is gone, whose qualities ought to be so strongly recommended to the contemplation of all those who wish truly to serve their country. There are various lords and lairds who make but a shabby figure in this collection, but our great pride and consolation is in the ever clear honour and open heart of him to whom they address themselves. For Duncan Forbes no descendant will ever have cause to blush or feel ashamed; and the perusal of this book will prove, that Scotland, even since she ceased to be a separate kingdom, has had at least one statesman whose principles were as pure as his understanding was enlightened, and whose concern for his country was not so much as suspected to be quickened by any regard to his own power or emolument." "His natural talents," says another respectable authority, "were of the very first order, enlarged by an excellent education, completely disciplined and fully matured by habits of intense study, and of minute, and at the same time extensive observation; and they were all employed most honourably and conscientiously in the real business of life. His learning was profound, and extensive beyond that of his contemporaries, and in forcible, manly, and persuasive eloquence at the Scottish bar, he had no competitor; yet, with all this vast and visible superiority, he was never dogmatical. Everything like artifice he held in abhorrence; and truth and justice, being at all times the objects he aimed at, the law of kindness was ever on his lips, and an impress of candour and sincerity gave an oracular dignity to every sentiment which he uttered. Of the volume of inspiration, which he could consult with advantage in the original tongue, he was a diligent student. Being called upon rather for active personal exertion than for those efforts of mind which can be well and successfully made only in the seclusion of the closet, and through the medium of the press, of course his writings are not numerous, but they exhibit strong traces of a pure, a pious, and an original mind. In the infant manufactures of his country he took unceasing interest, and his upright and pure spirit breathed into her tribunals of justice an order and an equitable impartiality to which they were before total strangers, and which to this day happily never have forsaken them. Besides the new order of court, as to the hearing of causes, which he had the merit of introducing, he wrought great and happy changes in the manner of the judges. In private life he was everything that is amiable; as a husband and a father, affectionately tender; as a friend, generous in the extreme. His neighbours he was always ready to oblige, and merit of every description found in him a prompt, a steady, and a disinterested patron. He was sprung from a family whose hospitality had been proverbial for ages, and to be of his party, in his moments of relaxation, was a felicity eagerly coveted by the greatest and wittiest men of his time. To sum up all in one word, such was the sterling

FORBES.

FORBES, SIR WILLIAM, of Craigievar, co. Aberdeen; b. 20 May, 1836; s. his father, as 8th bart., in Feb. 1846.

Lineage.

This family is a branch of the ancient and noble house of the Lords Forbes, springing from

THE HON. PATRICK FORBES, of Corse, armour-bearer to JAMES III., and Baron of O'Neill, by charter in 1476; son of James, 2nd Lord Forbes, by Lady Egidia Keith, dau. of William, 1st Earl Marischal. The king bestowed upon him, for his services, the Barony of O'Neill—viz., lands of Coule Kincraig and Corse—which was confirmed by charter under the great seal, 10 Oct. 1482. His son,

DAVID, called "Trail the axe," Laird of Corse and Baron of O'Neill, by charter, Davidi filio Patricki Forbes terrarum de Corse, &c. 30 April, 1506, obtained a subsequent charter from the crown, uniting the lands of O'Nele Cors, Kincragy, &c., along with other lands into the hall and free Barony of O'Nele, "cum furca fossa pitt et gallous, &c." He m. Elizabeth, sister to Paniter or Panter, of Newmanswells, secretary of state to King JAMES IV., and had,

Bishop Forbes d. in 1635, and his male line failing with his grandchildren, the representation and family estates reverted to the descendants of his brother,

WILLIAM FORBES, of Craigievar, first styled of Menie, second son of William Forbes, 4th Baron of O'Neill, and Laird of Corse. This gentleman obtained large possessions in the cos. of Aberdeen, Banff, Forfar, Edinburgh, &c., as appears from several charters under the great seal. (See DOUGLAS'S Barometage.) He completed the unfinished castle of Craigievar in 1626, after the most sumptuous style of the period, and took his designation therefrom. The name of Craigievar, or, in Gaelic, "Creg a Mhar," means the rock of Mar; and the place from tradition derives considerable interest. In its immediate vicinity are two or three long trenches on the top of the hill of Corse, supposed to be a camp or fortification of Macbeth; and near this there are a great number of small tumuli, now overgrown with short heath, the last memorials of those who fell, "when Birnam forest came to Dunsinane." At a small distance from these, and upon the same hill, the spot is shown where Macduff killed Macbeth; and there is still a large cairn, called Macbeth's, in which ancient arms were found some years ago. FOULIS.

LISTON-FOULIS, SIR WILLIAM, of Colinton and Ravelston, (lineal descendant of Sir John Foulis, Bart. of Ravelston, which latter dignity was forfeited by the 2nd baronet, Sir Archibald Primrose, who was beheaded for high treason in 1745, at Carlisle;) born 27 July, 1812; s. his father, as 8th bart., in April, 1822; m. 20 June, 1843. Miss Ramage Liston, elder surviving dau. of the late Capt. Ramage Liston, R.N., and grandniece and heiress of the late Rt. Hon. Sir Robert Liston, G.C.B., her Britannic Majesty's ambassador to the Sublime Porte; and in consequence of this marriage, Sir William has assumed the additional surname of LISTON, and has issue, JAMES-LISTON, b. 1 July, 1847. Another son, b. 1 July, 1848. Janet-Agnes-Harriet.

Lineage.

It is universally admitted that the surname of Foulis is of Norman origin. The progenitor of the family came into England either at or before the Conquest, and his armorial bearings being three leaves, called feuilles, in the old Norman, it is certain that the name was either given to the family whilst residing in South Britain, or else assumed by the individual who first took up his abode in Scotland, in the reign of MALCOLM CAN-MOHR, when surnames were for the first time adopted.

JAMES FOULIS, Esq. of Colinton, son of Henry Foulis, by Margaret Haldane, of Geneagies, and 5th in descent from William Foulis, secretary to King JAMES I., was living temp. Queen MARY and JAMES VI. of Scotland. He m. Anna Heriot, heir of Lumphoy, and had four sons, JAMES, his successor.

George, who m. Janet Banatyne, only child of the compiler of the MSS. in the Advocate's Library, and was father of George, of Ravelston, who m. Jean, dau. of Sir John Sinclair, of Stevenston, and had a son, SIR JOHN FOULIS, of Ravelston, created a baronet in 1661, lineal ancestor of the present SIR WILLIAM-LISTON FOULIS, Bart. David, progenitor of the English Baronets Foulis, of Ingleby Manor, co. York. John, of Leadhills, whose granddau., Anne, heir of Leadhills, m. Sir James Hope, of Hopetoun, from whom the Earls of Hopetoun descend.

This James Foulis was s. at his decease by his eldest son, SIR JAMES FOULIS, Knt. This gentleman m. Mary, dau. of Sir John Lauder, of Hatton, and left, with a dau., Margaret, wife of Louis Dick, Esq., an only son,

I. ALEXANDER FOULIS, Esq., who was created a Baronet of Nova Scotia, with remainder to his heirs male whatsoever, 7 June, 1634. Sir Alexander m. Elizabeth, dau. of Robert Hepburn, Esq. of Ford, great-granddau. of the Earl of Bothwell, and relic of the great sheriff of Bute, (by whom she had a son, the progenitor of the Marquess of Bute.) By this lady Sir Alexander had one dau., who was m. to the first Earl of Haddington, and an only son, his successor,

II. SIR JAMES. This gentleman had the honour of knighthood conferred upon him during the lifetime of his father, and was actively engaged in the unfortunate warfare which ravaged Scotland after the death of King CHARLES I. Having, along with others, attended a convention of the committee of estates, at Elliot, in Angus, he was betrayed into the hands of the English, and with his companions, the Earls of Leven, Crawford, Marischal, Lord Ogilvy, and several gentlemen of rank, surprised on Thursday morning, 28 Aug. 1651, by a squadron of dragoons, commanded by Colonel Aldridge, who carried the whole party to Brugty, and consigned them thence in a vessel to London. After the restoration of the monarchy, Sir James was constituted, in 1661, one of the senators of the College of Justice, and in 1684, appointed lord-chief-justice-clerk, which high offices he held under the titular designation of Lord Colinton. His lordship m. Barbara, dau. of Alexander Ainslie, Esq. of Dolphington, by whom he had two sons. He d. 19 Jan. 1618, and was s. by the elder,

III. SIR JAMES, a lord of Session, privy-councillor, and member of the last Scottish parliament, in 1706, at which time he joined the Dukes of Hamilton and Atholl, and many others of the nobility and gentry, in their celebrated protest, made by Lord Erroll, the earl-mareschal, respecting the most constitutional military defence of the house of legislature. He also joined in the protest which declared that an incorporating union of the two nations was inconsistent with the honour of Scotland. Sir James had subsequently a seat in the first British parliament. He m. Margaret, dau. of John Boyd, Esq., dean of the Guild of Edinburgh, descended of the family of Kilmarnock, by whom he had seven sons, of whom six died s. p. Sir James d. in 1711, and was s. by his eldest son,

IV. SIR JAMES; at whose decease, unm. in 1742, the title devolved upon his nephew,

V. SIR JAMES, eldest and only surviving son of Henry Foulis, Esq., (3rd son of Sir James, the 3rd baronet.) by Jean, dau. of James Foulis, Esq., merchant in Edinburgh, and niece of Sir John Foulis, Bart. of Ravelston, (so created in 1661.) This gentleman m. Mary, dau. of Archibald Wightman, by whom he had two sons and three daus., and was s. at his decease, in Jan. 1791, by his only surviving son,

VI. SIR JAMES. This gentleman m. twice; 1st, a Spanish lady; and 2ndly, Miss Dallas; but had no issue: whereupon the title devolved upon his kinsman, JAMES FOULIS, Esq. of Woodhall, the late baronet, son of William Foulis, Esq., only child of John Foulis, of Woodhall, whose father, William Foulis, of Woodhall, was 2nd son of Sir John Foulis, 1st Bart. of Ravelston, by Margaret his wife, dau. of Sir Archibald Primrose, of Carrington, which Sir John of Ravelston was cousin of the 1st Baronet of Colinton. The present Sir James represents, therefore, the house of Colinton, Woodhall, and Ravelston. The second Baronet of Ravelston (who was son of the first baronet's eldest son, George-Primrose Foulis, Esq., by whom the lands of Dunhaec were inherited in right of his mother, Margaret, dowager of Sir Archibald Primrose, and mother of the 1st Earl of Rosebery) bore the designation of Sir Archibald Primrose, of Ravelston; which Sir Archibald m. his cousin, Lady Mary Primrose, dau. of the 1st Earl of Rosebery, and had an only son, Archibald, who d. in early life, issueless. Sir Archibald was involved in the rebellion of 1745, and beheaded at Carlisle, when his honours ceased.

The ancient family of Morres, or Morris, is stated to be descended from a common ancestor with the illustrious house of Montmorency, and to have come into England with the CONQUEROR.

HERVEY DE MONTE MARISCON, the nephew of Richard, Earl Strongbow, accompanied his uncle in the expedition to Ireland, and obtained considerable territorial grants in the counties of Wexford, Tipperary, and Kerry, some of which still remain in the possession of the family, but the great part has been carried by intermarriages into the houses of Leinster and Ormonde. From this Hervey descended

SIR JOHN MORRES, Bart. of Knockagh, co. Tipperary, whose grandson,

* In the time of ELIZABETH, Sir Andrew Noel, Knt. of Dalby, the representative of a family of eminence from the time of the first Plantagenets, and the father of the first Lord Campden, lived in such magnificence as to vie with noblemen of the largest fortunes; and, as Fuller records, was "for person, parentage, grace, gesture, valour, and many other excellent parts, (amongst which skill in music,) of the first rank at court." He stood high in the favour of his royal mistress, by whom he was knighted; but the expenses he became involved in, occasioned the sale of his fine manor of Dalby, and the following distich, which the queen made of the occasion:—

"The word of denial, and letter of fifty,
Is that gentleman's name who will never be thrifty."

During the civil conflicts which darkened the reign of CHARLES I., the son and grandson of this gallant courtier fought manfully on the side of royalty, and sustained the loss of their princely seat at Campden, which was burnt by the cavaliers to prevent its becoming a garrison to the parliament. In requital, Edward, sixth Viscount Campden, was advanced to the dignity of Earl of Gainsborough, in 1682, and that title remained with his descendants until the decease, in 1798, of the last earl, upon whose nephew, Sir Gerard Noel, (the son of his sister, Lady Jane Noel, by Gerard-Anne Edwards, Esq. of Welham Grove,) the great estates of the family devolved.

This nobleman received the honour of knighthood, in 1567, from the Lord-Deputy Sidney, who thus mentions him in a letter to the lords of the council, dated Limerick, 27 Feb. 1577:—"There were with me that descended of English race, Sir Maurice Fitzgarrold, brother to the Vicounte Decies; Sir Thibald Butler, whose uncle and cozen-germaine were Baronnes of the Cayre, whose lands he lawfullye and justlye enjoyete, and better deserveth that title of honor than any of them ever did; for whome I entende more specialyie to write, for trulye, for his deserte, he is worthye any commendation." This nobleman was outlawed in 1691, for his adhesion to JAMES II., and suffered much privation in consequence, having had his estates for some time laid waste, and afterwards seized upon by the crown. Lineage.

The old and eminent family of GRACE ranks amongst the earliest of the Anglo-Norman settlers in Ireland. Under the banner of Richard de Clare, the well-known Strongbow, RAYMOND FITZ-WALTER, surnamed Le Gros, landed in that kingdom, became subsequently (anno 1176) its viceroy, and marrying Basilla de Clare, Strongbow's sister, acquired the extensive district in the county of Kilkenny, still denominated the "Cantred of Grace's Country." To this gallant soldier the Graces trace their foundation; and now, at nearly the close of seven centuries, it is but justice to observe, that the bright fame of the illustrious founder has passed un tarnished through the long line of his distinguished descendants. Ramond Le Gros had two sons,

 Sir Robert is one of the claimants to the Earldom of Annandale and Hartfell, as descendant of Sir George Graham and Lady Mary Johnston.

Lineage.

This family claims descent from the renowned GRAEME, who, anno 404, commanded King FERGUS THE SECOND'S army, and was governor of Scotland in the minority of his grandchild, EUGENE II. In the year 490, this gallant person made a breach in the mighty wall which the Emperor SEVERUS had erected between the rivers Forth and Clyde, which has ever since borne the name of GRAEME'S DYKE. From the time of this eminent man, the GRAEMES are to be found in the records of Scotland, enjoying the very highest influence; but our limits prohibit individual detail; we therefore pass to

SIR DAVID GRAHAM, of Montrose, who was taken prisoner with King DAVID BRUCE, at the battle of Durham, in 1346, and whose son,

SIR PATRICK GRAHAM, Lord of Dundaff and Kincardine, was appointed one of the hostages for the said King DAVID'S ransom, in 1357. This Sir Patrick m. twice: from his first marriage descend the Dukes of Montrose; and of the second (with Eupheme, dau. of Sir John Stewart, of Railston, brother to King ROBERT II.) there was a son, SIR ROBERT GRAHAM, Knt. of Ellieston, who m. Eupheme, only dau. and heir of David Stewart, Earl of Strathern, and obtained in consequence that earldom. (From this alliance the family quarters the royal arms of Stuart.)

This Sir Robert being slain by Sir John Drummond, in 1413, was s. by his son,

MALISE, Earl of Strathern, who changed the title to Menteth, that of Strathern being annexed to the royal house by King ROBERT II. This nobleman m. Anne, dau. of Henry Vere, Earl of Oxford, and had three sons and two daus.; the second of which sons,

THE HON. SIR JOHN GRAHAM, of Kilbride, called "John with the bright sword," left

RICHARD GRAHAM, from whom are lineally descended the Grahams of the borders, both of the English and Scottish side, but chiefly the houses of Netherby and Plom, co. Cumberland.

FERGUS GRAHAM, Esq. of Plom, m. Sibill, dau. of William Bell, Esq. of God's Brigg, in North Britain, and had four sons; the 2nd of whom,

I. RICHARD GRAHAM, Esq., gentleman of the horse to JAMES I., was created a Baronet, 20 March, 1629, by the style of Sir Richard Graham, of Esk, co. Cumberland. This gentleman purchased Netherby and the barony of Liddell, in the same county, of Francis, Earl of Cumberland. Sir Robert subsequently distinguished himself under the royal banner, particularly at Edge-Hill, where he was severely wounded, and lay amongst the slain for an entire night. He m. Catherine, dau. and co-heir of Sir Thomas Musgrave, of Cumcatch, Cumberland, and was s. in 1683 by his elder son, (the younger, Richard, was created a Baronet in 1662—see GRAHAM of NORTON-CONYERS.)

II. SIR GEORGE, who m. Lady Mary Johnston, dau. of James, 1st Earl of Hartfield, and sister of James, Earl of Annandale, and had, with other issue,

1. RICHARD, his successor, of whom presently.

II. William, in holy orders, D.D., and Dean of Carlisle and Wells, clerk of the closet, and chaplain to Queen ANNE; d. in 1712, and left issue,

1 Charles, in holy orders, rector of South Church, in Essex; m. Priscilla Billingsley, of Tottenham, and by her (who m. 2ndly, Joseph Bezeley, Esq.) had issue,

WILLIAM, in holy orders, who inherited the baronetcy upon the decease of the last Viscount Preston.

Thomas-Fane-Charles, in holy orders; m. Anne, dau. of Joseph Harrington, Esq. of Clare, co. Suffolk, and widow of the Rev. Francis Greenwood, by which 1st husband she had an only son, Charles Greenwood, Esq., the eminent army-agent, and a dau., Anne, m. to Thomas Hammersley, Esq. of Pall-mall.

Bridget, m. to Thomas Elkington, Esq. of Coventry.

Upon the Revolution, the viscount was committed to the Tower, but soon released from imprisonment. Lineage.

"The ancient and powerful family of Graham," says Sir Walter Scott, in the Lady of the Lake, "held extensive possessions in the counties of Dumbarton and Stirling. Few families can boast of more historical renown, having claim to three of the most remarkable characters in the Scottish annals: Sir John Greeme, the faithful and undaunted partaker of the labours and patriotic warfare of Wallace, fell in the unfortunate field of Falkirk, in 1296. The celebrated Marquess of Montrose, in whom De Retz saw realized his abstract ideas of the heroes of antiquity, was the second of these worthies; and notwithstanding the severity of his temper, and the vigour with which he executed the oppressive mandates of the Purics, whom he served, I do not hesitate to name, as the third, John Graham, of Claverhouse, Viscount of Dundee, whose heroic death, in the arms of victory, may be allowed to cancel the memory of his cruelty to the nonconformists during the reigns of Charles II. and James II."

The Grahams of Norton Conyers, (of which we are about to treat,) the Grahams of Esk, and the Grahams of Netherby, derive their descent from the same common ancestor; namely, of Castle Donnington, co. Leicester; and a Baronet of Nova Scotia; b. 5 Aug. 1833; s. as 7th earl, upon the decease of his grandfather, 9 June, 1837.

GRANARD, EARL OF, (George-Arthur-Hastings Forbes,) Viscount Granard, and Baron of Clane-hugh, in the peerage of Ireland; Baron Granard.

Lineage.

The surname of Forbes is said to be a corruption of "Forbest," which was originally assumed by the founder of the family in Scotland, to commemorate the achievement of having destroyed a ferocious bear, which had infested the country.

SIR ARTHUR FORBES, Knt., (directly descended from the Hon. Patrick Forbes, of Crose, younger son of James, 2nd Lord Forbes, of Scotland, and Egidia, his wife, dau. of William Keith, earl-marshal of the same kingdom,) settled in Ireland in 1620, and was made by patent, dated at Dublin, in 1622, a free denizen of that kingdom. In 1628, Sir Arthur was created a Baronet of Nova Scotia; and having, by petition to the king, made discovery that several royal fishings in the province of Ulster belonged to the crown, an inquiry was thereupon instituted, and Sir Arthur eventually rewarded by a grant of such proportion of the said fisheries as he thought proper to demand, besides the sum of £3000 from the first profits of the remainder. He had previously obtained extensive territorial possessions from the crown, particularly a grant of sundry lands in the co. of Longford, in all 1266 acres, which were erected into the manor of Castle Forbes, with the usual manorial privileges. Sir Arthur m. Jane Lowther, and falling in a duel at Hamburg, in 1632, where he had accompanied his regiment (he was lieut.-col. in the army) to assist GUSTAVUS-ADOLPHUS of Sweden, was s. by his eldest son,

SIR ARTHUR, b. in 1623. This gentleman, who zealously espoused the royal cause in Scotland, was rewarded, after the Restoration, by being sworn of the privy council in Ireland, (A.D. 1670,) and appointed marshal of the army in that kingdom. In 1671, Sir Arthur was constituted one of the lords-justices, and again in 1673, when he was elevated to the peerage, (by patent, dated 22 Nov.,) as Baron Clanehugh and Viscount Granard. In 1684, his lordship was made col. of the royal regt. of foot in Ireland, and lieut.-gen. in the army; and on the 30th Dec., in the same year, created EARL OF GRANARD. Lineage.

This family is descended from the very ancient family of Grant, of Grant, now Earl of Seafield, Viscount Redhaven, as follows—

JAMES GRANT, of that ilk, a man of bold and daring disposition, of good parts, and in great favour with JAMES V., from whom he obtained a charter, exempting him from attendance in any court of judicature whatsoever, for his good services done and to be done, &c., dated Stirling, anno 1635; afterwards got a charter under the great seal, from Queen MARY, "Jacobo de Freuchy, Terrarum de Lochelsh, Lochcarron, Lochbrine, &c.," in Invernesshire, dated 4 March, 1548. He m. 1st, Lady Janet Leslie, dau. of George, 4th Earl of Rothes, widow of Crichton, of Naughton, by whom he had no issue. He was progenitor of the Grants of Ballantomb, Cullen, Monymusk, &c. From him, the first of Ballentomb, we proceed to trace the descent of the Monymusk family. Archibald d. in 1717, and was s. by his eldest son,

I. SIR FRANCIS GRANT, Lord Cullen, b. in 1666. He was bred to the bar, and displayed such ability and integrity as an advocate, that soon after the Revolution, he was appointed one of the senators of the College of Justice, by the title of Lord Cullen, from an estate which he possessed in Buchan. About the end of the 17th century, he purchased the estate of Monymusk from the ancestor of the present Sir John Stuart Forbes, Bart. of Pitaligo; in 1705, he was raised to the dignity of a Baronet of Nova Scotia by Queen ANNE; and 17 May, 1739, he received a special warrant, under the hand of his Majesty GEORGE I., granting him the unusual armorial addition of a bordure ermine, as a testimony of his sovereign's favour, and a memorial of his judicial eminence; together with two angels as supporters, the motto "Suum cuique," on a scroll above, and the motto, "Jehovah Jireh," on a scroll below—the only instance in Scottish heraldry of a Hebrew motto. He early foresaw the important advantages that would accrue to Scotland from a union with England; and to this great measure he gave his zealous and influential support. He was endued with great mental qualities. GRAY

GRAY, BARON, (John Gray,) of Gray, co. Forfar, and of Kinfauns Castle, co. Perth, in the peerage of Scotland, and a representative peer; b. 12 May, 1798; m. 23 July, 1833, Mary-Anne, dau. of the late Lt.-Col. C.-P. Ainslie, 2nd son of the deceased Sir Philip Ainslie, of Pilton. His lordship s. as 16th baron, upon the decease of his father, 20 Aug. 1842.

Lineage.

This family is descended from a common progenitor with the extinct ducal houses of Suffolk and Kent, the baronial houses of Gray and Warwick, and the existing houses of Dorset, Tankerville, and Stamford; namely, Aneschet de Croy, one of the companions in arms of WILLIAM the Conqueror, who obtained large grants of land in the co. Oxford, and other places. From this person sprang

SIR ANDREW GRAY, of Chillingham, co. Northumberland, who, in reward for his good and faithful services, obtained from King ROBERT BRUCE, in 1306, the manor of Longford, co. Perth, with other lands in the co. Forfar, and the lands of Brownfield and Broxmouth. From this Sir Andrew directly descended

SIR ANDREW GRAY, of Broxmouth, who was created a Lord of Parliament before 9 Oct. 1437, by the title of LORD GRAY of Gray. (There is a doubt, however, whether this was the 1st lord, as the precise date of creation is not ascertained—see Creation.) His lordship m. 1st, Janet, dau. of Sir Roger de Mortimer, with whom he obtained the Barony of Foulis, and by her had a son, Andrew, and six daus. He m. 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. of Sir Walter Buchanan, Knt., and had four sons and a dau. He d. in the year 1449-50, and was s. by his eldest son,

ANDREW, 2nd baron; one of the eminent persons who became hostages for the Scottish King JAMES I. in 1434. His lordship was ambassador to England in 1449 and 1451. He d. in 1469. This nobleman obtained a licence from the crown to build the strong and beautiful castle of Huntly, in the Carse of Gowrie, (which his family possessed for some ages,) now called Castle Lyon, and belonging to the Earl of Strathmore. His lordship m. Elizabeth, eldest dau. of Sir John Wemyss, of Bires, and was s. by his grandson,

ANDREW, 3rd baron, (son of Patrick, master of Gray, by Annabella, dau. of Alexander, Lord Forbes.) This nobleman was one of the privy council to JAMES IV., and justice-general of Scotland. He m. 1st, Janet, only dau. of John, Lord Keith, son of William, Earl Marischal, by whom he had PATRICK, his successor, and two daus. He m. 2ndly, Lady Elizabeth Stewart, 3rd dau. of John, Earl of Atholl, uterine brother of JAMES II., and had a numerous family; of which the eldest surviving son,

His lordship d. in 1541, and was s. by his nephew,

PATRICK, 7th baron; who m. Lady Mary Stewart, eldest dau. of Robert, Earl of Orkney; and was s. in 1612, by his elder son, ANDREW, 8th baron. This nobleman was lieut. of the gens-d'armes in France, under Lord Gordon, in 1624; and was much employed in the wars there. He resigned the heritable sheriffship of Forfarshire to CHARLES I., for which he got his majesty's bond for 50,000 marks, which was never paid. He was banished the kingdom by the parliament for being with Montrose, in 1645, but this sentence does not appear to have been carried into effect. He was excommunicated by commission of the general assembly, in 1649, on account of his being a Roman catholic; and had a fine of £1500 imposed upon him by CROMWELL's act of grace and pardon, in 1654. Lineage.

This family, which is of Norman extraction, traces its descent from Malahucius, uncle to Rollo, Duke of Normandy, the renowned ancestor of WILLIAM the Conqueror.

NIGELL, younger son of Roger de Toeny, standard-bearer of Normandy, son of the said Malahucius, arrived in England with an elder brother, Robert, (ancestor of the noble race of the Staffords,) in the train of WILLIAM; and at the time of the survey held extensive possessions in the cos. of Derby and Stafford, of which, Graselle or Gresley, in the former, where he fixed his abode, was one. GREY.

GREY, DE RUTHYN, BARONESS, (Barbara Yelverton,) Baroness Hastings of Ashley-Weyford and Valence; b. 20 May, 1810; s. in the same year, as 2nd baroness, (29 Oct. 1810,) upon the decease of her father, Henry, 19th Lord Grey de Ruthyn; m. 1st, 1 Aug. 1831, to George, late MARQUESS OF HASTINGS, and has issue. (See HASTINGS.) She m. 2ndly, 9 April, 1845, Captain Hastings-Reginald Henry, R.N. (who has assumed the surname of Yelverton), nephew of the Duke of Leinster, and has issue a dau., born 12 Jan. 1849.

Lineage.

The descent of this family is deduced, by a French genealogist and antiquary of great repute, (Francis de Belleforest, of Cominges,) from Rollo, chamberlain to Robert, Duke of Normandy, who obtained, by grant from his master, the castle and honour of Croy, in Picardy, whence the surname of De Croy (changed into De Grey) is said to have originated. In the 6th year of RICHARD I., that monarch conferred the manor of Thurrock, co. Essex, afterwards called Thurrock-Grey, upon

HENRY DE GREY, which grant was confirmed by King JOHN, who vouchsafed, by especial charter, to permit the said Henry to hunt the hare and fox in any lands belonging to the crown, save the king's own demesne parts. Henry de Grey m. Isolda, niece and heir of Robert Bar-dolf, and had, with other issue,

SIR JOHN DE GREY, of Eaton, near Fenny Stratford, Bucks, who was sheriff of the counties of Buckingham and Bedford, 23rd HENRY III.; and afterwards had summons to attend the king in his wars in France. In the 30th of the same monarch, he was appointed constable of the castle of Gannock, in North Wales; in seven years afterwards, he was made governor of Northampton castle; and the next year, constituted steward of all Gascoigne; but in two years subsequently, being, according to Matthew Paris, "an aged knight of much esteem for his courtesy and valour, as also chief of the king's council, and being weary of the vanities of the court, he withdrew himself." This Sir John d. 80th HENRY III., and was s. by his only son,

REGINALD DE GREY, who was justice of Chester, 9th EDWARD I., and obtained from that monarch, with other grants, the castle of Ruthyn, co. Denbigh. He m. Maud, dau. and heir of Henry de Longcamp, a great baron, whose principal seat was at Wilton Castle, in Herefordshire; and dying in 1307, was s. by his only son,

JOHN DE GREY, of Wilton, who, 4th EDWARD II., was summoned, with other noblemen, to be at London to attend the general council; and in the 10th of the same monarch, was appointed justice of North Wales, and governor of Carnarvon Castle. This nobleman m. for his 2nd wife, Maud, dau. of Ralph, Lord Bassett of Drayton, by whom he had an only son, (by his first wife he had a son, HENRY, his successor, ancestor of the Greys of Wilton,)

ROGER DE GREY, who had, with other considerable estates from his father, the castle of RUTHYN. In 1319, he was summoned to meet the king at Winchester, the second Sunday in Lent, to confer with him before his departure into Aquitaine, and was called to the parliament held at York, in 1324, as Lord Grey de Ruthyn. His lordship m. Elizabeth, dau. of John, Lord Hastings of Bergavenny, and Isabel, his wife, dau. of William de Valence, and sister and co-heir of Aymer de Valence, Earl of Pembroke, (whereby his posterity became heirs to the last John de Hastings, Earl of Pembroke, who was killed in a tournament at Woodstock, in Dec. 1390, (see BURKE'S Extinct and Dormant Peerage); and dying 6 March, 1352-3, was s. by his only surviving son,

REGINALD, 2nd baron; who d. in 1388, and was s. by his eldest son,

REGINALD, 3rd baron; who, on the death of John de Hastings, Earl of Pembroke, was found to be his next heir. He had afterwards a great contest in the court of Chivalry with Sir Edward de Hastings, touching the title of Lord Hastings and bearing the entire arms of the said John de Hastings, late Earl of Pembroke, which cause coming to a definitive sentence, 11th HENRY IV., the right and title to the said name and arms was adjudged to Lord Grey and his heirs, as Lord Hastings; and Sir Edward de Hastings, thenceforth prohibited to bear them, was sentenced to pay such costs of suit as should be appointed by the court. His lordship m. Margaret, dau. of William, Lord Roos, and had an only son,

John (Sir), who, dying in the lifetime of his father, left two sons by his wife, Constance, dau. of John Holland, Duke of Exeter, and widow of Thomas, Lord Mowbray, EDMUND, who s. his grandfather.

THOMAS, created Baron Grey of Rougemont; but being an active Lancastrian, was attainted 1st EDWARD IV., when his honours expired, and he d. s. p.

Lord Grey m. 2ndly, Joane, dau. and heir of William, Lord Astley, and had three sons, of whom EDWARD, the eldest, m. the heir of Ferrers of Groby, and was ancestor to the Duke of Suffolk and the present Earl of Stamford. His lordship d. in 1440, and was s. by his grandson,

EDMUND, 4th baron; created Earl of Kent, 3 May, 1465, and appointed lord-high-treasurer of England, in which superior dignity (the Earldom of Kent) the barony merged for 174 years, until the earldom became extinct at the demise of

HENRY, 8th earl and 11th baron, without male issue, in 1639. His lordship's great-great-grandfather, Henry Grey, 4th earl and 7th baron, never, owing to his poverty, assumed the family honours. Upon the demise of this 8th Earl of Kent, his nephew, (the son of his lordship's sister, Lady Susan Grey, who m. Sir Michael Longueville,)

CHARLES LONGUEVILLE, claimed the barony, and had his claim admitted, in 1648, as 12th Baron Grey de Ruthyn, in despite of the opposition of Anthony Grey, the 12th Earl of Kent, grounded upon the plea that, "when a barony by writ was once involved in an earldom, it should wait upon such earldom, and might not be subsequently transferred to another family by a dau. and heir, so long as the earldom continued in the male." The decision upon this case established the principle, that an earldom, or other superior dignity, does not attract a barony in fee. His lordship, who m. Frances, dau. and co-heir of Edward Neville, Esq., d. in three years afterwards, and was s. by his only dau.,

SUSAN LONGUEVILLE, who then became Baroness Grey de Ruthyn. Her ladyship m. Sir Henry Yelverton, Bart., of Easton Manduit, co. Northampton, the representative of a family of great antiquity in Norfolk, (see BURKE'S Extinct Baronetage;) and dying in 1676, was s. by her son,

SIR CHARLES YELVERTON, Bart., as 13th baron; who d. wm. in 1679, when the barony devolved upon his brother,

HENRY, 14th baron; who bore the spurs at the coronation of JAMES II., and WILLIAM and MARY, and was created, 21 April, 1690, Viscount Longueville. His lordship m. Barbara, dau. of John Talbot, Esq. of Laycock, co. Wilts, and was s. at his decease, 24 March, 1703-4, by his elder son, TALBOT, 15th baron and 2nd viscount; who was advanced to an earldom, as Earl of Sussex, 26 Sept. 1717. His lordship was appointed deputy-earl-marshal of England in 1735, and elected a knight of the Bath upon the revival of that order in the same year. The earl officiated as earl-marshal at the coronation of GEORGE II. His lordship m. Lucy, dau. of Henry Pelham, Esq. of Lewes, co. Sussex, and niece of Thomas, Lord Pelham, by whom he had two sons. He d. 27 Oct. 1731, and was s. by the elder,

GEORGE-AUGUSTUS, 2nd earl. This nobleman d. wm. in 1758, when the honours devolved upon his brother,

HENRY, 3rd earl; d. in 1729. His lordship m. 1st, Hester, dau. of John Hall, Esq. of Mansfield Woodhouse, Notts, by whom he had one surviving child,

Barbara, m. 27 Oct. 1775, to Edward Thornton Gould, Esq.; and d. 8 April, 1781, leaving issue by him (who d. 15 Feb. 1830,)

HENRY-EDWARD, successor to the barony.

Mary, m. in 1807, to the Hon. and Rev. Frederick Pows, son of Lord Lilford, and dying 19 Jan. 1837, aged 57, leaving Frederick-Henry, and other issue.

The earl m. 2ndly, Mary, dau. of John Vaughan, Esq. of Bristol, by whom he had no child. His lordship dying thus, in 1799, without male descendants, the Earldom of Sussex and the Viscounty of Longueville ceased, but the Barony of GREY DE RUTHYN devolved upon (the son of his deceased dau., Lady Barbara Gould) his grandson, HENRY-EDWARD GOULD, Esq., who thus became 19th Baron Grey de Ruthyn, and assumed, in 1800, the name and arms of YELVERTON. His lordship, d. in 1782, m. 21 June, 1809, Anna-Maria, dau. of Mr. William Kellam, of Ryton-upon-Dunsmore, co. Warwick, by whom (who m. 2ndly, in 1820, the Hon. and Rev. William Eden) he left at his decease, in 1810, an only child and heir, BARBARA, the present baroness. Her ladyship inherits the Barony of Hastings of Ashley, from Elizabeth, sister of John Hastings, 3rd baron, who m. Roger de Grey, of Ruthyn, and to whose descendant, Reginald, Lord Grey de Ruthyn, the right to bear the arms of Hastings was confirmed, as stated above.

Lineage.

This family claims descent from Gilbert, 2nd son of Malcolm, Lord of Macgregor, who d. in 1374; but whether the claim be well founded or not, it is certain that the Griersons of Lag have been settled in that part of Scotland for a period exceeding four centuries.

THOMAS GRIERSON, Laird of Arde, obtained, 6 Dec. 1408, a charter from his cousin, John M'Rath de Lachs, conveying to him all right and claim which he, the said John, had to the lands of Lag. From this Thomas lineally descended.

Lineage.

EDWARD NORTH was born about the year 1496, and brought up to the profession of the law; in which he made so fair a progress, that he was elected one of the council for the city of London. In the 22nd HENRY VIII., Mr. North was appointed joint-clerk of the parliament, and in six years afterwards (1536) he became one of the king's serjeants-at-law. On the surrender of the former post, he was made treasurer of the Court of Augmentations, an office newly erected upon the dissolution of the monasteries; and he became afterwards chancellor of the court. He was soon after knighted, and returned to parliament as representative of the co. Cambridge. We next find Sir Edward a privy-councillor, and in such favour with the king, as to obtain various grants of lands from the crown. But knowing how transitory were HENRY'S smiles, he seems to have always been in a state of alarm, of which the following occurrence is a sufficient illustration. One morning, a messenger from the king came to Sir Edward to command his immediate presence at court. He then resided at the Charter House; and one of his servants, an attendant in his bedchamber when the message was delivered, observed his master to tremble at it; but Sir Edward made the utmost haste to wait upon the king, and took with him his said servant. On his admittance, he found HENRY walking, who continued doing so with great earnestness, looking at him with an angry eye, which was received with a very still and sober carriage. At last the king broke out in these words: "We are informed you have cheated us of certain lands in Middlesex." And receiving no other than a plain and humble negation, the king, after some little pause, replied, "How was it, then? did we give those lands to you?" Whereunto Sir Edward answered, "Yes, sir; your majesty was pleased so to do." The king on this, after a brief pause, put on a milder countenance, and calling him to a cupboard, conferred privately with him a long time; whereby his servant (as Dudley, the 2nd Lord North, was informed) saw the king could not spare his master's service as yet. From this period Sir Edward advanced still higher in the estimation of the king, and at his highness's death was appointed one of his executors, with a legacy of £300. After the accession of EDWARD VI., he was re-sworn of the privy council, and re-elected for Cambridgehire. But upon the decease of that monarch, Sir Edward seems to have espoused the cause of Lady Jane Grey. He made his peace, however, very soon with Queen MARY, for on her accession he was again sworn of the privy council, and elevated to the peerage in the first year of her reign,

462

17 Feb. 1563-4, being then summoned to parliament as Baron North, of Kirtling, co. Cambridge, (a manor which he purchased about the time he was appointed clerk of the parliament.) In the reign of ELIZABETH, Lord North was constituted lord-Lieutenant of Cambridgehire and the Isle of Ely. His lordship m. 1st, Alice, dau. of Oliver Squyer, Esq. of Southby, co. His lordship d. 3 Dec. 1606; and he is thus briefly characterized by Camden—"He was a person of great business and vivacity, with a head and heart fit for the service." He was s. by his grandson,

DUDLEY, 3rd baron; who, according to Camden, "was a person full of spirit and flame; yet after he had consumed the greatest part of his estate in the gallantries of King JAMES'S court, or rather his son's, (Prince Henry,) retired and lived more honourably in the country upon what was left than ever he had done before." This is a branch of the ducal house of Hamilton springing from

THOMAS HAMILTON, of Orchartfield, who acquired, in 1522, from John, Earl of Lennox, the Barony of Bathgate, co. Linlithgow; and in 1524 purchased the lands of Ballicrieff, in the same shire. He was s. by his son,

He became tutor to the Cardinal de Bourbon, in 1576; and to Francis de Joyeuse, afterwards a cardinal, in 1578; and was chosen rector of the University of Paris, in 1584. He was a zealous partisan of the League, and one of the council who offered the crown to PHILIP II. of Spain, in 1591. When HENRY IV. entered Paris, in 1594, Hamilton was arrested, but had liberty soon after to depart from Paris. He retired to Brussels, and in 1601, ventured to revisit his native country, after an absence of nearly 30 years. He found a temporary asylum at the castle of Lord Oglvie; but in 1609 was arrested by a party of life-guards, and committed to the Tower of London, where he died.

The elder son,

SIR THOMAS HAMILTON, of Priestfield, had a charter of Balbyn, Drumcairn, and Priestfield, in the year 1597. His grace s. as 10th duke, 16 Feb. 1819.

Lineage.

This family is said to be descended from Sir William de Hameldin, one of the younger sons of Robert de Bellomont, 3rd Earl of Leicester, which Sir William de Hameldin's son, SIR GILBERT HAMILTON, having expressed himself at the court of EDWARD II. in admiration of King ROBERT BRUCE, received a blow from John de Spencer, which led the following day to a rencounter, wherein Spencer fell; and Hamilton sought security in Scotland, about the year 1323. Being closely pursued, however, in his flight, he and his servant changed clothes with two woodcutters, and taking their saws, were in the act of cutting through an oak tree when his pursuers passed by. Perceiving his servant notice them, Sir Gilbert hastily cried out to him, "Through;" which word, with the oak, and saw through it, he took for his crest, in commemoration of his deliverance. This detail is, however, liable to many objections. Sir William Dugdale, in his account of the Earls of Leicester, is totally silent as to the descent of the Hamiltons from Robert, 3rd earl. That nobleman, according to Sir William, had three sons,

Robert, 4th Earl of Leicester.
Roger, Bishop of St. Andrew's, and chancellor of Scotland; d. in 1302.
William, a leper, founder of the hospital of St. Leonard, at Leicester.

That this last William predeceased his eldest brother without issue is evident from the circumstance of the great inheritance of the Earls of Leicester devolving, on the death of the 4th earl, in 1294, upon his sisters, and Simon de Montfort, the husband of the eldest, having, in her right, the title of Earl of Leicester. (See BURKE'S Extinct Peerage.)

WILLIAM DE HAMILTON occurs frequently in Rymer's "Fodera," from 1274 to 1306, being employed by EDW. I., in various negotiations and transactions of importance. He was appointed dean of York in 1298, and HIGH CHANCELLOR OF ENGLAND, 16 Jan. 1305. This is the first of the name noticed in the "Fodera;" it appears somewhat earlier, however, in Scotland;

GILBERT DE HAMILTON being on record in the Charters of Paisley, in 1272. The younger son of this Gilbert, John, was ancestor of the Earls of Haddington; the elder,

SIR WALTER DE HAMILTON, swore fealty to EDWARD I. in 1293 and 1294. Attaching himself to King ROBERT, he had divers grants of lands; amongst others, the Barony of Kenel (Kinell) and Cadyow (now Hamilton), in the sheriffdom of Lanark. From this Sir Walter lineally descended,

SIR JAMES HAMILTON, of Cadyow, who m. Janet, eldest dau. of Sir Alexander de Levingstoun, and had, with other issue,

JAMES, his successor.
Alexander, ancestor of the Hamiltons of Silverton Hill, Barts.

He was s. by his eldest son,
SIR JAMES HAMILTON, of Cadyow, who was created a Lord of Parliament, by royal charter, 28 June, 1445, as Lord Hamilton. This nobleman obtained a grant, dated 1 July, 1455, of the office of sheriff of the co. Lanark; and subsequently, grants of extensive territorial possessions. He m. 1st, Lady Euphemia Graham, eldest dau. of Patrick, Earl of Strathern, Dowager of Archibald, 6th Earl of Douglas, by whom he had an only dau., Elizabeth, m. to David, 4th Earl of Crawford. Lord Hamilton m. 2ndly, in 1474, Mary, eldest dau. of JAMES II., and relict of Thomas Boyd, Earl of Arran; and dying in 1479, was s. by his only son,

JAMES, 2nd lord; who obtained a charter of the lands and Earldom of Arran, dated 10 Aug. 1503, to himself and his heirs male, in failure of which, to revert to the crown. This nobleman, who took a prominent part in the affairs of Scotland, was constituted lieut.-gen. of the kingdom, warden of the marches, and one of the lords of regency, in 1517. And on the forfeiture of the Earl of Angus, he obtained the lordship of Bothwell. His lordship m. 1st, Beatrix, dau. of John, Lord Drummond, and by her had an only dau.,

Margaret, m. to Andrew Stewart, Lord Evandale and Ochiltree.

He m. 2ndly, Elizabeth, sister of Alexander, Lord Hume, lord-high-chancellor of Scotland; from whom, being divorced, he m. 3rdly, Janet, dau. of Sir David Beaton, of Crick, in Fifeshire, comptroller, temp. JAMES VI., and widow of Sir Robert Livingston, of Easter Weems. By this lady he had,

JAMES, his successor.

Helen, m. to Archibald, Earl of Argyll.

Jane, m. to Alexander, Earl of Glencairn.

The earl d. in 1530, and was s. by his son,

JAMES, 2nd earl. This nobleman, upon the death of JAMES V., in 1542, was unanimously chosen Regent of Scotland, by the nobles assembled for that purpose, the public voice applauding their choice; the next year he was declared by parliament HEIR PRESUMPTIVE to the crown, appointed guardian to Queen MARY, and governor of the realm during her majesty's minority. In 1548, his lordship was invested with the French order of St. Michael, and made, in 1549, by HENRY II. of France, DUKE OF CHATELHERAULT, in Poitou.* He m. Lady Margaret Douglas, eldest dau. of James, 3rd Earl of Morton, and had issue,

JAMES, his successor.

Claude, ancestor of the Marquess of Abercorn.

Margaret, m. to Alexander, Lord Gordon, son and heir of George, Earl of Huntly, sans issue; and after his death, to James, Lord Fleming.

Anne, m. to George, Earl of Huntly, lord-high-chancellor of Scotland.

Jane, m. Hugh, 3rd Earl of Eglington.

His lordship d. 22 Jan. 1575, when the Earldom of Arran

* The regent was gratified by the Dukedom of Chatelherault, conferred upon him by the French king, with a considerable pension, in order to induce him to consent to the projected match between MARY, the infant Queen of Scotland, and the DAUPHIN of France.—Sir Walter Scott.

DUCHY OF CHATELLEAUD.

The town of Chatellraud, in Poitou, conferred the title of viscount only until the reign of FRANCIS I., when that monarch, having joined unto it several other lordships, erected the whole, anno 1514, into a DUCHÉ PAIRIE, in favour of Francis de Bourbon, Viscount de Chatellraud, 2nd son of Gilbert de Bourbon, Comte de Montpensier, and de Claire de Gonzague. This prince dying the next year, without issue, was succeeded in the duchy of Chatellraud by his brother, CHARLES, DUKE DE BOURBON, constable of France, upon whose death, (the constable was slain before Rome, 6 May, 1527,) and the confiscation of his possessions, the Duchy of Chatellraud was granted to CHARLES OF FRANCE, Duke de Angoulesme, 3rd son of FRANCIS I. On the death of this prince, unm., in 1545, the Duchy of Chatellraud was reunited to the crown, and the peerage became extinct. In three years afterwards, 1548, HENRY II. conferred the duchy, without a peerage, upon James Hamilton, 2nd Earl of Arran, then regent of Scotland, who became Duke of Chatellraud, but his lordship having eventually surrendered the dignity to the French king, no member of the Hamilton family subsequently enjoyed the title. In 1563, CHARLES IX. conferred the Duchy of Chatellraud upon Diane, dau. of HENRY II., King of France, and wife of Francis de Montmorency, marshal of France, with whom HENRY III. made an exchange, giving the Duchy of Angoulesme and the county of Ponthieu for the Duchy of Chatellraud, which he then conferred upon Francis de Bourbon, Duke of Montpensier. His son Henry, Duke of Montpensier and Chatellraud, left an only dau. and heiress, MARY DE BOURBON, Duchess of Montpensier and Chatellraud, who m. in 1626, GASTON-JEAN BAPTIST, of France, Duke of Orleans, and left an only dau. and heiress,

ANNE-MARIE-LOUISA, of Orleans, Duchess of Montpensier and Chatellraud, who by her last will and testament, dated 27 Feb. 1685, bequeathed all her possessions to her cousin-german, PHILIP, of France, DUKE OF ORLEANS, and thus the Duchies of Montpensier and Chatellraud became vested in the line of Orleans.

(the Dukedom of Chatelherault having been surrendered to the crown of France) passed to his eldest son,

JAMES, 3rd earl. This nobleman, upon the arrival of Queen MARY, in 1561, openly aspired to her hand, but opposing the queen's free exercise of her religion, and entering a protestation against it, his lordship entirely forfeited her favour. His love, however, inflamed by disappointment, and his impatience exasperated by neglect, gradually preyed upon his reason, and after many extravagances, broke out at last in ungovernable frenzy. He was, in consequence, declared to be in a state of insanity by the cognition of an inquest passed on a brief directed out of the Court of Chancery, and the estates of his deceased father devolved upon his brother,

LORD JOHN HAMILTON, who, with his younger brother, Claude, was banished from Scotland in 1579; but returned in 1585, the act of forfeiture which had been passed being annulled, and was elevated to the peerage, 17 April, 1599, as Marquess of Hamilton. This nobleman remained steadfast in his allegiance to the unhappy Queen MARY; and so conscious was the unfortunate princess of his fidelity, that one of her latest acts was to transmit to him a ring (which is still treasured in the family) through the medium of an attendant. His lordship m. Margaret, only dau. of John, 8th Lord Glamis; and dying 12 April, 1604, was s. by his only son,

JAMES, 2nd marquess, K.G.; who upon the demise of his uncle, James, (already mentioned as insane,) Earl of Arran, in 1609, inherited that nobleman's honours. His lordship obtained an English peerage, 16 June, 1619, by the titles of Baron of Innerdale, in Cumberland, and Earl of Cambridge, and was installed a knight of the Garter, at Windsor, 7 July, 1623. He m. Lady Anne Cunningham, dau. of James, 7th Earl of Glencairn, by whom he had issue,

JAMES, his successor.

WILLIAM, successor to his brother.

Anne, m. to Hugh, 7th Earl of Eglington.

Margaret, m. to John, Earl of Crawford and Lindsay.

Mary, m. to James, 2nd Earl of Queensberry.

He d. 2 March, 1625, and was s. by his eldest son,

JAMES, 3rd marquess, K.G.; who was created, 17 June, 1633, Marquess of Clydesdale; and on 12 April, 1643, DUKE OF HAMILTON, to him, and the heirs male of his body; and in default thereof, to his brother, William, Earl of Lanark, and his male issue; and in default of such issue, to the eldest daughter of the said James, Duke of Hamilton, and her male issue; and in default of such issue, to the heirs whatsoever of the said James's body. His grace espousing warmly and actively the cause of his royal master, CHARLES I., was defeated and taken prisoner at the battle of Preston, and suffered decapitation in Old Palace Yard, 9 March, 1649. He m. Mary, dau. of William, 1st Earl of Denbigh, by whom he had four sons, all of whom d. in infancy, and two daus., ANNE, of whom presently; and Susanna, who m. John, Earl of Cassilis. His grace was s. by his brother,

WILLIAM, 4th marquess and 2nd duke; who had himself been elevated to the peerage, 31 March, 1639, as Lord Mackintosh and Polmont and Earl of Lanark. His grace m. in 1638, Lady Elizabeth Maxwell, dau. and co-heir of James, Earl of Dirleton, by whom he had a son, who d. in infancy, and five daus., viz.,

Anne, m. to Robert, 3rd Earl of Southesk.

Elizabeth, m. 1st, to James, Lord Kilmaurs; and 2ndly, to Sir David Cunningham, of Robertsonland.

Mary, m. 1st, to Alexander, 2nd Earl of Calender; 2ndly, to Sir James Livingstone; and 3rdly, to James, 3rd Earl of Findlater.

Margaret, m. to William Blair, of Blair.

The duke received a mortal wound in the service of CHARLES II., at the unfortunate battle of Worcester; and by CROMWELL'S Act of Grace, passed in 1654, he was excepted from all benefit thereof, and his estates forfeited, reserving out of them £400 a-year for his duchess for life, and after her death, £100 a-year each to his four daus., and their heirs for ever. His grace's own honours fell under the attainder, and his English dignities expired, while the Dukedom of Hamilton, in virtue of the patent of 1643, devolved upon (the eldest dau. of James, the 1st duke) his niece,

LADY ANNE HAMILTON, as Duchess of Hamilton, who married

LORD WILLIAM DOUGLAS, eldest son of William, 1st

Marquess of Douglas, by his 2nd wife, Lady Mary Gordon, 3rd dau. of George, 1st Marquess of Huntly, and obtained by petition for her husband, in 1660, the title of Duke of Hamilton for life. His grace had been previously elevated to the peerage as Earl of Selkirk, (see that dignity.) The issue of this marriage were,

- i. James, 4th duke.
- ii. William, d. s. p.
- iii. Charles, who upon his father's resignation, was created Earl of Selkirk.
- iv. John, created Earl of Ruglen.

- viii. Catherine, m. to John, 1st Duke of Atholl.
- ix. Susanna, m. to John, 2nd Earl of Dundonald.
- x. Margaret, m. to James Maule, Earl of Panmure.

The duke d. in 1694, and was s. by his eldest son, James, Earl of Arran, who (upon the duchess a few years afterwards surrendering her honours) became then, by patent, dated 10 Aug. 1698, Duke of Hamilton, &c., with the precedency of the original creation, 13 April, 1643, in the same manner as if he had regularly inherited. His grace was installed a knight of the Garter, and created an English peer, 11 Sept. 1711, as Baron of Dutton, co. Chester, and DUKE of BRANDON, co. Suffolk; but upon applying for his seat in the House of Lords, it was objected that, by the 23rd article of the Union, "no peer of Scotland could, after the Union, be created a peer of England;" and the House of Lords so resolved, after a protracted debate. His grace m. 1st, Anne, dau. of Robert, Earl of Sunderland; and 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. and sole heir of Digby, Lord Gerrard, by whom he had issue,

Lineage.

This branch of the Hamiltons springs from ALEXANDER DE HAMILTON, 2nd son of Sir James Hamilton, Lord of Cadow, and brother of Sir James, afterwards Lord Hamilton. He had a charter, in 1449, from Alexander, Earl of Crawford, wherein he was styled, "Alexander de Hamilton, of Quhitecamp, afterwards Silvertonehill." In a charter of settlement of the Hamilton estates, granted to his brother, the 1st Lord Hamilton, of date 23 Oct. 1453, this Alexander was called next in succession after his brother's dau., Elizabeth, and his natural sons. He appears to have left issue, two sons,

JAMES, his heir.

William, ancestor of the Hamiltons of Westport.

The elder son,

JAMES HAMILTON, of Silvertonehill, in a charter of settlement of the Hamilton estates granted to James, 1st Earl of Arran, of date 16 Jan. 1512-13, was called next in succession after Sir James Hamilton of Fynnert, Patrick Hamilton of Kineavil, and John Hamilton of Brumehill, He m. a dau. of the family of Douglas, with whom he got the lands of Newton, in the barony of Drumsarguard, and by whom he had issue, JOHN, his heir; and a dau., m. to James, Viscount Teviot. FRANCIS HAMILTON, of Silvertonehill, a very enthusiastic, wrong-headed man. He fancied himself bewitched by Dame Isabel Boyd, Lady Blair, which appears by several extravagant petitions to parliament from him in 1641. He d. not long after this, having greatly squandered away the family estate; and as he never was married, this branch of the family expired, and the representation devolved on the descendants of his grand-uncle, Alexander; which

ALEXANDER HAMILTON, tutor of Silvertonehill, got from his father the lands of Goslingtown, which sometime continued to be the title of his family. He m. Catherine Hamilton, by whom he had issue,

SIR ANDREW HAMILTON, of Goslingtown. This gentleman was a faithful and loyal subject of Queen MARY, who conferred on him the honour of knighthood. He was at the battle of Langsyde, for which he was attainted; but had his possessions restored to him by the treaty of Perth, in 1572. He d. in 1592, leaving issue, and was s. by his son,

III. SIR JOHN, who d. in 1748, leaving issue. The title came to his eldest son,

IV. SIR ROBERT. This gentleman having adopted the profession of arms, attained the rank of lieutenant-general, and was col. of the 108th foot, a regiment reduced at the peace in 1763, when General Hamilton was appointed to the colonelcy of the 40th. Sir Robert m. 1st, Mary, dau. of W.-Pier Williams, Esq., by whom he had a son,

Lineage.

By an ancient pedigree in the College of Arms, it appears that the family of LITTLETON, or LYTTLETON, was settled at Frankley, in Worcestershire, about 1335,* when it is recorded that

THOMAS DE LYTTLETON, m. Emma de Frankley, an heiress, lady of the manor of Frankley; but whether he was a stranger in the county, or resided in the town South Lyttleton, in the Vale of Evesham, as there is reason to think he did, is a matter of doubt; they had an only dau., EMMA, who m. 1st, Augerus de Tatlington, of Tredington, in the same co.; and 2ndly, Nicholas Whetarsstede. She was a benefactress to the Abbey of Halesowen, in Shropshire, and d. in 1298. Thomas Lyttleton m. 2ndly, Asselm, dau. and heir of William Fitz Waryn, Esq. of Upton, one of the justices itinerant and judge of the Common Pleas, 12 HENRY II., and next year sheriff of Worcestershire; by that lady he had three sons, EDMUND, THOMAS, and JOHN. The eldest,

EDMUND DE LYTTLETON, m. Lucia de Boys; but having no issue, was s. by his brother,

THOMAS DE LYTTLETON, who resided at his manor of Couledon, in Upper Snodsbury, and had lands in Newenton, (visigo Naunton Beauchamp,) in the co. of Worcester. In the 9th EDWARD II., he was elected knight of the shire for Worcester. He m. Lucia de Bois, or Atwood, of a considerable family at Wolverley, in that county, and was s. by his son,

THOMAS DE LYTTLETON, who m. Julian, dau. of Robert de Somery, and had two sons: John, the younger, was appointed commissioner of array, with other the chief gentlemen of the county of Worcester, 1 HENRY IV., on a rumour of foreign invasion. He m. Beatrix Frescheval, of a noble family in the county of Warwick, by whom he had an only dau., the wife of Jeffery Frere, Esq. The elder son,

THOMAS DE LYTTLETON,† recovered, by a writ of right,

* SELDEN was possessed of two grants of lands to the monastery of Evesham, in 7 HENRY II., 1161, to both of which John de Lyttleton was witness. This is the most ancient mention of the name of Lyttleton to be met with, and as the land so given was at Lench, near South Lyttleton, it is probable this John was ancestor to Lyttleton, of Frankley.

† Thomas thus spelled the name, and sealed with the chevron between three escallops, as used by his posterity.

the manor of Frankley, on failure of issue, to his cousin, Thomas de Tattington. He was esquire of the body to HENRY IV. and HENRY V., and had annual pensions granted him by both kings out of the fee farm rents of Worcester, pro bono et gratuito servicio, as expressed in the grants. He m. Maud, dau. and heir of Richard Quartermain, of a large estate at Ricote and North Weston, in Oxfordshire, by Joan, his wife, dau. and heir of Grey, of Rotherfield, and had an only dau. and heiress,

He (Thomas) d. about the year 1421. Maud, his wife, surviving him, holding Frankley in dower or jointure, m. 2ndly, John Massey, Esq. His son-in-law,

III. Guy, } of WESTCOTE, though often solicited by their mother to call themselves LITTLETON: she once expostulating with them, whether they thought better of themselves than their elder brother, they answered, that he had a fair estate to alter his name, and if they might share with him they would do the like. NICHOLAS m. Agnes, dau. and heir of Edmund Vernon, of Staffordshire, and was ancestor of the Westcotes of that county. GUY m. Greenvill, of Gloucestershire, and from him the Westcotes of Devon and Somerset.

IV. Edmund, d. u. m.

The eldest son and heir,

SIR THOMAS LITTLETON, K.B., became one of the great law luminaries of his country, and is immortalized by one work alone, his celebrated "Treatise on Tenures."* In 1454, he was called to the degree of serjeant-at-law, and afterward appointed steward of the Marshalsea of the king's household; the next year he was constituted king's serjeant, and rode justice of the assize in the northern circuit. On the accession of EDWARD IV., he sued a general pardon, which was granted to him, and in the 4th year of that prince's reign, he was appointed one of the judges of the Court of Common Pleas, when he had a grant of 110 marks out of the Customs of London, Bristol, and Hull, and, moreover, 100*l.* 11*sh.* for a robe and furs, and 6*l.* 6*d.* for a summer robe. This celebrated judge made his last will 22nd August, 1481, and died the next day, at his seat at Frankley, in a great and good old age. The celebrity and usefulness of the work have endured to our own time; and notwithstanding the prodigious accession of statutes and reports, the large alterations both in the knowledge and practice of the law, and accumulation of publications, Lyttelton, with Coke's commentary, will ever continue to demand the attention and applause of our ablest advocates.

HEADLEY.

HEADLEY, BARON, (Charles Winn,) of Aghadoe, co. Kerry, in the peerage of Ireland; and a Baronet of England; b. 25 June, 1810; s. as 3rd baron, upon the demise of his uncle, 9 April, 1840; m. 29 June, 1841, Maria-Margaret, eldest dau. of the late Major d'Arley, and has a son, CHARLES-MARK-ALLANSON, b. 4 Dec. 1845, and three daus., Laura-Jane, Millicent-Julia, and Marion-Sybil.

Lineage.

This line of Wynnes is descended from a cadet of Gweddir, who, in consequence of some family misunderstanding, left Wales in the 16th century, and settled in London. Sir Wm. Segar acknowledged this to be the true descent, by exemplifying to George Wynne, (for so he signed his name,) the ancestor of Lord Headley's family, the armorial ensigns of the Wynnes of Gweddir.

GEORGE WYNNE (to whom, being draper to Queen ELIZABETH, a patent of arms was granted in 1664) is the first member of the English branch of whom we find any particular mention. He was born about the year 1606 and d. in 1610. He m. Margaret Green, of London, and had, EDMUND WYNNE, of Thornton Curtis, in Lincolnshire, who was born in 1683, and d. in 1645. He m. Mary, dan. of Rowland Berkeley, of the city of Worcester, Esq., and sister of Sir Robert Berkeley, Knt., one of the judges of the Court of King's Bench, by whom he had,

- GEORGE, b. in 1607, of whom presently.
- Rowland, an alderman of London, b. in 1609; d. in 1676.
- Mark, of Little Warley, Essex, b. in 1611; d. in 1699.
- Katherine.
- Margaret, m. to Roger Fletcher, citizen of London.
- Mary, m. to Thomas Glover, citizen of London.
- Joyce, m. to John Ramsden, merchant in Hull.
- Anne, m. to John Aynsworth, merchant of London.

The eldest son,

GEORGE WINN, Esq., served the office of high-sheriff of the co. of Lincoln, in 1657, and proved himself a steady friend to the monarchy and to his country during the civil contests which cast a cloud over the last days of the unfortunate CHARLES I., for there is extant in his family a receipt of the date of the very year in which his majesty suffered, signed by a deputed person on behalf of the exiled prince, his son, from which it appears that George Winn contributed, with his brother Rowland, the sum of 2000 guilders, (a sum, perhaps, in those days not inconsiderable, and certainly not advanced without serious personal risk,) towards the support of what might have been considered a hopeless cause. In the December following the Restoration, the title of Baronet was conferred by CHARLES II. on his faithful subject, as Sir George Winn, of Nostell, in the co. of York. Sir George was married thrice: 1st, to Rachel, dau. of John Turner, of Ham, Surrey, Esq., by whom he had no issue; 2ndly, to Elizabeth, dau. of Robert Jeffreys, Esq., alderman of London, by whom he had,

- EDMUND, his successor, b. in 1641.
- GEORGE, b. in 1645, whose grandson was raised to the Irish peerage, in 1797, as Lord Headley.
- Robert,
- Mark,
- Rowland, } of whom no descendants now remain.

Sir George was m. 3rdly, to Anne, dau. of Sir William Pelham, of Brocklesby, in Lincolnshire, Knt., but by her he had no issue. He d. in 1667. At his death, his eldest son, EDMUND, s. to the title, which, in 1805, devolved on his great-grandson, Sir Edmund-Mark Winn, of Acton, in the co. of York, the 7th baronet, at whose decease, in Aug. 1833, it fell to his cousin, the late and 2nd Lord Headley. Sir George, the 1st baronet's 2nd son,

GEORGE WINN, Esq. of South Ferraby, in Lincolnshire, m. Sarah, dau. of Charles Pelham, Esq. of Brocklesby, in that co., (ancestor of the Earl of Yarborough,) and had issue,

PELHAM WINN, Esq., who m. Elizabeth, dau. of the Rev. Gilbert Wighton, by Elizabeth Allanson, his wife, sister of William Allanson and Charles Allanson, Esqs. of Sion, in Middlesex, (and great-granddau. of Sir William Allanson, who was lord-mayor of York in 1633, and knighted in May, by CHARLES I., who was then in his passage through that city to be crowned in his native country :) by this lady, Mr. Winn had an only son,

GEORGE WINN, Esq., who was born in the year 1725, of whom it is the pride of his family to speak as an instance of rare success and celebrity under no common difficulties. He s. in 1763 the estates of his cousin, Mark Winn, Esq. of Little Warley, in the co. of Essex, and in 1775, to those of his cousin, Charles Allanson, Esq. of Bramham Biggin, in the co. of York, who was the only son of the above-named William Allanson, Esq., and d. leaving no issue. Mr. Winn was created a Baronet, owing to the eminence of his talents and exertions as an English baron of the Court of Exchequer in Scotland, and in the same year he obtained licence and authority to assume the name and armorial bearings of Allanson. In 1797, Sir George was raised to the peerage of Ireland by the style and title of Lord Headley, Baron Allanson and Winn, of Aghadoe, in the co. of Kerry. His lordship m. 1st, in 1765, Anne, 4th dau. of Sir Rowland Winn, Bart. of Nostell, in the co. of York, (son of Sir Rowland, the son of Sir Edmund, eldest son of Sir George, the 1st baronet,) by whom he had issue, an only dau., Georgiana Anne, b. in 1769, d. in 1789. His lady d. in childbed of a son, in 1774. His lordship m. 2ndly, 24 June, 1788, Jane eldest dau. and heiress of Arthur Blennerhassett, Esq. of Ballyseedy, in the co. of Kerry, in which county the Blennerhassetts (a long-settled and well-known family m. In the latter part of his life he lived in retirement at the castle of Berry Pomeroy, upon which he is said to have expended upwards of £30,000. He m. Dorothy, dau. of Sir Henry Killigrew; and dying in 1669, was s. by his eldest son,

In 1667, he promoted the impeachment of Lord Clarendon; was the first that moved it, and carried it up to the House of Lords. In Feb. 1672-3, he was unanimously chosen Speaker of the Long Parliament, on the resignation of Sir Job Charleton. In the April following, he was sworn of the privy council, and made soon after treasurer of the navy. FRANCIS SEYMOUR, Esq., who also assumed the surname and arms of CONWAY, and was elevated to the peerage, 17 March, 1702-3, as Lord Conway, Baron Conway, of Ragley, co. Warwick. Part of his extensive inheritance being situated in the north of Ireland, his lordship was created a peer of that kingdom likewise, 16 Oct. 1703, by the title of Baron Conway, of Killultagh, co. Antrim. He did not, however, take his seat in the Irish House of Lords until Oct. 1721. * Sir William Juxon, Bart., was nephew and heir of the pious and loyal Bishop of London, William Juxon, who attended King CHARLES I. to the scaffold. It was remarked by the Regicides that the king, the moment before he stretched out his neck to the executioner, addressed to Juxon, in a very earnest accent, the single word, "Remember." Great mysteries were consequently supposed to be concealed under that expression; and the Generals vehemently insisted that the Prelate should inform them of the king's meaning. Juxon replied that his majesty having frequently charged him to inculcate on his son the forgiveness of his murderers, had taken this opportunity, in the last moments of his life, when his commands he supposed would be regarded as sacred and inviolable, to reiterate that desire; and that his mild spirit thus terminated its present course by an act of benevolence to his greatest enemies.

Note.—The HESKETHS of ROSSALL and OF GWRVCH AWTLE are branches of the Rufford family; the former are represented by SIR PETER HESKETH-FLEETWOOD, Bart., M.P. for Preston; the latter, by LLOYD-H. BAMFORD-HESKETH, Esq.

HILLARY.

HILLARY, SIR AUGUSTUS-WILLIAM, of Danbury Place, co. Essex, and of Rigg House, co. York, late of the 6th dragoon-guards; b. 19 Nov. 1800; m. 30 Sept. 1829, Susan-Curwen, eldest dau. of J. Christian, Esq. of Unnerigg Hall, Cumberland. Sir Augustus s. to the Baronetcy, at the decease of his father, in Jan. 1847.

Lineage.

There are few names of greater antiquity in Italy, France, and England, than that of Hilary, St. Hilaire, or St. Hilary, as it has been variously written. In the fifth century, according to the Roman calendar, it gave a successor to St. Peter; and in the 3rd, 4th, and 5th centuries, no less than three saints to the church of Rome, two of whom are recorded as of ancient and noble families. The name was ennobled in France long before the time of WILLIAM the Conqueror, and it still so continues in the person of the Marquess St. Hilaire, of Normandy.

HILLARY, afterwards Bishop of Chichester, accompanied HENRY II. into England; and, according to Fuller, "was in great favour with that monarch, and had charge of the shire of Surrey."

Dugdale, in his Baronage, records the marriage of Roger, Earl of St. Clare, with MAUD, dau. of James de St. Hilary. These and numerous other proofs which could be adduced, confirm the ancient dignity and high importance of the family. The Hillaries subsequently settled in the cos. of Warwick and Stafford, and continued to maintain their rank in those shires until the era of the Reformation, when the last and remaining branch of the family removed into Wensley Dale, in the North Riding of the co. York, and purchased estates there.

WILLIAM HILLARY, of Wensley, m. in 1561, Elizabeth Jaykes, and was s. by his son,

MATTHEW HILLARY, of Wensley, b. 16 July, 1562; m. 10 May, 1593, Elizabeth Willis, and was s. by his son,

PERCIVAL HILLARY, Esq. of Preston in Wensley, and of Clifton, co. York; baptized at Wensley, 2 Jan. 1596, who m. at Clifton, 26 July, 1628, Elizabeth Wilson, and left a son and successor,

WILLIAM HILLARY, Esq. of Wensley Dale, m. Anne, only child of Trinian Metcalfe, Esq. of Birkrigg, (by whom the estates of Birkrigg and Rigg House came into the Hillary family,) and was s. by his only child,

JOHN HILLARY, Esq. of Birkrigg, who m. Mary, dau. of Richard Robinson, Esq., by whom he had six daus. (of whose descendants none now remain) and three sons: the eldest son, Isaac, b. in 1694, s. his father, and d. unm. in 1768; the 2nd, William, b. in 1696, was an eminent physician and author, and d. unm. in 1768; and the 3rd,

RICHARD HILLARY, Esq., b. in 1703; m. in 1764, Hannah, dau. of George Wynne, Esq., by Elizabeth Lascelles, of the co. York, by whom he had surviving issue,

Richard, who s. to his father's Yorkshire and Jamaica estates, and d. unm. at the latter place, 17 Nov. 1803, being a member at that time of the House of Assembly of the island.

WILLIAM, late baronet.

Mr. Hillary inherited his eldest brother's estates; and dying in 1799, was s. by his eldest son, Richard, at whose demise, as stated above, they devolved upon the only remaining son,

SIR WILLIAM HILLARY, created a Baronet 8 Nov. 1805. This gentleman m. 21 Feb. 1800, Frances-Elizabeth, eldest dau. and co-heir of the late Louis Disney-Fytche, Esq. of Flintham, co. Nottingham, and of Swinderby, co. Lincoln, (by Elizabeth, sole representative of the ancient family of Fytche of Danbury Place,) by whom he had issue,

AUGUSTUS-WILLIAM, present baronet.

Elizabeth-Mary, twin with her brother; m. in 1818, to Christopher-Richard Preston, Esq. of Blackmore Priory, co. Essex, and has issue.

Sir William m. 2ndly, 30 Aug. 1813, Emma, youngest dau. of the late Patrick Tobin, Esq. of the Isle of Man. Sir William Hillary passed much of his early life upon the continent of Europe, partly with H.R.H. the Duke of Sussex, to whom he was equerry. Upon the renewal of the war with France, in 1803, Sir William raised, at his own expense, and many years commanded, the 1st Essex legion of infantry and cavalry, amounting to 1400 men, the largest force then offered by any private individual for the defence of the country; in consideration of which, and other services, the baronetage was conferred by the personal direction of his Majesty King GEORGE III. The baronet became subsequently the projector and, through his successful efforts, happily, the founder of the Royal National Institution for the Preservation of Life from Shipwreck.
