HENRY FOX, who filled several high official situations in the reign of GEORGE II., (amongst others, those of secretary at war, and secretary of state,) from 1735, when he was first returned to parliament for Hendon, until the accession of his Majesty GEORGE III., at which period he was a member of the privy council, and enjoyed the office of paymaster-general to the forces, but which he soon afterwards resigned. II. CHARLES-JAMES, (b. Jan. O.S. 1748-9,) one of the most eminent statesmen of modern times, distinguished alike by the soundness of his political principles, the force of his senatorial eloquence, and the ardour of his attachment to freedom. Mr. Fox first came into parliament from Midhurst, in 1768, before he was of age. In 1770, he was appointed a lord of the Admiralty, which post he retained till May, 1772. In 1773, he was made lord of the Treasury, an office he resigned the following year, to oppose Lord North and the American war. Upon the fall of the North administration, March, 1782, Mr. Fox was constituted SECRETARY OF STATE, but held the seals only till the death of Lord Rockingham, in the following July. When the brief-lived Landsdowne cabinet ceased, Mr. Fox formed the celebrated coalition with Lord North, and became again secretary of state, 2 April, 1783. His power was as fleeting, however, as before, and he retired on the 19th of Dec. following, to make room for Mr. Pitt, who at once became premier. After the death of Mr. Pitt, Mr. Fox came again into office, and he died, deeply lamented, in 1806, when nominally secretary of state for foreign affairs, but virtually prime minister of England. He had m. Elizabeth-Bridget Armistead, but had no issue. His widow survived until 6 July, 1842.

THE HON. PATRICK DUNBAR, second son of Cospatrick, Earl of Dunbar and March; whose son,

This Ada made a grant to the monastery of Kelso, for the salvation of her soul and the souls of her father and mother, prior to the year 1240. The son of her marriage with William Dunbar,

WILLIAM DE HOME, confirmed under that designation, the grant of his mother to the Abbot of Kelso, in 1268. From this William lineally descended

SIR ALEXANDER HOME, of Home, who founded the collegiate church of Dunglas, for a provost and several prebendaries. He m. Mariota, dau. and heir of Sir Robert Lauder, of Bass, and was s. by his eldest son,

His lordship joined the queen-dowager and her husband, Angus, in 1515, and embraced the English interest in opposition to the Regent Albany, who took Home Castle and Fast Castle, the fortlets of Lord Home, and ravaged his lands. Albany having caused the French ambassador to offer an amnesty, and to send a pardon to Lord Home, with a request of a conference, he agreed to meet the Regent at Dunglas, where he was instantly arrested, and committed to Edinburgh Castle, then under the governorship of the Earl of Arran; but Lord Home prevailed on Arran to permit him to escape, and to accompany him to the borders. Lord Home made his peace with the Regent in 1516, and was restored to his honours and estates; but visiting the court in the September of that year, with his brother, William, they were arrested, tried for treason, and convicted. Lord Home was executed, 8 Oct. 1516, his head placed on the tolbooth of Edinburgh, and his honours and estates forfeited to the crown. His brother suffered the next day. HOPETOUN.

HOPETOUN, EARL OF. (John-Alexander Hope.) Viscount Aithrie, and Baron Hope, of the co. of Lanark, in the peerage of Scotland; Baron Hopetoun, of Hopetoun, and Baron Niddry, of Niddry Castle, co. Linlithgow, in the peerage of the United Kingdom; hereditary-keeper of Lochmaben Castle; an officer in the army; b. 22 March, 1831; s. as 6th earl, upon the decease of his father, 8 April, 1843.

* The second son, John, merchant in Edinburgh, left two daus., one m. to Stewart, of Ballechin, and the other to — Learmouth, Esq.

Lineage.

The surname of Hope is one of great antiquity in Scotland; and the ancestor of the present family,

JOHN DE HOPE, is said to have come from France in the retinue of Magdalene, Queen of JAMES V., in 1537, and settling in Scotland, left a son,

EDWARD HOPE, who was one of the most considerable inhabitants of Edinburgh in the reign of Queen MARY; and being a great promoter of the Reformation, was chosen one of the commissioners for the metropolis to the parliament in 1560. He left a son,

HENRY HOPE, a very eminent merchant, who m. a French lady, Jaqueline de Tott, and had two sons. The elder,

THOMAS HOPE, being bred to the Scottish bar, first attained eminence, in 1606, by his defence of the six ministers (clergymen) tried for high treason, for denying that the king possessed authority in matters ecclesiastical; and acquired, eventually, the largest fortune ever accumulated by a member of the legal profession in Scotland. He was subsequently appointed king's advocate, and created a Baronet of Nova Scotia 11 Feb. 1628. (See lineage of Sir John Hope, Bart., the chief of the house of Hope, for a further account of this learned person.) Sir Thomas left a very large family; from the eldest son of which descend the Hopes of Craighall. The sixth son,

SIR JOHN HOPE, of Hopetoun, a member of the Scottish bar, marrying Anne, only dau. and heir of Robert Foulles, of Leadhills, co. Lanark, acquired the valuable mines there, and applying himself to mineralogy, brought the art of mining to the highest perfection ever before known in Scotland. Sir John was appointed, in 1641, governor of the mint, and constituted a lord of Session in 1649. He m. 2ndly, Lady Mary Keith, eldest dau. and one of the co-heirs of William, 7th Earl Marischal. Sir John d. in 1661, and was s. by his eldest surviving son,

JOHN HOPE, Esq. of Hopetoun, who took up his residence at the castle of Niddry, the barony of which he purchased from Lord Wintoun; and he also purchased, about the same time (1678) the Barony of Abercorn, with the office of heritable sheriff of the co. of Linlithgow, from Sir Walter Seton. Mr. Hope represented the shire of Linlithgow in parliament in 1684. He m. Margaret, eldest dau. of John, 4th Earl of Haddington, by whom he had a son, and a dau., Eleanor, who m. Thomas, 6th Earl of Haddington. Mr. Hope having embarked with the Duke of York, and several other persons of distinction, in the Gloucester frigate, in 1682, was lost in the wreck of that vessel, a few days after going aboard, in the 32nd year of his age. His son,

CHARLES HOPE, who was b. in the previous year, s. to the family estates, and was elevated to the peerage of Scotland, 5 April, 1703, by the titles of Viscount Aithrie, Baron Hope, and EARL OF HOPETOUN. His lordship, who was one of the representative peers of Scotland, from 1722 until his decease, was invested with the ensigns of the order of the Thistle, at Holyrood House, in 1738. He m. in 1699, Henrietta, only dau. of William (Johnstone), 1st Marquess of Annandale, and had thirteen children; of whom,

I. JOHN, Lord Hope, succeeded to the honours.

II. Charles, on the death of his uncle, James, 2nd Marquess of Annandale, in 1790, inherited the estate of Craighall, and upon his marriage, in 1730, with Catherine, only dau. and heir of Sir William Vere, Bart. of Blackwood, co. Lanark, assumed the surname and arms of VERE. By this lady he had, (with other issue.)

1 William, who m. in 1778, Sophia, dau. of Joseph Corrie, Esq.; and dying in 1811, left issue.

* The 2nd son, SIR THOMAS HOPE, of Kerse, was father of two sons, ALEXANDER, created a Baronet in 1672; and Henry, who founded the opulent family of HOPE of Amsterdam, now represented by HENRY HOPE, Esq. of Denpendene, in Surrey, M.P. for Gloucester.

Mary.

Margaret.

The earl m. 2ndly, 27 Feb. 1851, Henrietta-Digby, only child of Peter Barfoot, Esq. of Midlington House, Hants, and Landenstown, co. Kildare.

Lineage.

The original surname of this very ancient family was Tristram, and it is said to have been exchanged for the present one of ST. LAWRENCE under the following circumstances:—A member of the house of Tristram having the command of an army against the invaders of his native soil, attacked and totally routed them on St. Laurence's day, near Clontarffe, and assumed in consequence of a vow made previously to the battle, the name of the saint, which his descendants have ever since borne. The sword with which this warrior fought and vanquished still hangs in the hall of Howth, where the family has resided since its first arrival in Ireland, a period of six centuries at least.

SIR AMORICUS TRISTRAM, the brother-in-law and companion in arms of Sir John Courcy, having in the year '177, effected a landing at Howth, defeated the Irish in a pitched battle, at the bridge of Ivora, and obtained the lands and barony (by tenure) of Howth, as a reward for his distinguished valour during the conflict. After this successful commencement, Sir Amoricus, with his brother-in-law, Sir John Courcy, reduced the whole province of Ulster; but in 1189, when Sir John was removed from the government of Ireland by RICHARD I., Sir Amoricus, who was then in Connaught, being attacked by O'Connor, the king of that province, and overwhelmed by numbers, himself and his whole party, consisting of thirty knights and two hundred infantry, perished to a man. "Thus died Sir Amorey Tristram, who, among a thousand knights, might be chosen for beauty and heroic courage, for humility and courtesy to his inferiors, yielding to none but in the way of gentleness." By the sister of Sir John Courcy, Earl of Ulster, Sir Amorey left three sons, the two younger of whom were slain on Good Friday, 1203, in assisting their uncle Courcy against Lacie's men, in the churchyard of Downpatrick; and the eldest,

SIR NICHOLAS FITZ AMOREY, 2nd baron, was obliged to content himself with the lands of Howth, and relinquished to religious houses the conquests of his father in Ulster. From this Sir Nicholas the barony descended uninterruptedly to

SIR ROBERT ST. LAWRENCE the 15th baron; who was appointed, 23 Feb. 1467, chancellor of the green-wax of the Exchequer; and constituted, 10 July, 1483, LORD CHANCELLOR OF IRELAND. His lordship m. Joan, 2nd dau. of Edward Beaufort, Duke of Somerset, by whom he had four sons and two daus.; and the deed of feoffment by which he settled all his estates on trustees for the uses and purposes of that marriage, and which contains most of the names of the prime nobility of England, as the lady's trustees, is duly enrolled in Ireland. By this marriage Lord Howth's descendants derived descent from Edw. III., and became inheritors of the blood royal. The 2nd son, Thomas, was appointed, in 1532, attorney-general of Ireland; and in 1535, second justice of the Court of King's Bench. He left an only dau., Margaret, m. to William, son of Patrick Birmingham, chief-justice of the King's Bench in 1530. Sir Robert was s. by his eldest son,

SIR NICHOLAS ST. LAWRENCE, the 16th baron. This nobleman, for his fidelity to HENRY VII., in the affair of Lambert Simnal, was presented by that monarch with three hundred pieces of gold, and confirmed by charter, dated 4 March, 1489, in the lands of Howth, &c. He subsequently attended the Lord-Deputy Kildare at the famous battle of Knocktough, in Connaught, fought against the Irish, 19 Aug. 1504, where his lordship headed the billmen on foot. Sir Nicholas was made Lord Chancellor of Ireland 10 June, 1509; and dying in 1536, was s. by his eldest son, by his first wife, Genet, only dau. of Sir Christopher Plunkett, 3rd Lord of Killeen,

SIR CHRISTOPHER ST. LAWRENCE, the 17th baron; who was s. by his eldest son,

EDWARD, 18th baron. This nobleman dying without male issue, in 1649, was s. by his brother,

SIR RICHARD ST. LAWRENCE, 19th baron; at whose decease without issue, in 1658, the lineal heirship of whatever honours accrued to the family of Lord Robert's intermarriage as above, with Joan, one of the co-heirs of "the most illustrious and powerful Prince Edward, Duke and Earl of Somerset, Marquess of Dorset, and Earl of Moreton, by his wife, the noble Princess Eleanor, dau. and co-heir of the most noble Lord Richard Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick and Albemarle," (as the record has it,) devolved on Lord Richard's two sisters, ANNE, wife of B. Dillon, Esq. of Keptoch, and ALISON, wife of John Goulding, Esq., while the Irish dynasty of Baron of Howth passed over undisputedly to the nearest heir male of the family, according to the usual course. This happened to be his brother,

FRANCIS-POWER, Lord Hastings, b. 4 Dec. 1841.

Lineage.

This illustrious house, so renowned in the cabinet and the field, derives its surname from the seaport of Hastings, in Sussex, (the lastage of which its senior members farmed for many years from the crown,) and deduces its pedigree from Robert de Hastings, Portgrave of Hastings, Lord of Fillongley, in Warwickshire, and dispenser, or steward, to WILLIAM the Conqueror. The successor of this Robert was

WALTER DE HASTINGS, who became steward to HENRY I., as owner of the manor of Ashill, co. Norfolk, a grant from the crown, upon the condition of taking care of the saperie (table linen) at the coronation. From this Walter descended

HENRY, LORD HASTINGS, who m. Ada, 4th dau. of David, Earl of Huntingdon, by Mand, dau. of Hugh, sister and co-heir of Ranulph, Earl of Chester, (refer to BURKE's Extinct and Dormant Peerage, article Meschines, Earls of Chester,) and was s. by his only son,

HENRY, LORD HASTINGS, who adhering to Simon Montfort, Earl of Leicester, against HENRY III., was knighted, and was made governor, by that nobleman, of the castles of Scarborough and Winchester in 1264; and in the following year, of Kenilworth Castle. This feudal baron m. Joane, dau. of William, and sister and co-heir of George de Cantilupe, Barons of Bergavenny; and dying in 1268, was s. by his elder son,

JOHN DE HASTINGS, Lord Hastings and Bergavenny, seneschal of Aquitaine, and in 1290, one of the aspirants to the Scottish throne, in right of his grandmother, Ada, who was niece to MALCOLM IV. and WILLIAM the Lion, Kings of Scotland. This nobleman had summons to parliament from 1295 to the time of his death. He m. Isabel, dau. of William, and sister and co-heir of Aylmer de Valence, Earls of Pembroke, by whom he had two sons and three daus.; the second of which daus., Elizabeth, m. Roger, Lord Grey de Ruthyn, and her ladyship's grandson, Reginald, Lord Grey of Ruthyn, eventually inherited the estates of this branch of the family, with the Baronies of Hastings, Bergavenny, and Welshford. His lordship m. 2ndly, Isabel, 5th dau. of Hugh Despenser, Earl of Winchester, and had two sons. He d. 9 March, 1312-13, and was s. by the elder son of the first marriage,

JOHN, LORD HASTINGS, Bergavenny, and Welshford, governor of Kenilworth Castle in 1323; who d. in 1325, and was s. by his only son,

LAURENCE, who, upon the decease of his grand-uncle,

Aylmer de Valence, Earl of Pembroke, s. p., was created Earl of Pembroke, by patent, dated 13 Oct. 1389; a dignity that expired with John, 3rd earl, who was accidentally slain in a tournament by Sir John St. John, at Woodstock. His lordship's minor honours, however, Lord Hastings, Bergavenny, and Welshford, devolved upon Reginald, Lord Grey of Ruthyn. This terminated the elder branch of the noble house of Hastings; but a younger, deriving from

THOMAS DE HASTINGS, great-grandson of Walter de Hastings, steward to HENRY I., and elder son of William de Hastings, by his 2nd wife, Ida, dau. of Henry, Earl of Ewe, laid the foundation of the present Earldom of Huntingdon. From this Thomas lineally descended

SIR WILLIAM DE HASTINGS, Knt., who was nominated by EDWARD IV. master of the Mints at London and Calais, steward of the honour of Leicester, and of the manors and castles of Donnington, Higham Ferrers, and Daventry; and created by the same monarch, 26 July, 1461, Baron Hastings of Ashby-de-la-Zouch, when his lordship was installed a knight of the most noble order of the Garter. His lordship m. Catharine, relict of William, Lord Bonville and Harington, and dau. of Richard Nevill, Earl of Salisbury, by whom he had four sons and two daughters. In 1466, we find this nobleman entering into an agreement with Dame Elizabeth Grey, late wife of Sir John Grey, Knt., and heir of Edward Grey, late Lord Ferrers, that he should have the wardship of her son, Thomas, afterwards Marquess of Dorset, on whose part it was stipulated, that he should, within five or six years afterwards, marry the eldest dau. of Lord Hastings that might then be living. His lordship, about this time, undertook, in his capacity of master of the Mint, a new coinage of gold, consisting of pieces of eight shillings and fourpence sterling each, called nobles; other pieces of one-half, and a third, of one-fourth that value. For several years afterwards, Lord Hastings was one of the most powerful persons in the kingdom. In 1474, he obtained a licence from EDWARD IV. to impark three thousand acres of land and wood in Ashby-de-la-Zouch, and he accordingly built, at Ashby, a magnificent castle for the residence of his family, which it continued to be for two hundred years. This castle was afterwards remarkable as the temporary prison of MARY Queen of Scots. Of his lordship, Fuller says—"The reder needeth not my dim candle to direct him to this illustrious person, whom King EDWARD IV., or rather Edward Plantagenet, (because more in human than in his royal capacity,) so delighted in, that he made him his lord-chamberlain, Baron Hastings of Ashby-de-la-Zouch," &c. Lord Hastings fell a victim, eventually, to the Protector Gloucester, (RICH. III.,) and was beheaded in the Tower, 13 June, 1483, when his estates were confiscated, but soon afterwards restored, partly by RICHARD, and the remainder by HENRY VII., to his son,

EDWARD, K.B., 2nd baron; who having m. Mary, dau. and sole heir of Thomas, Baron Hungerford, Botreux, Moulins, and Moels, had been summoned to parliament, 15 Nov. 1482, as Lord Hungerford. By this union his lordship had a dau., Anne, who became the wife of Thomas Stanley, Earl of Derby, and after his decease, of John Radcliffe, Lord Fitz-Walter; and a son, his successor, at his demise, 8 Nov. 1507,

GEORGE, 3rd baron. This nobleman attended HENRY VIII., in 1513, at the taking of Serouane and Tournay, and was created by that monarch, 3 Nov. 1520, EARL OF HUNTINGDON. His lordship m. Anne, dau. of Henry Stafford, 2nd Duke of Buckingham, and widow of Sir Walter Herbert, Knt.; and dying 21 July, 1544, was s. by his eldest son,

FRANCIS, 2nd earl, K.G.; who m. Katherine, dau. and co-heir of Henry Pole, Lord Montagu, and granddau. of Margaret, Countess of Salisbury, (which Margaret was dau. and sole heir of George Plantagenet, Duke of Clarence, brother of EDWARD IV.) On New-year's day, 1553, we find this nobleman presenting to EDWARD VI., in a purse of red silk, six sovereigns and eight half-sovereigns; and receiving, in return, a gilt cup and cover, weighing twenty ounces. His lordship d. 20 June, 1561, having had six sons and five daus.; of the youngest dau., the beautiful Lady Mary Hastings, the following circumstance is related:—"John Vassilivich, Great Duke and Emperor of Russia, having a desire to marry an English lady, was told of the Lady Mary Hastings, who being of the blood royal, he began to affect: whereupon making his desires known to Queen ELIZABETH, who did well approve thereof, he sent over Theodore Pisemaskole, a nobleman of great account, his ambassador, who, in the name of his master, offered great advantages to the queen in the event of the marriage. The queen hereupon caused the lady to be attended with divers ladies and young noblemen, that so the ambassador might have a sight of her, which was accomplished in York House Garden, near Charing Cross, London. There was the envoy brought into her presence, and casting down his countenance, fell prostrate before her, then rising back, with his face still towards her, (the lady with the rest admiring at his strange salutation,) he said, by his interpreter, 'it sufficed him to behold the angelic presence of her who, he hoped, would be his master's spouse and empress.'" The alliance did not, however, take place, and the lady d. unm. Of the earl's sons,

Lineage.

Although there are numerous histories of this illustrious family extant, yet the historians do not coincide as to its origin and first settlement in Great Britain. Some bring the Gordons from Greece to Gani, and thence into Scotland, at least a thousand years ago; while others convey them from Spain, Flanders, &c. The most probable conjecture, however, is, that some of these Gordons came into England with WILLIAM, Duke of Normandy, and into Scotland with King MALCOLM CANMORE. Indeed, there is a tradition in North Britain that the first of the name who crossed the Tweed was a valiant knight, a favourite of MALCOLM's, who having killed a wild boar which greatly infested the borders, obtained a grant of lands in the Merse, or Berwickshire, which he called Gordon, after his own surname; and settling there, assumed the boar's head for his armorial bearing, in commemoration of the exploit. Be the early origin, however, what it may, and there is no doubt that it was distinguished, the noble family of which we are about to treat deduces its direct maternal descent from

SIR JOHN DE GORDON, Knt., who obtained in the 28th year of DAVID II. a charter, dated 20 March, 1357-8, confirming the donation which ROBERT I. had made to his grandfather, Sir Adam de Gordon, of the lands of Strath-bogie, and was s. by his son,

SIR JOHN DE GORDON, who obtained a confirmatory charter of the same lands from ROBERT II., dated 16 June, 1376. In the next year, the Earl of March having attacked and burned the town of Roxburgh, the English borderers retaliated on the lands of Sir John Gordon, who, passing the border, encountered Sir John de Lilburn, and, after a desperate affray, defeated him at Carham. Sir John Gordon had also a chief hand in the defeat and capture of Sir Thomas de Musgrave, governor of Berwick, in 1378, after a severe conflict. Sir John fell, eventually, at the battle of Otterburn, in Aug. 1388, leaving a son,

SIR ADAM GORDON, Knt. of Huntly, who was slain in 1402, at the battle of Homildon, and was s. in his estates by his only dau., (by his wife, Elizabeth, dau. of Sir William de Keith, great-marshal of Scotland.)

ELIZABETH GORDON, who m. Alexander Seton, (2nd son of Sir William Seton, of Seton,) and obtained, in conjunction with her husband, from Robert, Duke of Albany, a charter, dated 20 July, 1408, to their joint heirs, and in default, to the heirs of the said Elizabeth, of the baronies of Gourdon and Huntly, &c., and thenceforward the said Alexander was styled Lord of Gordon and Huntly. Of this marriage there were two sons and a dau.,

ALEXANDER.

William, ancestor of the Setons of Meldrum.

Elizabeth, m. to Alexander, Earl of Ross.

The eldest son,

ALEXANDER SETON, Lord of Gordon and Huntly, was created, 1449-50, Earl of Huntly, with limitation to his heirs male by his third wife, Elizabeth, dau. of William, Lord Crichton, chancellor of Scotland, such heirs assuming the surname and bearing the arms of Gordon. His lordship m. thrice: 1st, Jane, dau. of Robert, son and heir of William, 1st Earl Marischal, by whom he acquired a great estate, but had no issue; 2ndly, Egidia, dau. and heir of Sir John Hay, of Tullibody, by whom he had a son, Sir Alexander Seton, who s. to his mother's estates, and was progenitor of the Setons of Touch. The earl m. 3rdly, Elizabeth, dau. of Lord Crichton, by whom he had (with other children) his successor,

GEORGE, 2nd Earl of Huntly; who m. 1st, Princess Annabella, dau. of JAMES I. of Scotland, and relict of James, Earl of Angus, by whom he had,

ALEXANDER, his successor.

Adam, Lord of Aboyne, who marrying Elizabeth, Countess of Sutherland, became Earl of Sutherland in her right. William (Sir), ancestor of the Gordons of Gight, fell at Flodden.

JAMES (Sir), of Letterfourie, admiral of Scotland in 1513. And six daus.

Lord Huntly m. 2ndly, Elizabeth, eldest dau. of William, 1st Earl of Erroll, and relict of Patrick, master of Grey, and dying in 1470, was s. by his eldest son, ALEXANDER, 3rd earl; who m. 1st, Lady Johanna Stewart, eldest dau. of John, Earl of Atholl, by whom he had, with other issue,

JOHN, Lord Gordon, who d. vid. patris, in 1517, leaving by Margaret, his wife, natural dau. of JAMES IV., two sons; the elder of whom s. to the honours at the decease of his grandfather.

William, Bishop of Aberdeen.

Alexander, Laird of Strathaven, ancestor of the Gordons of CLUNY, and of MAJOR-GEN. PATRICK GORDON, governor of Pennsylvania.

The earl m. 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. of Andrew, Lord Gray, and relict of John, 6th Lord Glamis. He d. in 1523, and was s. by his grandson,

GEORGE, 4th earl; who was constituted lord-chancellor of Scotland, and had the great seal delivered to him, 10 June, 1546. His lordship took an active part in the political affairs of his country during the reign of King JAMES V., the regency of that monarch's dowager, and the reign of the unfortunate MARY, his daughter; and having taken up arms in the feuds which then agitated Scotland, he was defeated by his rival, the Earl of Moray, at Corriclie, near Aberdeen. The consequences of the loss of this battle were most disastrous to the family of Huntly. The earl himself, thrown from his horse, and too unwieldy to rise from the ground, was smothered in the retreat, 28 Oct. 1562, and his body, brought to town on a pair of panners, was afterwards produced in parliament, when a doom of forfeiture was pronounced against him and his family, which was not reversed until 19 April, 1667. His son, Sir John Gordon, condemned to be beheaded, was butchered at Aberdeen by an unskilful executioner. The earl was s. by his eldest surviving son, (by Elizabeth, eldest dau. of Robert, Lord Keith, and sister of William, 4th Earl Marischal.)

GEORGE, 5th earl. This nobleman, after the unhappy death of his father, was tried for high treason in 1563, sentenced to be hanged, drawn, and quartered. He was, however, pardoned by the Queen, and appointed lord-chancellor of Scotland in 1566. His lordship m. Lady Anne Hamilton, dau. of James, Earl of Arran, Duke of Chatelherault, Regent of Scotland; and dying in May, 1576, was s. by his only son,

GEORGE, 6th earl; who had been created, 17 April, 1599, Baron of Badenoch, Lochaber, Strathaven, Achindown, Balmore, Garthie, and Kincardine, Viscount Inverness, Earl of Enzie, and MARQUESS OF HUNTLY. His lordship m. Lady Henrietta Stewart, eldest dau. of Eme, Duke of Lennox, by whom he had a numerous family. This nobleman was heard to say, "that he never drew a sword in his own quarrel. In his youth, a prodigal spender; in his old age, more wise and worldly; yet never counted for cost in matters of credit and honour; a great householder; a terror to his enemies, whom he ever with his prideful ken held under subjection and obedience; just in all his bargains, and never heard for his true debt; he was mightily envied by the kirk for his religion, and by others for his greatness, and thereby had much trouble." His master, King JAMES, loved him dearly, and he was a good and loyal subject to that prince. He d. 16 June, 1636, and was s. by his eldest son,

GEORGE, 2nd marquess. His lordship was a staunch adherent of the unfortunate CHARLES I., and was beheaded in consequence, 30 March, 1649. He m. Lady Anne Campbell, dan. of Archibald, 7th Earl of Argyll, and had, (with daus.,)

GEORGE, Lord Gordon, who joining the Marquess of Montrose, fell at the battle of Alford, 9 July, 1645, unm. JAMES, who, upon his father's succeeding to the earldom, inherited the VISCOUNTY OF ABOYNE, that dignity having been conferred upon him when Lord Gordon, 20 April, 1652, upon such a stipulation. This nobleman joined the banner of Montrose during the civil wars, but was eventually obliged to fly into France, where he died of grief, upon hearing of the melancholy fate of CHARLES I., in 1649. He d. unm., and the viscounty expired.

LEWIS, successor to his father. Charles, created Lord Gordon of Strathavon, and EARL OF ABOYNE,* in 1660, ancestor of George, present MARQUESS OF HUNTLY.

The dean having presented the medal to the faculty at their next meeting, a debate ensued about the propriety of admitting it into their repositories, when the affirmative was carried, and a vote passed, to return thanks to the duchess for her present. Two advocates, delegated for that purpose, waited upon her grace, and expressed their hopes that she would soon have an opportunity to compliment the faculty with a second medal on the Restoration. Lineage.

This noble family deduces its descent from the ancient and honourable house of Villiers, seigneurs of Lile-Adam in Normandy; and its establishment in England is fixed at the period of the Conquest. For six centuries subsequently it ranked amongst the most considerable gentry, serving the office of sheriff, receiving the honour of knighthood, &c. &c., and was amongst the earliest distinguished by a baronetcy.

PAGAN DE VILLIERS, Lord of Crosby, co. Lancaster, patriarch of this ancient house, living in the reigns of WILLIAM RUFUS and HENRY I., had issue,

I. MATTHEW, whose granddau. and heir m. Sir William de Boteler, of Warrington.

II. William, of Newbold, Notts.

III. Alan, whose son, Sir ROBERT VILLIERS, Knt., of Little Crosby, left an only dau. and heir,

BEATRIX, who conveyed Little Crosby in marriage to

ROBERT MOLINEUX, of Sefton, and was mother of a son, Sir RICHARD MOLINEUX, of Sefton, Little Crosby, and Espeake, ancestor of the Earls of Sefton, and the Molyneuxes of Little Crosby, from whom, through the families of Ernelis, Espeake, Dod of Smythe's Pentrey, and Farrell, derives, as co-representative, the present WILLIAM-HENRY

WORTHINGTON, Esq. of Sandway Bank, co. Chester.

(See Earldom of Sefton.)

IV. Pagan.

From the 4th son,

PAGAN DE VILLIERS, descended,

WILLIAM VILLIERS, Esq. of Brookesby, eldest son of

Sir George Villiers, Knt., (by his 1st marriage with Audrey,

dau. and heir of William Sanders, Esq. of Harrington, co.

Jorthampton, upon whom a Baronetcy was conferred in 1619.) The title, however, ceased in 1711, at the demise of the grandson of the first possessor, without issue. The eldest son, by his 2nd marriage, of Sir George Villiers, and the half-brother of Sir William, the 1st baronet, was George, DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM, the celebrated favourite of JAMES I. and CHARLES I., who fell by the hand of the assassin Felton, 23 Aug. 1628, (for an account of VILLIERS, DUKES OF BUCKINGHAM, see BURKE'S Extinct and Dormant Peerage.) The 2nd son of the above Sir George Villiers, Knt., by his 1st wife, and, consequently, brother of Sir William Villiers aforesaid,

EDWARD VILLIERS, received the honour of knighthood 7 Sept. 1616, and from him the present Earl of Jersey directly derives. This gentleman having been employed, in 1620, as ambassador to Bohemia, was nominated in 1622, through the interest of his half-brother, the Duke of Buckingham, president of the province of Munster, in Ireland, upon the decease of the Earl of Thomond. Sir Edward m. Barbara, eldest dau. of Sir John St. John, of Lidiard Tregose, co. Wilts, and niece of Sir Oliver St. John, created 3 Jan. 1630, Viscount Grandison, in the peerage of Ireland, with limitation of the honour to her (Lady Villiers) posterity. By this marriage, Sir Edward had four sons and three daus. He d. 7 Sept. 1636, lamented more deeply than any governor who had previously ruled the province, and was interred in the Earl of Cork's chapel, at Youghall, where the following lines were engraven on his tomb:—

“ Munster may curse the time that Villiers came
To make us worse by leaving such a name,
Of noble parts, as none can imitate,
But those whose hearts are married to the state;
But if they press to imitate his fame,
Munster may bless the time that Villiers came.”

WILLIAM VILLIERS, Esq., the eldest son of Sir Edward, s. to the estate of his father, and upon the demise of his uncle, in 1630, became Viscount Grandison. Actively espousing the cause of CHARLES I., his lordship received a wound at the siege of Bristol, 26 July, 1643, of which he died in the following month, at Oxford, leaving by Mary, dau. of Paul, Viscount Bayning, an only dau., Barbara, (wife of Roger Palmer, Earl of Castlemain, in Ireland,) afterwards Duchess of Cleveland, and mistress of CHAS. II., and transmitting his title to his brother,

JOHN, 3rd Viscount Grandison, who d. s. p., when the honours devolved upon his brother,
GEORGE, 4th viscount; who m. Lady Mary Leigh, 2nd dau. and co-heir of Sir Francis Leigh, Bart., created Lord Dunsmore in 1628, and Earl of Chester in 1644, (honours which expired with his lordship, in 1653,) and had two sons and two daus. The elder son,

EDWARD, a brigadier-gen. in the army, and lieut.-col. of the Queen's regiment of horse; m. in 1677, Catherine, dau. and heir of John Fitzgerald, Esq. of Dromana, co. Waterford, by whom he obtained a considerable landed property in that county. He d. in 1693, leaving,

- 2 William.
- 3 Mary, m. to Brigadier-Gen. Stuart.
- 4 Harriet, m. to Robert Pitt, Esq., by whom she was mother of WILLIAM PITT, FIRST EARL OF CHATHAM.

Mrs. Villiers obtained a patent from King WILLIAM, in 1699, granting her the privilege to enjoy the same title and precedence as if her husband had survived his father, and had actually been possessed of the honour of VISCOUNT GRANDISON. She married with Lieut.-Gen. William Steuart, appointed, in 1711, commander-in-chief of the army during the Duke of Ormonde's absence. General Steuart was M.P. for the county of Waterford, and a privy councillor in Ireland.

Lord Grandison d. in 1699, and was s. by his grandson,

JOHN, 5th viscount, who was created EARL GRANDISON of Limerick, 11 Sept. 1721. His lordship m. Lady Frances Carey, dau. of Anthony, Viscount Falkland, by whom he had issue,

Her ladyship m. in 1739, Aland-John Mason, Esq., M.P. for the co. of Waterford, and was s. by her only surviving child,

His lordship d. 14 May, 1766, when the earldom expired, but the Viscounty of Grandison devolved, as will appear presently, upon the 3rd Earl of Jersey. Return we now to EDWARD VILLIERS, Esq., the youngest son of the governor of Munster, who, for his gallantry, as a military officer of rank, during the civil wars, was knighted by CHARLES II., 7 April, 1650; and appointed knight-marshal of the household, and governor of Timmouth Castle. He had likewise a grant from the same monarch of the royal house and manor of Richmond; and his lady was appointed governess to the Princesses MARY and ANNE, afterwards Queens of England. Sir Edward, advancing further in royal favour, was elevated to the peerage of England 20 March, 1690-1, by the titles of Baron Villiers of Hoo, and Viscount Villiers of Dartford, both in the co. Kent; and being appointed ambassador extraordinary to the States-General in 1697, was created EARL OF THE ISLAND OF JERSEY 13 Oct. in that year.

JOHNSTON.

JOHNSTON, SIR WILLIAM-BACON, of Johnston, co. Aberdeen; s. his father, as 8th bart., in Jan. 1844; late an officer in the 1st Royals.

Lineage.

This is one of the most ancient families of the name of Johnston, and has always competed with the Johnstons of Annandale for the chiefship.

In an old genealogical history in the possession of the present Sir William Johnston, Bart. of that ilk, the first mentioned is

STIVEN DE JOHNSTON, (living in the reign of King DAVID BRUCE,) a man of great learning, brother to the Laird of Annandale. Retiring from the troubles in his own country, he went to the north of Scotland, and was well received by the Earl of Mar. It has always been maintained by the Johnstons of Caskieben, that this Stiven was the eldest brother of the Annandale Johnstons. He m. Margaret, dau. and heiress of Sir Andrew Garioch, Knt. of Caskieben, by whom he got a considerable estate, and had a son,

JOHN DE JOHNSTON, who was proprietor of the lands of Ballindalach; he m. Marjory Leighton, dau. of the Laird of Owsan, in Angus, and in her right became possessed of Invertoun. He lived to a great age, d. temp. JAMES I., 468, and was s. by his son,

GILBERT DE JOHNSTON, who m. 1st, Elizabeth Vans, dau. of the Laird of Meny, by whom Fortlathen came into the family, and by whom he had a son and three daus. He m. 2ndly, a dau. of Lord Forbes of Pitligo, and by her had a son. He was s. by his elder son, ALEXANDER DE JOHNSTON, who in the reign of JAMES II. got his lands of Caskieben, which were formerly held of the Earls of Mar, erected into a free barony, to be called the Barony of Johnston, in all time coming. He m. a dau. of Glaister of Glack, by whom he had four sons. He d. in the reign of JAMES III., and was s. by the eldest,

WILLIAM JOHNSTON, of that ilk, who m. 1st, Margaret, dau. of Meldrum of Fyvie, by whom he had one son, JAMES, his heir, and a dau., m. to a son of Black Hall of that ilk. He m. 2ndly, a dau. of the Laird of Conland, in Fife, and by her had a son, Gilbert, and daus. This William was a man of great loyalty; he accompanied his royal master to the fatal field of Flodden, where he perished with the flower of the nobility, anno 1513, and was s. by his son,

JAMES JOHNSTON, of that ilk, who m. Clara, dau. of Barclay of Gertlie; by her he had three sons and four daus. He d. in 1548.

WILLIAM JOHNSTON, his apparent heir and eldest son, m. Margaret Ray, descended of the noble family of Errol, by whom he had one son, GEORGE, and three daus. This William joined the royal standard, and was slain at Pinkie, 1547, his father being then alive.

GEORGE JOHNSTON, of that ilk, s. his grandfather; he m. Christian, dau. of William, 7th Lord Forbes, by whom he had six sons and seven daus., viz., 1 JOHN, his heir; 2 Gilbert; 3 George; 4 Thomas; 5 Arthur, who went into Germany to finish his education, where he m. a lady of noble family; he was a man of erudition, and having studied physic, became eminent in that profession, and was physician in ordinary to King CHARLES I.; he was principal of Marischal College, Aberdeen, and holds amongst the Latin poets of Scotland the next rank to the elegant Buchanan; he d. at Oxford, whilst attending King CHARLES I.; 6 William. George Johnston of that ilk d. in 1590, and was s. by his eldest son,

JOHN JOHNSTON, of that ilk, who m. Janet, dau. of the Laird of Foveran, by whom he had two sons and two daus.: he m. 2ndly, Katherine, dau. of Lundie of that ilk, by whom he had, with one dau., two sons, 1 Thomas, (in virtue of his mother's contract,) Laird of Craig, from whom the present baronet is lineally descended; and 2 Gilbert. He was s. by his eldest son,

SIR GEORGE JOHNSTON, of that ilk, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of Forbes of Tolquhon. Sir George was a man of great abilities and merit, and was, by King CHARLES I., created a Baronet by his royal patent, "Domino Georgio Johnston de Caskleben, milite baronetto terrarum barontas et regalitates de Johnston, in Nova Scotia, in America, &c., dated the 31st of March, 1625. The patent is in possession of the family, and describes the situation and boundaries of a large grant of land in Nova Scotia, but unfortunately for Sir George and other baronets, to whom the king gave similar grants, the French conquered that part of America before they took possession, and although they were promised a remuneration in another quarter, it has never been carried into effect. It must here be remarked, that there is a mistake respecting this baronetage; the original patent stands thus, viz.—"Primo die mensis Martii, anno Domini millesimo sexcentesimo vigesimo quinto et anno regni nostri primo." N.B. There is one word defaced before 'primo die'; and in the book of the privy seal, the date is the 31st March, 1625, but in the record of the great seal, the date of the patent is "ultimo die Martii anno Domini millesimo sexcentesimo vigesimo sexto anno regni secundo." If the patent and privy seal are right—viz., 31st March, 1625—then Sir William Johnston has the precedence of all the baronets now existing in Scotland, but he has hitherto ranked from the record of the great seal. This Sir George was made sheriff of Aberdeen on the removal of George, 6th Earl of Huntly, anno 1630. By the above mentioned Elizabeth Forbes he had three sons and two daus.; he was s. by his eldest son,

II. SIR GEORGE, 2nd baronet of Johnston, who m. a dau. of Sir William Lealie, of Warde, by whom he had an only son,

III. SIR JOHN, who entered when very young into the army, served in King WILLIAM's wars in Flanders, and was a captain at the battle of the Boyne. Whilst in London for a short time, with his friend the Hon. Capt. James Campbell, he was unfortunately induced to assist that gentleman in eloping with and marrying Miss Mary Wharton, a young and rich heiress, nearly related to Lord Wharton, the great favourite of King WILLIAM, who had interest to obtain a proclamation, offering a reward for apprehending them. Campbell escaped into Scotland; Sir John was taken and tried, condemned to death, and executed on 31 Dec. 1690. The whole account of the trial and execution, and the ballads made on the occasion are with the family papers, and afford a striking proof of the animosity existing between the English and Scotch in those disturbed times, to which Sir John evidently fell a sacrifice; for it appeared by the evidence of the clergyman who performed the marriage ceremony, by the people of the house in which the parties lodged, and where they remained three days, as well as by Miss Wharton's own letter to her aunt, acquainting her of the marriage, that there was no force used, but that she was freely consenting to it. Sir John was a brave man, and bitterly lamented the ignominy of his death; he was much a stranger to the laws of England, and totally ignorant that being present at the wedding and lending his apartments to accommodate his friend (which was all he did in the matter) constituted an offence worthy of death. The marriage was dissolved by act of parliament; Capt. Campbell afterwards m. in Scotland, and was the father of Gen. Campbell, who became Duke of Argyll. Sir John having never been married, was s. by his cousin and heir male,

IV. SIR JOHN, who m. a dau. of the Laird of Thainston, and by her had one son and two daus. Sir John was strongly attached to the house of Stuart, and much averse to the union between England and Scotland, his nationality heightened by the recent execution of his cousin. He was particularly noticed by Charles Stuart on his arrival at Aberdeen, and accompanied him to Dunotter Castle, then the residence of the Earl Marischal. In conjunction with the earl and others in the north, he raised a force, and assembled his relations and retainers to assist in what he considered the right cause; and this act was fatal to his family and successors. In the year 1715, they took the field and joined the Earl of Mar in the disastrous battle of Sheriff-Muir; Sir John's son was killed by his side, and he dared not return home. He died ten years afterwards at Edinburgh. Sir John was s. by his cousin,

V. SIR WILLIAM, of Craig and Bishopstoun, who m. Jean, dau. of John Sandilands, of Lord Torphichen's family, by whom he had two sons and three daus., WILLIAM, his heir; and Alexander, an officer in the navy, who perished with his whole crew on the coast of Scotland, off Stonehive. Sir William d. in 1750, and was s. by his son,

VI. SIR WILLIAM JOHNSTON, of that ilk. He entered early into the sea-service, and had the command of a ship of war in the British navy. Upon the death of his father he quitted the navy, came home, and purchased the lands of Hilltown, near Aberdeen. He m. 1st, Sarah, dau. of Thomas Kirby, Esq., a West India proprietor; and by her had one son, who d. in infancy; he m. 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. of Capt. Cleland, of the Clelands of that ilk, and by her had six sons and five daus., WILLIAM, his heir, and Alexander, midshipman, who perished at sea; the other four sons d. in infancy; two of the daus. married: Mary-Seiby, to Peter Gourlay, of the Island of St. Vincent; and Elenor-Sandilands, to the Rev. William Uvedale, of Barking, Suffolk, her cousin. After the death of Elizabeth, Sir William m. 3rdly, Amy, dau. of Newman Ffrench, of Belchamp, co. Essex, but by her had no issue. He d. in 1794, aged 82, and was s. by his son,

VII. SIR WILLIAM, of that ilk, who entered the army at an early age, and served in India during the war against the French, taking part in seven actions and at the capture of several forts on the coast of Malabar. In 1798 he raised a regiment of fencible infantry for general service, "The Prince of Wales's Own," which was reduced at the short peace of 1802. Sir William m. 1st, Mary, dau. of John Bacon, Esq. of Shrubland Hall, co. Suffolk, lineally descended from the Lord Keeper Bacon, whose 3rd son was the great philosopher, Sir Francis Bacon, Lord Chancellor of England and Baron Verulam. By this lady, who d. in 1802, he had no issue. He m. 2ndly, Maria, only dau. of John Bacon, Esq. of Fryern House, in the co. of Middlesex, the youngest son of a branch of the Shrubland family, settled in Cumberland in the reign of HENRY VIII., which numbers amongst its ancestors the celebrated Friar Bacon of the 12th century. KENMURE

KENMURE, VISCOUNT, (Adam Gordon,) and Lord Lochinvar, in the peerage of Scotland; lieut. R.N.; b. 9 Jan. 1792; s. upon the decease of his uncle, 21 Sept. 1840; m. in Nov. 1843, Mary-Anne, dau. of the late James Wildey, Esq. His lordship d. 1 Sept. 1847, when the title became DORMANT.

Lineage.

The Gordons are believed to have come to England with WILLIAM the Conqueror, and thence to Scotland with MALCOLM III., in whose reign the public records exhibit Richard de Gordoun, the head of this family, as holding the Barony of Gordoun and other extensive possessions in the Merse, on the southern frontiers of Scotland. From this Richard descended,

SIR ADAM DE GORDOUN, a knight of great renown, and the representative of the family in the momentous period of Scottish history, who, though his possessions were almost on the borders of England, long held out against the power of EDWARD I., and for a long time resisted the bond of fealty and submission prescribed by the English monarch in 1292; but that bond having become generally subscribed by the successively conquered Scotch nobility, and Sir Adam's own son, William de Gourdon, having been obliged to do so, the valiant knight was impelled to succumb, 28 July, 1296. Baliol's subsequent resignation of the crown to EDWARD gave Sir Adam a pretence to fly to arms, and thereafter, like Wallace and others, he leagued his fortunes with those of ROBERT BRUCE, from whom he obtained for his services a grant of the lands of Strathogie in the north, forfeited by the desertion of the Earl of Atholl. These, Sir Adam never, however, possessed, for the donation became ineffective by the return of the earl to his allegiance. Sir Adam had another son, who shone conspicuously at Hallidon Hill, in 1333, but it has not yet been ascertained whether William or Alexander was the elder son. But it appears from the records, that Sir Adam, in 1306, took a charter of his barony of Stitichill in life-rent to himself, and in fee to his son,

SIR WILLIAM DE GORDOUN, who subscribed the bond of fealty, 12 July, 1296, and was designed in a writ, in '231, as Signor de Stitichill. He was s. by his son,

KEN

ROGER DE GORDOUN; who was s. by his son, SIR ALEXANDER DE GORDOUN; who d. in 1432, leaving a son and successor,

He m. Lady Isabel Ruthven, dau. of William, 1st Earl of Gowrie; and dying in 1628, was s. by his eldest son,

This gentleman disposed of Stitichill, the ancient inheritance of the family, and is said to have given the produce in a purse to the Duke of Buckingham, to insure his grace's interest in forwarding his claim to the Earldom of Gowrie. But the duke falling the very next day by the hand of the assassin Felton, the expectation proved abortive. Sir John was, however, elevated to the peerage, as Lord Lochinvar and VISCOUNT KENMURE, by patent, dated 8 May, 1633, with remainder to his heirs male whatsoever bearing the surname and arms of Gordon. At the expiration of his articles, Mr. Kenyon determined to pursue the higher walk of the profession, and became, accordingly, in Trinity Term, 1754, a member of the society of Lincoln's-Inn, by which he was called to the bar in Hilary Term, 1761. His subsequent success was slow, but not the less certain; and about the year 1773, we find him enjoying very considerable practice in the Court of Chancery; his reputation was, however, firmly established in 1780, by his able defence, in conjunction with Mr. (afterwards Lord) Erskine, of Lord George Gordon. In 1782, soon after the accession of the Rockingham administration, Mr. Kenyon was appointed attorney-general, without serving the intermediate office of solicitor-general, and was constituted, at the same time, chief-justice of Chester. Lineage.

This family was founded in Ireland by an eminent prelate, of whom WARE, in his History of Ireland, speaks in the highest terms. In the work of that careful historian, many of the subjoined particulars will be found.

THE RT. REV. EDWARD KING was a native of Huntingdonshire, and D.D. in the university of Dublin. By letters patent of King JAMES I., bearing date the 8th of July, in the 9th year of that king's reign, he was nominated Lord Bishop of Elphin, and in the month of December, 1611, he was consecrated. He repaired and restored, at his own expense, the cathedral of Elphin, and he built a castle, with offices adjoining, for himself and his successors in the see, endowing the whole with lands which he had purchased. He had a family of fifteen children; and yet, having found his bishopric the poorest, he left it the richest in all Ireland. He recovered its ancient possessions, which had been alienated by his predecessor; and that income which he found reduced to 200 marks, he left worth £1500 a-year. Having thus reclaimed the possessions of his bishopric, and permanently augmented its revenues, his lordship voluntarily resigned the "quarta pars episcopalis" which his predecessors had enjoyed. For these and other praiseworthy actions, the lord-lieutenant (Strafford) mentions him with great honour in a letter to Archbishop Laud, and alluding to his patronymic, calls him "a truly royal bishop." His lordship was twice married. His 1st wife was Anne, dau. of — Coxsed, Esq., by whom he had a large family, viz.,

- i. JAMES, his eldest son, of whom presently.
- ii. John, of Boyle, co. Roscommon; b. 13 Feb. 1611; m. Sarah, dau. of Christopher Conway, Esq. of Dublin, and had issue, Anne, wife of Dominick French, of Dungar, co. Roscommon, in whose will (dated 3 May, 1670) mention is made of his "mother-in-law, Sarah King," and his "beloved uncle, Captaine James King, of Charlestown." From this marriage springs LORD DE FRYNE.

- iv. Charles, living in 1638.
- v. Oliver, living in 1638.
- vi. Rokeby, living in 1658.

- viii. Anne, m. to Edward D'Alton, Esq.
- ix. Elizabeth.
- x. Martha, living in 1664.
- xi. Mary, d. 27 Aug. 1618.

His lordship m. 2ndly, Grace, dau. of Nathaniel Sampson, Esq. of Leicestershire, whose father, Thomas Sampson, was a distinguished preacher, prebendary of St. Paul's, &c., and whose mother was niece of Bishop Latimer. By his 2nd wife, who survived him, his lordship had issue,

- ii. Susannah.
- iii. Alice, b. 23 Feb. 1612; d. 20 Nov. same year.

His lordship adorned the bishopric of Elphin for twenty-seven years and three months; d. 8 March, 1638, and was buried in his own cathedral, aged 63, as is proved by his monument, still remaining. His will was nuncupative, was attested by the chancellor of his diocese, and proved on the 16th of March, 1639. His eldest son,

JAMES KING, of Charlestown, co. Roscommon, b. 6 Feb. 1610, and was probably, therefore, a native of England, like his father, for the latter did not receive the bishopric of Elphin till 1611. KINGSALE.

KINGSALE, LORD, (John-Constantine De Courcy,) Baron Courcy of Courcy and Baron of Ringrone, in the peerage of Ireland; b. 5 Nov. 1827; s. his father as 29th and premier baron, 7 Jan. 1847. Lord Kingsale enjoys the hereditary privilege (granted by King JOHN to De Courcy, Earl of Ulster) of wearing his hat in the royal presence.

Lineage.

The family of Courcy claims alliance with most of the royal houses of Europe, paternally through the Dukes of Lorraine, and maternally through the ducal house of Normandy,

LOUIS IV., King of France, b. in 920; m. in 939, Gerberga, dau. of HENRY I., Emperor of Germany, by whom he had two sons, Lotharius, who s. to the French throne, (and with whose son, LOUIS V., the race of monarchs descended from Charlemagne ceased;) and

CHARLES, Duke of Lorraine, whose immediate descendant,

ROBERT DE COURCY, was Lord of Courcy, in Normandy, in 1006, and was s. by his eldest son,

RICHARD DE COURCY, who accompanied his sovereign, WILLIAM, into England, and distinguished himself at the battle of Hastings, participated largely in the Conqueror's spoil, having been allotted numerous lordships; amongst which was that of Stoke, co. Somerset, and thence denominated Stoke Courcy. His lordship d. in 1098, and was s. by his son,

ROBERT, as Lord de Courcy, in Normandy, and Baron of Stoke Courcy, in England. This nobleman was steward of the household to HENRY I., and to his dau., Maude, the empress; by the former of whom he was made one of the greater Barons of Westminster. His lordship m. Rohesia, dau. of Hugh de Grant Mesnil, Lord of Hinckley, co. Leicester, and lord-high-steward of England, by whom he had five sons, and was s. by the eldest,

WILLIAM, Baron of Stoke Courcy, and Dapifer to HENRY I. This nobleman having no issue, was s. by his brother,

ROBERT, Baron of Stoke Courcy, who, temp. King STEPHEN, had a principal command at the battle of Northampton, against the Scotch. This feudal lord m. Avicia, dau. and co-heir of William de Meschines, Earl of Cambridge, and was s. by an only son,

WILLIAM, Baron of Stoke Courcy, and Dapifer to HENRY II. This nobleman d. in 1171, and was s. by his eldest son,

SIR JOHN COURCY, who having distinguished himself temp. HENRY II., in that monarch's wars in England and Gascony, was sent into Ireland, in the year 1177, as an assistant to William Fitz-Adelm, in the government of that kingdom. Sir John having prevailed upon some of the veteran soldiers to accompany him, invaded the province of Ulster with twenty-two knights, fifty esquires, and about three hundred foot-soldiers, and after many hard fought battles, succeeded in attaching that quarter of the kingdom to the English monarchy. For which important service he was created, in 1181, (being the first Englishman dignified with an Irish title of honour,) EARL OF ULSTER. His lordship continued in high favour during the remainder of the reign of his royal master, and performed prodigies of valour in Ireland; but upon the accession of King JOHN, his splendour and rank having excited the envy of Hugh de Lacie, appointed governor of Ireland by that monarch, the Earl of Ulster was treacherously seized while performing penance, unarmed and barefooted, in the churchyard of Downpatrick, on Good Friday, anno 1203, and sent over to England, where the king condemned him to perpetual imprisonment in the Tower, and granted to Lacie all the earl's possessions in Ireland. After his lordship had been in confinement about a year, a dispute happening to arise between King JOHN and Philip-Augustus of France, concerning the Duchy of Normandy, the decision of which being referred to single combat, King JOHN, more hasty than advised, appointed the day, against which the King of France provided his champion; but the King of England, less fortunate, could find no one of his subjects willing to take up the gauntlet, until his captive in the Tower, the gallant Earl of Ulster, was prevailed upon to accept the challenge. But when everything was prepared for the contest, and the champions had entered the lists, in presence of the monarchs of England, France, and Spain, the opponent of the earl, seized with a sudden panic, put spurs to his horse, and fled the arena; whereupon the victory was adjudged with acclamation to the champion of England. The French king being informed, however, of the earl's powerful strength, and wishing to witness some exhibition of it, his lordship, at the desire of King JOHN, cleft a massive helmet in twain at a single blow. The king was so well satisfied with this signal performance, that he not only restored the earl to his estates and effects, but desired him to ask anything within his gift, and it should be granted. To which ULSTER replied, that having estates and titles enough, he desired that his successors might have the privilege (their first obeisance being paid) to remain covered in the presence of his majesty, and all future kings of England; which request was immediately conceded. This heroic warrior and able statesman d. in France, about the year 1310, and was s. by his only son,

MILES, upon whom HENRY III. conferred, in 1181, the Barony of Kingsale, in Ireland, as a compensation for the Earldom of Ulster, which was retained by Hugo de Lacie. For five centuries afterwards, the honours descended regularly. The 18th lord,

JOHN DE COURCY, d. 25 July, 1625, leaving four sons, 1 GERALD, his successor; 2 Edmond, d. s. p.; 3 PATRICK; 4 David, whose son, Anthony of Bandon, co. Cork, d. in 1727, leaving three sons, Anthony, d. without male issue; Miles, lost at sea, in 1734; JOHN of Kinaciowna, who inherited as 25th baron. The eldest son,

GERALD, 19th lord, d. without male issue, about the year 1649, leaving a dau., Mary, his heir-at-law, m. 1st, to John Galway, of Kinsale; and 2ndly, to Donogh O'Driscall. His lordship was s. by his brother,

PATRICK, 20th lord; who d. about the year 1663, leaving four sons and three daus., JOHN, his successor; Edmund, d. s. p.; Miles, whose son, GERALD, s. as 24th lord; Gerald, d. s. p.; Alice, m. to Dermot MacCarthy, Esq. of Aghlah; Elizabeth, m. to David, Viscount Kilmallock; Margaret, m. to Phillip-Barry Oge. The eldest son,

JOHN, 21st lord, d. about 1667, and was s. by his eldest son,

PATRICK, 22nd lord; who d. s. p., and was s. by his brother,

ALMERICUS, 23rd lord; outlawed in 1691, for his adhesion to the fortunes of JAMES II.; but the outlawry was very soon removed, and his lordship took his seat in the parliament of Ireland in 1692. This nobleman, in observance of the ancient privilege of his house, appeared in the presence of King WILLIAM covered, and explained to that monarch, when his majesty expressed surprise at the circumstance, the reason thus:—"Sire, my name is Courcy; I am Lord of Kingsale, in your majesty's kingdom of Ireland; and the reason of my appearing covered in your majesty's presence is, to assert the ancient privilege of my family, granted to Sir John de Courcy, Earl of Ulster, and his heirs, by JOHN, King of England." The king acknowledged the privilege, and giving the baron his hand to kiss, his lordship paid his obeisance, and continued covered. He d. in 1719, without issue, leaving MARGARET, wife of William Ireland, Esq., his sole surviving sister and heiress. That lady's descendants are the Irelands of Low Park, co. Roscommon, and Robertstown House, co. Kildare. (See BURKE'S Landed Gentry.) The peerage reverted to his first cousin,

GERALD, 24th baron, grandson of Patrick, the 20th baron, (being son of the Hon. Miles de Courcy, by Elizabeth, youngest dau. and eventually sole heir of Anthony Sadleir, Esq. of Arley Hall, co. Warwick.) This nobleman, upon being presented to GEORGE I., in 1720, had the honour of kissing his majesty's hand, and asserting his ancient privilege. His lordship m. Margaretta, only dau. and heir of John Essington, Esq. of Ashlyns, co. Hertford, by whom he had,

Lineage.

SIR WILLIAM KEITH, Knt., was created Earl-Marischal of Scotland, by JAMES II., in 1458, which dignity passed in regular succession to

GEORGE,* the 10th earl, whose honours and estates fell under an act of attainder, in 1716, resulting from his lord-

* George, 10th earl-marischal. This nobleman, who, as mentioned, was attained in consequence of his participation in the rising of 1715, had the good fortune to effect his escape into Spain, and thence removing into Prussia, obtained the confidence and friendship of FREDERICK III., who appointed him, in 1750, ambassador to France, invested him with the order of the Black Eagle, and constituted him governor of Neuchâtel. In 1759, his lordship, being ambassador from Prussia to the court of Madrid, discovered the secret of the family compact, by which the different branches of the house of Bourbon had bound themselves to assist each other; and communicating the same to Mr. Pitt, that minister represented his case so favourably to GEORGE II., that his majesty granted his lordship's pardon in 1759; and an act of parliament passed in the following year to enable him to inherit estates, but he rejected the insertion of a clause overpowring his succession to honours. His lordship was further favoured by the crown, under the sanction of parliament, with a grant of public money in 1761. He died in 1778, at Potsdam, at the advanced age of eighty-eight, enjoying his Majesty of Prussia's confidence to the last in no great a degree as to be called "the king's friend." An "Eloge de my Lord Marischal," by M. D'Almbert, was published at Berlin in 1779.

ship's adhesion to the Stuarts, in 1715. His lordship was for many years subsequently in the service of the King of Prussia; and his only brother, the Hon. George Keith, following his fortunes, distinguished himself first in the Russian service, where he attained the rank of field-marshal, and had the command of the Russian army in the war of 1740. He was afterwards in the service of the King of Prussia. He fell at Hockrichin, 14 Oct. 1758; and a superb monument to his memory, at Berlin, records his achievements as the celebrated Marshal Keith.

THE HON. SIR JOHN KEITH, Knt., 3rd son of William, 6th earl-marischal, by Lady Mary Erskine, was elevated to the peerage, 26 June, 1677, by the titles of Baron Keith of Inverurie and Keith Hall, and EARL OF KINTORE, having been appointed in 1660, knight-marischal of Scotland, and that office settled hereditarily in his family, in consideration of the loyalty he had evinced in preserving the regalia of Scotland from falling into the hands of CROMWELL. Sir John Keith had those ensigns of royalty safely conveyed from Dunmore Castle and deposited under ground in the church of Kinneff; sailing immediately for France, it was supposed that he had carried them away; in consequence of which, all further search by the Cromwellians was abandoned.* His lordship obtained a new grant of his honours in 1694, extending the reversion to his own female heirs, and to the male issue of his brother George. He m. Margaret, dau. of Thomas, 2nd Earl of Haddington, and was s. in 1714, by his only son,

WILLIAM, 2nd earl. This nobleman, joining the insurgents of 1715, was at the battle of Sheriff Muir, and never afterwards shaved his beard; he does not appear, however, to have suffered in consequence of his participation in the Rebellion, further than being deprived of the office of marischal. His lordship m. Catherine, eldest dau. of David, 4th Viscount Stormont, and had issue,

- i. JOHN,
- ii. WILLIAM, } successive earls.
- iii. Catherine, m. to David, 5th Lord Falconer of Halkerton, and had, with other issue,
 - 1 ALEXANDER, 6th Lord Falconer; who was s. in 1763, by his brother,
 - 2 WILLIAM, 7th Lord Falconer; who d. in Dec. 1776, leaving a son and successor,
 - ANTHONY-ADRIAN, 8th Lord Falconer; of whom hereafter as 5th EARL OF KINTORE.
 - 3 George, capt. R.N., father of GEORGE FALCONER, Esq. of Pseudo.

His lordship was s. in 1718, by his elder son,

JOHN, 3rd earl; who d. s. p. in 1758, and was s. by his brother,

WILLIAM, 4th earl. This nobleman dying www. in 1761, the estates devolved upon George, the 10th and attainted earl-marischal, while the peerage remained suspended until that nobleman's decease, in 1778, when it passed to

ANTHONY-ADRIAN FALCONER, 8th Lord Falconer, of Halkerton, (revert to Catherine, dau. of William, 4th earl, and her descendants,) who inherited with it the estate of Kintore, the old castle of Hall Forest, given to the family by ROBERT I., and Keith Hall. The noble family of Falconer deduce their descent from Ranulphus, (son of Walter de Lunkyr, appointed king's falconer by WILLIAM the Lion, whence he assumed the surname of Falconer. The descendant of Ranulphus, Alexander, son of Sir Alexander Falconer, was created Lord Falconer of Halkerton, 20 Dec. 1647; which dignity descended regularly to David, 5th Lord Falconer, son-in-law of John, 1st Lord Kintore. Anthony, 5th Earl of Kintore and 8th Lord Falconer, m. Miss Slighterman, of Groningen, by whom (who d. 26 March, 1809) he had issue, WILLIAM, his successor; Maria-Rembertina, Catherine-Margaret; Frances-Constantia; Christina-Elizabeth, d. in Dec. 1820. His lordship d. 30 Aug. 1804, and was s. by his son, LANSDOWNE.

Bucks, in the peerage of Great Britain; Earl of Kerry and Earl of Shelburne, Viscount Clanmaurice and Fitzmaurice, Baron of Kerry, Lixnaw, and Dunkerron, in the peerage of Ireland; b. 2 July, 1780; m. 30 March, 1808, Louisa-Emma, 5th dau. of Henry-Thomas, 2nd Earl of Ichester, by whom (who d. 3 April, 1851,) he has had issue,

He m. 2ndly, 1 Nov. 1843, Emily, eldest dau. of the Comte de Flahault and the Baroness Nairne and Keith, and has by her, HENRY-CHARLES-KEITH, Viscount Clanmaurice, b. 14 Jan. 1845; Edmond-George, b. 19 June, 1846.

Louisa, m. 10 Feb. 1845, the Hon. James-K. Howard.

His lordship s. to the English honours, and the Irish Earldom of Shelburne, with the Viscounty of Fitzmaurice and the Barony of Dunkerron, on the decease of his half-brother, 15 Nov. 1809; and to the Earldom of Kerry, &c., at the decease of his cousin, Francis-Thomas, 3rd Earl of Kerry, 4 July, 1818. The Marquess of Lansdowne is lord-lieutenant of the co. of Wilt.

Lineage.

The Earls of Kerry trace their origin to a common ancestor in the direct line with the houses of Fitzgerald, Windsor, Carew, M'Kenzie, &c., namely, Walter Fitz-Otho, Castellan of Windsor in the eleventh century; whose eldest son,

GERALD FITZ-WALTER, obtained a grant from HENRY I. of Moleford, co. Berks. This Gerald m. Nesta, dau. of Rees Gruffydd, Prince of South Wales, and had issue, MAURICE-FITZGERALD, ancestor of the house of Leinster. WILLIAM, of whom presently.

David, consecrated, in 1147, Bishop of St. David's; and d. in 1176.

The second-son,

WILLIAM, called by Geraldus Cambrensis the eldest son; but the pedigree of the family of Leinster setting forth the contrary, and his being possessed of the castle of Karru, co. Carmarthen, in South Wales, his mother's inheritance, and assuming that surname, bespeak him a younger son, which is confirmed by the unerring testimony of the addition of chief, ermine, to his coat-armour, (a certain sign of cadency, to distinguish him and his posterity from the elder branch of the family.) This William was sent, in

* The present Marquess of Lansdowne entitles his heir apparent EARL OF SHELBURNE, but certainly without authority. The Earldom of Shelburne is a distinct Irish peerage, enjoyed by his lordship, one of the privileges of which he himself exercises at every election of an Irish representative peer; it does not therefore merge in the Marquisate of Lansdowne. The courtesy title of the Marquess of Lansdowne's eldest son is, correctly, EARL OF WYCOMBE—of the Earl of Shelburne, Viscount Fitzmaurice.

1171, by Earl Strongbow, into Ireland, with his son, Raymond, where, for a time, he assisted in the reduction of that kingdom; but returning to his native country, died in the year 1173, leaving issue by Catharine, dau. of Sir Adam de Kingsley, of Cheshire, seven sons and a dau. The eldest son, REYMOND, surnamed from his corpulency, Le Grosse, having, as stated above, accompanied his father into Ireland was a principal in the reduction of that kingdom. He m. Basella, sister of Earl Strongbow, and had, as a marriage portion with her, a large territorial grant and the constabulary of Leinster. After this we find him aiding MacCarthy, King of Cork, against his rebellious son, Cormac O'Lehanagh, and acquiring for his services a large tract of land in the co. of Kerry, where he settled his eldest son.

MAURICE FITZ-REYMOND, who m. for his 1st wife, Johanna, dau. of Miles Fitz-Henry, founder of Connell Abbey, co. Kildare, and chief governor of Ireland, by whom he had a son,

THOMAS, who assumed the surname of Fitzmaurice, and became Lord of Kerry of Lixnaw. This Thomas founded the Grey Franciscan Friary of Ardferit, in 1253. He m. Grace, dau. of MacMurrough Cavenagh, son of DERMOID, King of Leinster; and dying in 1280, was s. by his eldest son,

MAURICE, 2nd Lord of Kerry; who sat in the parliament held at Dublin in 1395, and attended a writ of summons of EDWARD I., in 1397, with horse and arms, in an expedition against Scotland. He m. Mary, dau. and heir of Sir John M'Cloud, of Galway; and dying in 1393, was succeeded by his son,

NICHOLAS, 3rd Lord of Kerry; whose son,

MAURICE, 4th Lord of Kerry, having a dispute with Dermoid Oge MacCarthy, killed that chief on the bench before the judge of assize, at Tralee, in 1325, for which he was tried and attainted by the parliament of Dublin, but was not put to death. His lands were, however, forfeited, but restored, after his decease, to his brother and successor,

JOHN, 5th lord of Kerry, from whose time we are obliged by our limits, to pass over nearly four centuries, and to come to

THOMAS, 21st Lord of Kerry, who was created, 17 Jan. 1723, Viscount Clanmaurice and EARL OF KERRY. His lordship m. in 1692, Anne, only dau. of Sir William Petty, physician-general to the army in Ireland, in 1652, so celebrated for his extraordinary talents and surprising fortune. In Dec. 1664, Sir William undertook the survey of Ireland; and in March, 1666, he had completed the measurement of two millions and eight thousand acres of forfeited lands; for which, by contract, he was to receive one penny per acre, and did actually acquire an estate of £6000 a-year. This eminent and distinguished person died of a gangrene, in his foot, 16 Dec. 1687. The Earl of Kerry had issue,

1. WILLIAM, who s. at his decease, 16 March, 1741, as 2nd EARL OF KERRY. His lordship, who was a col. in the Coldstream foot-guards, left at his decease, in 1747, by his 2nd wife, Gertrude, only dau. of Richard, 4th Earl of Cavan, Anna-Maria, m. to Maurice Fitzgerald, Knt. of Kerry.

And an only son, his successor,

FRANCIS-THOMAS, 3rd Earl of Kerry; who m. Anastasia, dau. and co-heir of Peter Daly, Esq. of Quansbury, co. Galway; but dying s. p. 4 July, 1818, his lordship's honours devolved upon his cousin, Henry, present Marquess of Lansdowne.

II. JOHN, of whom presently.

III. Elizabeth-Anne, m. to Sir Maurice Crosbie, of Ardferit, created Baron Brandon.

IV. Arabella, m. to Arthur Denny, Esq. of Tralee.

V. Charlotte, m. to John Conway, son and heir of John Colthurst, Esq. of Ardrum.

Thomas, 1st Earl of Kerry's second son,

THE HON. JOHN FITZMAURICE, having inherited the Petty estates on the demise of his maternal uncle, Henry Petty, Earl of Shelburne, in April, 1761, (when that earldom expired,) assumed the surname and arms of Petty, and was advanced to the peerage of Ireland, 7 Oct. 1761, as Baron Dunkerron and Viscount Fitzmaurice. His lordship was further promoted, 26 June, 1753, to the Earldom of Shelburne. He m. in 1734, his first cousin, Mary, dau. of the Hon. William Fitzmaurice, of Gallane, co. Kerry, by whom he had issue, WILLIAM, his successor; and Thomas, who m. Mary, Countess of Orkney, a peeress in her own right. The earl of Shelburne was created a peer of Great Britain, 17 May, 1760, as Baron Wycombe of Chipping Wycombe; and dying 10 May, 1761, was s. by his eldest son,

WILLIAM, 2nd Earl of Shelburne, a general-officer in the army, and a distinguished statesman in the reign of GEORGE III. In 1782, his lordship, after the decease of the Marquess of Rockingham, (under whom he filled the office of secretary for foreign affairs,) was appointed prime minister; and 30 Nov. 1784, advanced to the dignities of Earl of Wycombe, co. Bucks, Viscount Caine and Calstone, and MARQUESS OF LANSDOWNE, co. Somerset. The marquess m. 1st, in 1765, Sophia, dau. of John, Earl Granville, by whom he left one son, JOHN, his successor; and 2ndly, in 1773, Louisa, dau. of John (Fitzpatrick), Earl of Upper Ossory, by whom he had another son, HENRY, present marquess, and a dau., Louisa, who d. young. His lordship d. in May, 1805, and was s. by his elder son,

JOHN, 2nd marquess; who m. 27 May, 1806, Lady Gifford, relict of Sir Duke Gifford, of Castle Jordan, in Ireland, but d. without issue, in 1869, when the honours devolved upon his half-brother, LORD HENRY PETTY, who had already distinguished himself as an eloquent public speaker, and had attained considerable popularity by his enlightened views as a statesman. His lordship succeeded also to the honours of the house of Kerry on the demise of his cousin. (Revert to descendants of William, eldest son and successor of Thomas, 1st Earl of Kerry.)

Lineage.

This family, according to the aforesaid royal diploma, in which are cited certain documents, dated in the year 1210, had been at that period long established in Belgium, and is supposed, by Jean le Carpenter, in his History, to have been a branch of the family of "Bolstrencourt," in the Cambrais, where, in the year 1100, it had been "much distinguished, and had attained to the highest and most conspicuous stations of dignity, civil as well as ecclesiastical."

NICHOLAS DE HOCHPIED, in the year 1575, was appointed minister and ambassador from the states-general of Holland, to several electors and potentates in Germany.

DANIEL-JOHN DE HOCHPIED, being minister from the states-general of Holland at the Ottoman Porte in 1698, distinguished himself in the negotiations which terminated in the peace of Carlowitz, in Jan. 1699; and having likewise by his virtues and influence obtained the liberation of many Christian slaves from Turkish servitude, the Emperor LEOPOLD conferred upon him and his descendants, male and female, the title of Baron and Magnat. He m. Clarissa-Catherine, Countess Collyer, and was father of ELBERT DE HOCHPIED, ambassador from the states-general of Holland at the Ottoman Porte, b. 6 Jan. 1706, who d. at Pera, 11 Feb. 1763, leaving, by Anna-Margaretta Boelema, his wife, a dau., CLARA-CATHERINE, who m. Sir John, who served for twelve years in the E. I. Company's Bengal army, s. his father as 8th baronet, 29 May, 1848, and is a deputy-lieutenant of Mid-Lothian.

Lineage.

The surname of Lauder, anciently De Lavedre, is of Norman origin, and the Scottish historians mention the first De Lavedre as one of those Anglo-Norman barons who accompanied MALCOLM CANMORE into Scotland in 1066, to assist that prince in recovering his kingdom from the usurper Macbeth; for this important service De Lavedre obtained from the king grants of lands, particularly in Berwickshire, to which he gave his own name, as other knights, similarly recompensed, did, in obedience, according to Boethius, of a direct royal command to that effect. De Lavedre was also invested with the hereditary bailiwick of Lauderdale. The next of the family of whom there is any particular notice is,

ROBERTUS DE LAVEDRE, who seems to have been the 5th baron in descent from the above, and who was a soldier of the Cross in the 5th crusade in 1188. After him came

ROBERT DE LAVEDRE, who witnesses a charter of John de Maulant to the Abbey of Dryburgh.

WILLIAM DE LOWEDRE, of Lowther, who was sheriff of Perth in 1251, and who witnesses a charter of ALEXANDER III.

SIR ROBERT DE LAVEDRE, of the Bass, who fought at Stirling Bridge in 1297, d. in 1311. His monument existed in the time of Nisbet, who gives its inscription at length.

SIR ROBERT DE LAWEDRE, the brave associate of Sir William Wallace, had a charter from William de Lambertton, Bishop of St. Andrew's, of that fragment of the island of Bass over which the Abbey of St. Andrew's had until then retained a right, the Lauders having already possessed the larger part of it for some generations. This charter is dated 4 June, 1316, as is also the charter of confirmation by John de Forfar, Prior of St. Andrew's, now in the family charter chest. Bishop Lamberton's charter was carried off from the Grange House with a number of other documents and articles, by a housebreaker in the night, between the 18th and 19th Sept. 1836, and has never been recovered. This Sir Robert was ambassador to England from ROBERT I. upon various occasions. In 1323, he was one of the proxies in the oath of peace with EDWARD II., on which occasion he swore "on the soul of the Bruce" for its due maintenance by the Scottish king. He was justiciary of the Lothians and that part of Scotland to the south of the Forth, in 1328; and in 1333 he was present at the battle of Hallidon, though he was then too old to dismount, and take a part in the fight which took place on foot. His son,

* Baron de Hochepled obtained for himself and his nephews, John-James de Hochepled Larpent, and George-Gerard de Hochepled Larpent, a royal licence from the Prince Regent, in 1819, to bear the title in England.

SIR ROBERT DE LAVEDRE, fought at Hallidon in 1333, in the 3rd division of the army under Archibald Douglass, Lord of Galloway, nicknamed Tyneman, who was regent of Scotland. Immediately after the defeat, Sir Robert, who was justiciary of all the country to the north of the Forth, hastened to occupy the castle of Urquhart on Loch Ness, and by his brave defence of that place for DAVID II., it stands recorded as one of the only four strongholds which defied the power of EDWARD III. He was frequently designated as of Quarrelwood, in Moray, and by that title he gives a charter of lands in and near "his Borough of Lauder" to Thomas de Borthwick, which is witnessed by JOHN MAUTELANT, the 6th of the Lauderdale family, and his brother WILLIAM, and also by Sir Robert's son and grandson. His son,

SIR ALAN DE LAVEDRE, witnesses the above charter, and has several charters for different lands about 1370, one of which is for half of the lands of Lauder. He has also a charter of the lands of Halton, in the barony of Ratho, from John de Halton. He m. Alicia, dau. of Sir Colin Campbell, of Loch Awe, the 9th of the Argyll family, by whom, besides Robert, his successor, he had,

William, Bishop of Glasgow, and chancellor of Scotland in 1429, who built the steeple of Glasgow Cathedral.
Alexander, Bishop of Dunkeld in 1440.

Sir Alan was killed with the Douglas in Spain, and was s. by his eldest son,

SIR ROBERT LAVEDRE, of Bass, surnamed "Robert with the Boretz whynger," who was one of the ambassadors to the court of HENRY V. of England in 1424; as was also his brother the chancellor, to treat about the liberation of King JAMES I. of Scotland, when he was designed "our Lovelt of the Bass." He was one of the conservators of the truce between JAMES II. and HENRY VI. in 1453. He m. Agnes Fallow, of Fallow, and by her had a son,

SIR ROBERT LAVEDRE, called of Edrington, and designed "son of our Lovelt of the Bass." He was one of those appointed to convey the queen's portion of 2000 marks to EDWARD IV. in 1477. He purchased Biel in 1489, is designed of Bass in 1506, and had a safe conduct to England in 1511, from HENRY VIII. He m. Isabel, 2nd dau. of John Hay, 1st Lord Yester, by whom he had,

SIR ROBERT LAVERDRE, of Bass, so designed in a curious indenture between him and the preaching friars of Dundee, of date 1531, which document was also robbed from the charter chest, by the housebreaker in 1836, and never recovered. Down to this Sir Robert, the titles of Lauder and of Bass were indiscriminately used by the family, and it is his armorial bearings that are given as those of Lauder of Bass in the works of Lindsay of the Mount. He m. Allison or Mariotta Cranstoun, and d. in 1561. Besides his eldest son, Richard Lauder, of Lauder, who was his successor, he left a son, Robert, to whom he gave the Bass and other East Lothian lands, thus creating a separate family with that title.

RICHARD LAUDER, of Lauder, was a senator of the College of Justice by the title of Lord Lauder, and as his successor was appointed in 1575, he must have died before that year. He m. Mary, dau. of MacDowall of Mackairston, by whom he had his eldest son, Robert Lauder, of Lauder, who flourished in 1575, whose line terminating by the death of his son and grandson, the direct line was carried on by Richard's 2nd son,

WILLIAM LAUDER, (erroneously called Robert, by Nisbet,) who flourished about 1575 and 1600, and who m. Jean, dau. of Bellenden of Lawwade. By her he had three

LAUDERDALE.

LAUDERDALE, EARL OF, (James Maitland,) Viscount of Lauderdale and Maitland, and Baron of Thirlestane, Boltoun, and Lauderdale, of Thirlestane, in the peerage of Scotland; Baron Lauderdale, of Thirlestane, co. Berwick, in the peerage of the United Kingdom; and a Baronet of Nova Scotia b. 12 May, 1784; s. as 9th earl upon the decease of his father, 15 Sept. 1839. Lord Lauderdale is heritable standard-bearer for Scotland, and lieutenant and sheriff-principal of Berwickshire.

Lineage.

This very ancient and distinguished family of North Britain has been seated at Thirlestane, in Berwickshire, for nearly six centuries. Its earliest ancestor was Sir Richard de Maitland, (as the name was formerly written,) who gave divers lands to the abbey of Dryburgh, in the reign of ALEXANDER III.

SIR RICHARD MAITLAND, 13th feudal lord of Thirlestane, was a person of considerable importance in the era in which he lived. In 1553 and 1560, we find him one of the commissioners appointed to adjust the differences with England about the debatable lands on the borders. In 1554, he was constituted one of the extraordinary lords of Session; in 1561, appointed one of the ordinary lords, and in the following year, keeper of the privy seal, which latter office he resigned in 1567 in favour of his 2nd son. His lordship retired from the bench in 1594; on which occasion JAMES VI. acknowledged by letter Sir Richard's faithful services "to his grandsire, goodaure, gooddame, mother, and himself;" by which it would seem that this eminent person was employed seventy years at least in the public service. In the literary world he was known by his history of the family of Seton, and poems on several subjects. He m. Mary, dau. of Sir Thomas Cranston, and had,

WILLIAM, of Leighton, secretary of state for Scotland, and one of the principal actors in the turbulent times of the unhappy MARY. Secretary Maitland was deputed, in 1666, to announce to ELIZABETH the marriage of MARY with Darnley; and he was the person said subsequently to have projected the alliance of his unfortunate mistress with the Duke of Norfolk. In 1571, he was deprived of the secretaryship, proclaimed a traitor, and attainted in the parliament held in the Canongate; and being in the castle of Edinburgh when it surrendered, in 1573, he terminated his life, according to the old Roman fashion, says Mevil, by a voluntary death, 9 June, 1573, to avoid the ignominy of public execution, the fate of his friend, Kirkcaldy, the governor. Secretary Maitland left an only son,

JAMES, who, being a catholic, withdrew to the Continent, and sold his estate of Leighton to his uncle,

SIR JOHN MAITLAND, Knt., (2nd son of Sir Richard,) who, having filled the high offices of lord-privy-seal, judge of the Court of Session, secretary of state, and lord-chancellor of Scotland, was elevated to the peerage 18 May, 1590, by the title of Lord Maitland of Thirlestane. His lordship m. Jane, only dau. and heir of James, 4th Lord Fleming, and granddau., maternally, of James Hamilton, Duke of Chatelherault; and dying in 1595, was s. by his only son,

His lordship was president of the council, and one of the ordinary lords of session. He m. Isabel, dau. of Alexander, Earl of Dunfermline, by Surrey. His grace m. 1st, Anne, 2nd dau. of Alexander, 1st Earl of Home, co-helr, with her sister, Margaret, Countess of Moray, of her brother, James, 2nd Earl of Home, by whom he had an only child, ANNE, m. in 1666, to John, 2nd Marquess of Tweeddale. Lineage.

The family of Osborne is one of considerable antiquity in Kent, and was early seated at Ashford, in that county. So far back as the 12th of HENRY VI., John Osborne, of Canterbury, occurs on the list of Kentish gentry. Inheritor, however, as is the paternal ancestry of the noble family of Osborne, the illustrious houses of Conyers, D'Arcy, and Godolphin, which the present Duke of Leeds represents, and his descent through various lines from the royal house of Plantagenet, (see BURKE'S Royal Families), add a lustre to his grace's coronet, of which few other families can boast.

SIR TITUS DE LEIGHTON, Knt. of the Sepulchre, who, on his return from the Holy Land, was a joint founder of the abbey of Buldewas, in Salop. His son,

SIR RICHARD DE LEIGHTON, Knt., had a reconveyance from William Fitz Allan, soon after the Conquest, of the manor of Leighton; and from him descended

JOHN LEIGHTON, Esq. of Stratton, who was thrice high sheriff of Shropshire in the reign of EDWARD IV., and obtained the manors of Watesborough and Alderbury, (still in the possession of the family,) by marriage with Ancreda, and co-heir (by Jane, dau. and heir of Sir William Clopton, Knt. of Clopton,) of Sir John de Burgh, Lord of Mawddwy, in Merioneth, son of Sir Hugh de Burgh, (derived from the celebrated Justiciary, Hubert de Burgh, Earl of Kent, temp. King JOHN,) by Elizabeth, sister and heir of Foulk, Lord of Mawddwy, grandson of William, living 17th EDWARD I., 4th son of Griffith ap Gwennwynwyn, Prince of Powys-Wenwynwyn, (see HUGHES of GWRCLAS, BURKE's Landed Gentry.) Lineage.

MAURICE FITZGERALD, through whose exertions the possession of Ireland was chiefly accomplished by HEN. II., was son of Gerald Fitzwalter Fitz-Otho, (by Nesta, dau. of Rhys ap Tudor Mawr, Prince of South Wales,) son of Walter Fitz-Otho, Castellan of Windsor in the reign of WILLIAM the Conqueror; which Walter was son of Otho, a Baron of England in the 16th year of EDWARD the Confessor. The said Maurice obtained for his services a grant of extensive territories in the province of Leinster, and was constituted, in 1172, one of the governors of Ireland; in which year he slew O'Rourke, Prince of Meath, then in rebellion against the English government. This feudal chief d. full of honour, 1 Sept. 1177, leaving two sons, GERALD, ancestor of the EARLS OF KILDARE.

THOMAS, a distinguished leader in the invasion of Ireland, ancestor of MAURICE FITZ-JOHN FITZGERALD, from whom derived the EARLS OF DESMOND, who ranked amongst the most powerful nobles of Ireland for more than two centuries, until Gerald, 16th earl, entering into rebellion, waged war for nearly ten years against the whole power of the English government, and eventually lost his life in attempting to seize upon a prey of cattle, when his head was transmitted by the Earl of Ormonde to Queen ELIZABETH, who caused it to be fixed upon London Bridge. An attainder of course followed, (25 Sept. 1582,) by which his prodigious estates, comprising 574,628 acres, became forfeited. The son of this unfortunate nobleman,

JAMES, having been educated at the court of ELIZABETH, embraced the Protestant faith; and her majesty hoping, by his influence, to bring back the followers of his deceased father to their allegiance, recognised him as EARL OF DESMOND, and despatched him to Ireland; but so soon as it was known that he had attended divine service at the church of Killmallock, the crowds who collected to see and follow him immediately withdrew; he was obliged therefore to return to London, where he died in 1601. The last male heir of the house of Gerald, who assumed the title of Earl of Desmond, was an officer in the King of Spain's and the emperor's armies, who d. in Germany in 1632.

From Maurice Fitz-John Fitzgerald, founder of the Desmond line of the House of Gerald, derived, Osborn Fitzgerald, who emigrated from Ireland to Wales about the middle of the thirteenth century. Being in high favour with Llewelyn ap Iorwerth, Prince of North Wales, Osborn obtained from that monarch grants of Ynys-y-Maengwyn and Cors-y-Gedol, in Merionethshire, and other extensive possessions, and became progenitor of several of the most eminent families in the principality. From the Lord of Ynys-y-Maengwyn, who bore the Gerald arms—"Erm., a saliter, gu."—descended, 1. the VAUGHANS of CORN-Y-GEDOL, whose representative, Catherine, dau. (by Margaret, dau. and heir of Sir Ewan Lloyd, Bart., of Bodidris, co. Denbigh) of Richard Vaughan, Esq. of Cors-y-Gedol, was mother of Margaret Wynn, who m. Sir Roger Mostyn, Bart. of Mostyn, co. Flint, and the representation of the family eventually vested in their daughters, of whom, 1. Charlotte, m. Sir Thomas-Swynner Mostyn-Champneys, Bart.; 2. Elizabeth, m. Edward-Pryce Lloyd, Lord Mostyn; and 3. Anna-Maria, m. Sir Robert-Williams Vaughan, Bart., of Nannau; 11. ROGBERGS of BRYNTANGOR, co. Denbigh, (a derivative branch of the extinct House of Yale of Plas-y-Yale, co. Denbigh,) whose heiress, Magdalen Rogers, heiress of Bryntangor, dau. and heir of John Rogers, Esq.

of Bryntangor, m. in 1618, Humfrey Hughes, Esq. of Gwercias, in Kymmer, co. Merioneth, xi. Baron of Kymmer-yn-Edeirion, of the Royal lineage of Powys, and was mother of a son and heir, Thomas Hughes, Esq., (who d. v. p.) represented in the female line by the late RICHARD-HUGHES LLOYD, Esq. of PLYMOO, GWERCIAS, and BASHALL, and in the male line by the late WILLIAM HUGHES, Esq. of PEN-Y-CLAWDD; 111. WYNNES of GLYNN, whose heiress, Margaret, granddau. and heir of Robert Wynne, Esq. of Glynn, m. Sir Robert Owen, of Porkington, and is represented by Mrs. ORMSBY GORE, of PORKINGTON; 1V. WYNNES, by change of name, NANNEYS OF MAES-Y-NEUADD, represented by the son of the late Rev. John Nanney, of Maes-y-neuadd; v. the WYNNES of PENIARTH, whose representative is the present WILLIAM-WATKIN-EDWARD WYNNES, Esq. of PENIARTH.

Maurice Fitzgerald's elder son,

GERALD, was patriarch of the house of Kildare. He was with his father in the memorable sally out of Dublin, anno 1173, when that city was besieged by O'Connor, King of Connaught, with an army of 36,000 men, over whom the Fitzgeralds obtained a complete victory. Gerald was s. by his son, (by Latharme, dau. of Hamo de Valois, lord-justice of Ireland in 1197.)

MAURICE FITZGERALD, Lord of Offaley, living, 26 Nov. 1216, lord-justice of Ireland, who d. 20 May, 1257, in the habit of St. Francis, leaving the reputation of having been a "valiant knight, a very pleasant man, inferior to none in the kingdom, having lived all his life with commendation." He was s. by his son,

MAURICE FITZMAURICE, then in minority; and Prince EDWARD having obtained the dominion of Ireland from his father, King HENRY, claimed his wardship as a part of the prerogative; but the BARONY OF OFFALEY being held by the minor and his deceased father under Margaret, Countess of Lincoln, to whom belonged the co. Kildare, as widow of the Earl of Pembroke, that lady contested the right of wardship, and brought the case before the king himself for decision. This nobleman was afterwards chief-governor of Ireland, and was s. at his decease by his son, JOHN, Lord of Offaley, designated of Callan, who m. 1st, Margery, dau. of Sir Thomas Anthony, with whom he acquired the lands of Decies and Desmond, and had an only son, MAURICE. He m. 2ndly, Honora, dau. of Hugh O'Connor, (the first Irish woman chosen for a wife by any member of the family,) and had four sons.

Gilbert, from whom descended the White Knight.

JOHN, ancestor of the Knights of Glin, now represented by JOHN-FRANCIS FITZGERALD, KNIGHT OF GLIN. (See BURKE'S Landed Gentry.)

Maurice, 1st KNIGHT OF KERRY, or the Black Knight, now represented by the RIGHT HON. MAURICE FITZGERALD, Knight of Kerry. Thomas, from whom the Fitzgeralds of the Island, co. Kerry.

This John being killed with his eldest son, Maurice, at Callan, by Macarthy More, against whom the Fitzgeralds had raised a great army in 1261, was s. by his grandson,

THOMAS, nicknamed Nappagh Simiacus, or the APR, a surname thus acquired—being only nine months old when his father and grandfather fell at Callan, his attendants rushing out at the first astonishment excited by the intelligence, left the child alone in its cradle, when a baboon, kept in the family, took him up, and carried him to the top of the steeple of the Abbey of Tralee; whence, after conveying him round the battlements, and exhibiting him to the appalled spectators, he brought him down safely, and laid him in his cradle. From this tradition the supporters of the house of Leinster are said to have been adopted. This Thomas, who is called 6th feudal Lord Offaley, was constituted lord-justice of Ireland, and captain of all Desmond, in 1295; and being of so much power, was generally styled Prince and Ruler of Munster. He m. Margaret, dau. of John, Lord Barry of Oletam; and dying in 1296, left a son,

JOHN-FITZMAURICE, Lord of Offaley. This nobleman being at variance with William Vesey, Lord of Kildare, and lord-chief-justice of Ireland in 1291, and having various charges to prefer against him, came over to England, and confronted and challenged the said Vesey, Lord of Kildare, before the king. Lord Kildare first took up the glove, but subsequently withdrawing to France, his majesty EDWARD I. pronounced against his lordship, and conferred upon Lord Offaley, Vesey's manors and lord ship of Kildare, Rathangan, &c. Lord Offaley returned triumphantly to Ireland, and having continued to promote the English interest there, was created by EDWARD II., 14 May, 1316, Earl of Kildare. His lordship d. 10 Sept. in the same year. From this nobleman the family honours descended, without anything remarkable occurring, to

THOMAS, the 7th earl, who succeeded his father, John, the 6th earl, in 1457. This nobleman was appointed, in 1454 and 1465, lord-deputy of Ireland; and was continued in the government of Ireland until 1469, when Richard, Duke of York, was constituted lord-lieut.; but the following year Lord Kildare was appointed deputy to the Duke of York. In 1468, he was appointed lord-chancellor of Ireland, by act of parliament, with the fee of forty pounds per annum, and ten shillings per day. This tide of prosperity continued to flow until 1467, when, being involved with the Earl of Desmond, he was attainted with that nobleman, (who suffered death,) but subsequently pardoned, set at liberty, and restored in blood, by act of parliament. His lordship was afterwards lord-justice; and, in 1471, deputy to George, Duke of Clarence. He d. 25 March, 1477, and was s. by his eldest son, (by John, dau. of James, 7th Earl of Desmond.)

GERALD, 8th earl; who was constituted, on his accession to the peerage, lord-deputy to Richard, Duke of York, and held a parliament at Naas, on Friday after the feast of St. Petronelle the Virgin. In 1480, he was re-appointed lord-deputy; and again, upon the accession of HENRY VII., deputy to Jasper, Duke of Bedford, the lord-lieutenant. Upon the arrival, however, of Lambert Simnel, and his tutor, Richard Simon, an Oxford priest, in Ireland, the lord-deputy, the chancellor, (Thomas Fitzgerald, the deputy's brother), treasurer, and other nobles in the York interest, immediately acknowledged the impostor, and had him proclaimed in Dublin, by the style of EDWARD VI.; and the lord-deputy assisted with the others at his coronation in Christ's Church, 2 May, 1487, where the ceremony was performed with great solemnity, the chancellor, the Archbishop of Dublin, the Earl of Lincoln, Lord Lovel, Jenico Marks, mayor of Dublin, and several other persons of rank attending. The crown was borrowed from the image of the Virgin Mary; John Pain, Bishop of Meath, preached the coronation sermon; and the Pretender was subsequently conveyed upon the shoulders of Darcy, of Platen, a person of extraordinary height, to the castle of Dublin, amidst the shouts of the populace. In the engagement which afterwards decided the fate of Simnel, near Stoke, the chancellor, Fitzgerald, fell; but the lord-deputy had the good fortune to make his peace with the king. His lordship was appointed lord-lieutenant of Ireland in 1496; and d. in 1513, when he was s. by his son,

GERALD, 9th earl; who, with his five uncles, having revolted, was imprisoned in the Tower, where he died, 13 Dec. 1534, and an act was passed in the parliament of Ireland attainting him of high treason, and forfeiting the family honours and estates. His eldest son,

THOMAS, 10th earl, shared in the misfortunes of his father, and leaving no issue was s. by his brother,

GERALD, 11th earl; of whom a most remarkable account is given by a contemporary historian, Stanyhurst. It appears that at the age of ten, he was preserved from the power of HENRY VIII., by the precaution of his female relatives, and his tutor, Thomas Leureuse, his father's foster-brother. He wandered from court to court upon the Continent, until Cardinal POLS, who was related to his mother, sent for him into Italy and completed his education. He m. Mabel, dau. of Sir Anthony Brown, and through that connexion obtained the favour of EDWARD VI., who conferred upon him, in 1553, the lordship of Mayo-nagh and other of his father's estates. In the ensuing reign he was fully restored, by letters patent, to the EARLDOM OF KILDARE and Barony of Offaley, with the precedence of his ancestors. It is a remarkable circumstance that, though attainted by act of parliament, this Gerald under such grants from the crown, but without any new statute, was summoned to, and actually sat as a peer in, the parliament of 1560, and it was not until the 11th of Queen ELIZABETH that the attainder was removed by parliament. His lordship's eldest son, GERALD, Lord Offaley, dying in the lifetime of the earl, left an only dau., Lettice, who m. Sir Robert Digby, and for a long time claimed the BARONY OF OFFALRY, as heir of her father; the claim, after being referred by JAMES I. to the judges of England, was decided by his majesty himself, who confirmed the Barony of Offaley to the Earls of Kildare and their heirs male, and created Lady Digby, BARONESS OF OFFALRY for life; whereupon that ancient title devolved on the deceased lord's 2nd son and successor,

HENRY, 12th Earl of Kildare. This nobleman m. Lady Frances Howard, dau. of Charles, Earl of Nottingham, and had surviving issue,

i. Bridget, who m. 1st, Rory O'Donnell, created Earl of Tyrconnell and Baron Donegal, and by him, who was attainted, had issue,

1 Hugh O'Donnell.

2 Elizabeth O'Donnell, m. to Luke Plunkett, 1st Earl of Fingal.

The Countess of Tyrconnell m. 2ndly, Nicholas Barnwell, 1st Viscount Kingsland.

ii. Lettice, d. ssm.

His lordship dying thus without male issue, was s. by his brother,

WILLIAM, 13th earl; who d. ssm., when the honours devolved upon (the son of Edward Fitzgerald, brother of the 11th earl, by his wife, Mabel, dau. and heir of Sir John Leigh, and widow of Sir John Paston, of Norfolk) his kinsman,

GERALD, 14th earl, whose grandson,

GEORGE, 16th earl, was the first of the family brought up in the reformed religion, being so educated by his guardian, the Duke of Lennox. His lordship m. Lady Jane Boyle, dau. of the first Earl of Cork, and had, with other issue,

WENTWORTH, his successor.

Robert. This gentleman, having taken an active part in effecting the restoration, was appointed by CHARLES II. comptroller of the musters and cheques of the army, in 1661, with the fee of 20*l.* a-day, and was sworn, at the same time, of the privy council. He was subsequently appointed governor and custos-rotulorum of the co. of Kildare, in which shire he resided, at Grangemellan. Upon the accession of King JAMES, however, he was stripped of all his employments and estate, to the value of 23900 l. per annum, and imprisoned in Newgate for twenty-one weeks; but afterwards, in consequence of the state of his health, removed to his own house, where he remained guarded for five months. On the landing of WILLIAM in Ireland, Capt. Fitzgerald was placed in close durance within the college of Dublin, and so restrained until the defeat of JAMES at the Boyne, when he broke from his prison, and by his courage and prudence preserved Dublin from being sacked. When WILLIAM entered the metropolis, Capt. Fitzgerald had the honour of presenting to his majesty the keys of the city. He was afterwards sworn of the privy council. He m. Mary, dau. and heir of James Clotworthy, Esq. of Monimaree, co. Londonderry, and had, with several daus.,

JOHN, 18th earl, b. in 1616; and d. s. p. 9 Nov. 1707. When the honours reverted to his cousin, (refer to Captain Robert Fitzgerald, second son of the 16th earl.)

ROBERT, 19th earl; an eminent statesman in the reigns of Queen ANNE, and of GEORGE I. and GEORGE II. His lordship m. 7 March, 1708-9, Mary, eldest dau. of William (O'Brien), 3rd Earl of Inchiquin, by whom he had four sons and eight daus., (two of whom only survived him;) and dying 20 Feb. 1743-4, was s. by his only son then living,

JAMES, 20th earl; who was created a peer of Great Britain, by the title of Viscount Leitner, of Taplow, 21 Feb. 1746; on the 3 March, 1761, his lordship was advanced to the Marquissate of Kildare in Ireland; and created 26 Nov. 1766, DUKE OF LEINSTER. The earl is one of the representative peers.

Lineage.

This noble house is chief of the very ancient Scottish family of MELVILLE, which derived, it is stated, from a person of Anglo-Norman lineage, called MALE, who settled, under DAVID I., upon some lands in the co. Edinburgh, which he called MALE-VILLE, and thence his descendants assumed that designation as a surname.

GALFRID DE MALVILLE, the first of the family, lived in the reigns of DAVID I., MALCOLM IV., and WILLIAM the Lion. He was Vicecomes de Castella Puellarum for MALCOLM IV., and had the honour of being the first justiciary of Scotland on record. He left three sons, viz.,

Gregory, whose line terminated in an heir female,
 AGNES-MELVILLE, who m. Sir John Ross, of Halkhead, temp. ROBERT II., and conveyed to him the lands of MELVILLE.

PHILIP, ancestor of the MELVILLES of Glenbervie. This branch ended in the male line in 1468, when ALEXANDER MELVILLE, OF GLENBERVIE, left a dau. and sole heir, ELIZABETH, m. to Sir John Auchinleck, of Auchinleck, and her granddau., ELIZABETH AUCHINLECK, carried the barony to her husband, SIR WILLIAM DOUGLAS, 2nd son of Archibald, 5th Earl of Angus.
 WALTER.

The third son,

WALTER DE MELVILLE, was grandfather of

SIR JOHN DE MELVILLE, one of the principal men of Scotland who agreed to the marriage of Queen MARGARET with Prince Edward of England, in 1290; and who swore fealty to EDWARD I. in 1296. From him we pass to his lineal descendant,

SIR JOHN MELVILLE, of Raith, who had charters jointly with his wife, Helen Napier, of the king's lands of Murdocarny, in Fife, dated 23 May, 1536, and 23 Oct. 1542. He enjoyed the confidence of JAMES V., who appointed him master-general of the ordnance, and captain-general of the castle of Dunbar, having previously knighted him. Sir John, in the minority of Queen MARY, was, however, convicted of treason, and executed towards the end of 1549. He m. Helen, eldest dau. of Sir Alexander Napier, of Marchistoun, and had issue,

JOHN, who was restored to his father's forfeited estates by the Queen Regent of Scotland, about 1553, and then became of Raith. He was s. by his son,

JOHN, of Raith, who m. Margaret, dau. of Sir William Scot, of Balwearie, and was s. by his elder son,

JOHN, of Raith, who s. his cousin, as third Lord MELVILLE.

ROBERT, of whom presently.

James (Sir), of Hall-hill, in Fife, ambassador from MARY to ELIZABETH, and of the privy-council to JAMES VI.; d. in 1617, leaving issue.

William, who was appointed a lord of Session in 1667, and sat on the bench till 1614.

Andrew (Sir), of Garvock, master of the household to Queen MARY and to JAMES VI.
 David, of Newmill.

Janet, m. to Sir James Kilkaldy, of Grange, High-Treasurer of Scotland; by whom she was mother of Sir William and Sir James Kilkaldy, who were executed, in 1673, for their fidelity to Queen MARY.
 Margaret, m. to Sir James Johnstone, of Elphinstone.

The 2nd son,

SIR ROBERT MELVILLE, of Murdocarny, on his return from France, where he held some official employments, was sworn of the privy council of Scotland, and accredited ambassador to England in 1562. In 1567, he had a charter of the hereditary office of keeper of the palace of Linlithgow, and was sent a second time ambassador to England, in 1587, to endeavour to prevent the execution of MARY Queen of Scots, which duty he discharged with so much boldness before the council that ELIZABETH menaced his life, and would have imprisoned him, but for the influence of his colleague, the master of Gray. In 1589, when Lord Thirlestane, the chancellor, went to Denmark on the affair of the king's marriage, Sir Robert was appointed vice-chancellor and treasurer deputy; and in 1594, he was constituted an extraordinary lord of Session, under the title of Lord Murdocarny; from this judicial office he retired in favour of his son, in 1601, and was elevated to the peerage, 30 April, 1616, as Baron Melville of Monymail, with special remainder, in default of his own male issue, to the heirs male of his brother, JOHN, &c. His lordship d. in 1621, at the age of 94, and was s. by his only son,

This nobleman obtained a charter from CHARLES I., dated Bagshot, 10 Aug. 1627, of the Barony of Monymail, and the dignity of Lord Monymail, with reversion to his heirs general bearing the surname and arms of MELVILLE. His lordship d. s. p. 9 March, 1686, when he was s. by his cousin, GEORGE, 4th Lord Melville. This nobleman was involved in the rebellion of the Duke of Monmouth, but had the good fortune to effect his escape into Holland. His estates were consequently forfeited by act of attainder in 1685; but returning to England with King WILLIAM, his lordship was fully reinstated in fortune and dignity on the success of that prince, with the additional honours (8 April, 1690) of Lord Raith, Monymail, and Balwearie, Viscount of Kirkaldie, and Earl of MELVILLE. LOCKHART.

LOCKHART, SIR NORMAN-MACDONALD, of Lee and Carnwath, co. Lanark; b. in 1845; s. his father, as 4th bart., 1849.

Lineage

This family has an undoubted right to rank as one of the oldest in Scotland, the surname of Lockhart being of great antiquity and distinction. There is to be found evidence of this in the reigns of DAVID I. and MALCOLM IV.; the latter of whom succeeded to the crown in the year 1153; during whose time appears,

STEPHANUS LOCKARD, a "man of rank and distinction," who was s. by

SIMON LOCKARD, who had afterwards the honour of knighthood conferred upon him by KING WILLIAM, (who ascended the throne in 1165,) which appears by a grant he made to the Abbacy of Kelso, "ecclesie que dicitur Welde church, cum totâ parochia suâ sciz. tam de Tandurdston, quam de villa domini Simonis Locard." But for a particular account of the descent of the family, reference should be made to DOUGLASS' Baronage of Scotland, p. 323. Following the descent, we come to

SIR SIMON LOCARD, of Lee, who accompanied Lord James Douglas to the Holy Land, with the heart of the deceased monarch for interment. From this circumstance, the Douglasses bear in their arms a crowned heart, and Sir Simon changed his name to Lockheart (as it was until lately spelt), and for part of his arms got a heart within a lock, and the motto, "Corda serrata pando." In the possession of this family is that singular piece of antiquity called the "Lee penny," upon which is founded Sir Walter Scott's romance of "The Tallisman." The account given of it is, that Simon Locard, during his stay in the Holy Land, took prisoner a Saracen chief, whose wife came to ransom him, and on the counting out of the money or jewels, this (which is a stone or composition of a dark red colour and triangular shape, set on a silver coin) fell; she hastily snatched it up, which Simon observing, insisted upon having it, and procured it before giving up his prisoner. More of this singular relic, and its alleged properties and virtues, may be found in Sir Walter Scott's preface to "The Tallisman."

Continuing to follow the descent, we come to

SIR JAMES LOCKHART, of Lee, who m. Mary, dau. of William, Master of Somerville, and was father of

ALLAN LOCKHART, of Lee, slain at Pinkie, fighting for Queen MARY, in 1547. By his wife, a dau. of the family of Carmichael, he left a son,

JAMES LOCKHART, father, by Janet Hamilton, of Dalsersf, his wife, of a son,

JAMES LOCKHART, of Lee, who received the honour of knighthood from JAMES VI. He was three times married, and on his second son, William, he conferred the lands of Carstairs, from whom the Rosses of Balnagowan are descended. (See that baronetcy.) He was s. by his eldest son,

SIR JAMES LOCKHART, ð. in 1596, a lord of the court of Session in Scotland, and afterwards lord-justice-clerk, as Lord Lee, in the time of CHARLES I., designed as "a man of singular parts and great integrity, who made a noble figure in his time." He m. twice: by his first wife, Helen, dau. of Alexander Fairly, of Braid, he had no issue; by his second, Martha, dau. of Sir George Douglas, of Mordington, (brother of James, Lord Torthorwald,) and maid of honour to CHARLES I.'s queen, he had, with two daus., four sons, namely,

I. WILLIAM (Sir).

II. GEORGE (Sir), of whom hereafter.

III. JOHN (Sir), of Castlehill, appointed by CHARLES II. one of the senators of the College of Justice, and a Lord of Justiciary. His only dau. and heiress, Martha, m. 1st, Cromwell Lockhart, of Lee, by whom she had no issue; and 2ndly, Sir John Sinclair, Bart. of Stevenson, by whom she had issue; the 2nd son being John Sinclair, who s. to Castlehill, and assumed the surname of Lockhart.

IV. Robert, killed in the civil wars.

I. Anne, m. to Sir George Lockhart, of Torbrecks.

II. A dau., m. to Sir William Lindsay, of Covington.

Sir James was s. at his decease by his eldest son,

SIR WILLIAM LOCKHART, ð. in 1621, an eminent statesman, and one of the greatest politicians of his age, well known as Ambassador Lockhart, having been many years accredited to the court of France. He afterwards succeeded his father as lord-justice-clerk. Bishop Burnet thus refers to Sir William:—"Cromwell's ambassador in France was Lockhart a Scotchman, who had married his niece, and was in high favour with him, as he well deserved to be. He was both a wise and a gallant man, calm and virtuous, and one that carried the generousities of friendship very far. He was made governor of Dunkirk, and ambassador, at the same time." He m. 1st, Margaret, dau. of Sir John Hamilton, Bart. of Orbieston, by whom he had one son, James, ð. unm. He m. 2ndly, Dame Robina Shouster, ð. by her mother, of Oliver Cromwell, and had,

CROMWELL, his heir.

JAMES.

Martha, maid of honour to King WILLIAM's queen, MARY. Robina, m. to Archibald, Earl of Forfar, whose only son was killed at Sheriffmuir, in 1715.

Sir William ð. in 1675, and was s. by his son,

CROMWELL LOCKHART, who m. 1st, a dau. of Sir David Harvey, ambassador to Constantinople; and 2ndly, Martha, sole dau. and heiress of Sir John Lockhart, of Castlehill. He ð. without issue, and his widow m. Sir John Sinclair, of Stevenson, by whom she had issue, and the estate of Castlehill descended to a younger branch of the Sinclair family, taking the name of Lockhart. Cromwell was s. by his brother,

RICHARD LOCKHART, who m. Jean, dau. of Sir Patrick Hamilton, of that ilk, and dying without issue, was s. by his brother,

JOHN LOCKHART, who m. a dau. of Sir Thomas Scott, of Scotts Hall, county of Kent, and had issue a dau., Robina. But the estates, being a male fee, devolved at his decease, in 1707, on his brother,

JAMES LOCKHART, M.P. for Lanarkshire, who m. Dorothy, dau. and co-heir of Sir William Luchan, of William Abbey, and had,

JOHN LOCKHART, who m. 1st, Jean, sole dau. and heir of Robert Alexander, of Blackhouse, in Argylshire; and 2ndly, Mary, eldest dau. of John Porterfield, of Fullwood, but ð. without issue.

The direct male line having thus become extinct, the succession to Lee devolved on the descendants of

SIR GEORGE LOCKHART, second son of Sir James, Lord Lee (see supra), the founder of the Carnwath branch of the family. Sir George was an eminent lawyer, lord advocate of Scotland under CROMWELL, and afterwards lord-president of the court of Session. "Sir George Lockhart," says Bishop Burnet, "brother to the ambassador, was the most learned lawyer, and the best pleader I have ever yet known in any nation, and he had all the lawyers almost in a dependence on him." He purchased the extensive estates of the Earls of Carnwath, in Lanarkshire. He m. Philadelphia, 4th dau. of Philip, 4th Lord Wharton, (see BURKE'S Extinct Peerages), and had,

I. GEORGE.

II. Philip, shot as a rebel at Preston in 1715.

Sir George Lockhart was shot in the High Street of Edinburgh, on 31 March, 1669, being Easter Sunday, on his way from church, by Chiesly of Dalry, who assigned for reason that the lord-president had adjudicated a cause against him. Sir George was s. by his son,

GEORGE LOCKHART, who unfortunately took part in the rising of 1715, and was author of the memoirs bearing the name of the "Lockhart Papers." He m. Lady Euphemia Montgomerie, 2nd dau. of Alexander, 6th Earl of Eglinton, and had,

Two families of Kerr, of Anglo-Norman lineage, descended, it is said, from two brothers, settled in Scotland in the 13th century, and neither yielding superiority to the other, formed two separate races of warlike borderers. Of the family of Kerr of Cessford, the Duke of Roxburgh is the chief; and of the Kerrs of Fernherst, the noble house of which we are now about to treat, is the representative.

MARK KERR, 2nd son of Sir Andrew Kerr, of Cessford, entering into holy orders, was promoted, in 1546, to the dignity of Abbot of Newbottle, in which station the Reformation found him in 1560, when he adopted the new doctrines, and held his benefice in commendam. He had the vicarage of Lintoun, co. Peebles, for life, in 1564; and was appointed one of the extraordinary lords of Session in 1569. He m. MARK KERR, an extraordinary lord of Session, and master of requests, who had the abbacy of Newbottle erected into a temporal barony, with the title of Baron, 28 July, 1587; and obtained a charter of the Baronies of Preston-grange and Newbottle, united into the lordship of Newbottle, with the title of a lord of parliament, 15 Oct. 1591. He was appointed one of the commissioners for holding the parliament in 1597, and created Earl of Lothian, 10 Feb. 1606. His lordship m. Margaret, dau. of John, Lord Herries, and had, with daughters,

The earl was s. at his decease, in 1609, by his eldest son,

SIR WILLIAM KERR, Knt., who, in consequence, was elevated to the peerage, 24 June, 1631, by the title of Earl of Lothian. His lordship was only son (by his 1st wife, Elizabeth, dau. of Sir John Murray, of Blackbarony) of

ROBERT KERR, (descended from Thomas Kerr, of Kerraheugh, who built a house in the middle of Jedburgh Forest, and naming it Fernherst, was designated by that title in the records of parliament, 1476,) who was created EARL OF ANCRUM, Lord Kerr, of Nisbit, Long

Somerset, by whom he had a son, Charles, and several daus. In 1629, he had the misfortune to kill, in a duel, Charles Maxwell, whose brother was a member of the king's family, and was obliged, in consequence, to fly to Holland, but he was received into royal favour in the course of the next year. He d. in 1634, and was s. according to the limitation, by the son of his second marriage,

Lineage.

The clan FRASER, of which Lord Lovat is the chief, are of Norman descent. The name of FRISSELL, their original designation, occurs in the roll of Battel Abbey, and establishes their advent under the standard of the CONQUEROR. From East-Lothian, their earliest resting-place in Scotland, the Frasers diverged into Tweeddale in the 12th and 13th centuries, and subsequently into the shires of Inverness and Aberdeen. Oliver Fraser, the chief of the clan, built and gave his name to Oliver Castle, which continued in after times their principal feudal hold. (For a detailed narrative of this celebrated clan, refer to BURKE'S COMMONERS.) The ill-fated SIMON FRASER, 12th Lord Lovat,* who was beheaded on Tower Hill in 1747, for his participation in the rising of 1745, left a son and successor,

GENERAL SIMON FRASER, a gallant though unwilling adherent of CHARLES-EDWARD, and subsequently, having obtained a full and free pardon, a distinguished soldier in the British army, with which he served at Louisbourg and Quebec, and in the defence of Portugal in 1762. He d. s. p. in 1782, and was s. by his half-brother,

ARCHIBALD-CAMPBELL FRASER, of Lovat, who m. Jane, sister of Sir William Fraser, Bart. of Leadcune; but d. without surviving issue in 1815, when the male representation of the family, as well as the right to its extensive entailed estates, devolved upon (the descendant of the Hon. Thomas Fraser, 2nd son of the 6th lord,) the present

THOMAS-ALEXANDER FRASER, of Lovat and Strichen, (created Lord Lovat in 1837,) the twenty-fifth chief in succession from SIMON FRASER, of Invernesshire; the rights of both houses of Lovat and Strichen having centred in his person exactly 227 years from the time when the 2nd son of the 6th Lord Lovat acquired the estate of Strichen. On the 3 Nov. 1833, he was served nearest and lawful heir male of the body of Hugh, Lord Fraser of Lovat, grandfather of Thomas Fraser, of Knockie and Strichen; 2nd, nearest and lawful male heir of Hugh, Lord Fraser of Lovat, grandnephew of Thomas Fraser, of Beaufort, otherwise Thomas, Lord Fraser of Lovat; 3rd, nearest and lawful heir male of Thomas, Lord Fraser of Lovat; 4th, nearest and lawful heir male of Thomas Fraser of Beaufort, otherwise styled Thomas, Lord Fraser of Lovat, father of Simon, Lord Fraser of Lovat, and grandfather of the Hon. Lineage.

The family of Lytton has been of long standing in the co. of Worcester, and had considerable possessions in the vale of Evesham, particularly at South Lytton, whence the name has probably been assumed, in the beginning of the 13th century.

THOMAS DE LUTTELTON, about the nineteenth year of HENRY III., m. Emma, only dau. and heir of Sir Simon de Frankley, Knt., by whom he had an only dau., Emma, who m. Angerus de Tallynton. Thomas de Luttelton m. 2ndly, Anselm, dan. and heir of William Fitzwarren, of Upton, co. Worcester, one of the justices-itinerant and judge of the Common Pleas, 12th HENRY III., and sheriff of Worcestershire the following year, by whom he left three sons. He was s. at his decease by his eldest son,

EDMUND DE LUTTELTON, who resided at Coulesdon, and had lands at Naunton, in Worcestershire. His youngest and only surviving brother,

THOMAS DE LUTTELTON, represented the co. of Worcester in parliament from 9th EDWARD II. to the 34th EDWARD III., and was s. at his decease by his eldest son,

THOMAS DE LUTTELTON, who recovered the manor of Frankley, by a writ of right, on failure of issue to his cousin, Thomas de Tallynton. This Thomas de Luttelton was esquire of the body to three successive kings; namely, RICHARD II., HENRY IV., and HENRY V. He d. 1st HENRY VI., and left an only dau. and heiress,

ELIZABETH DE LUTTELTON, who m. Thomas Westcote, Esq., the king's servant in court, a gentleman of Devonshire, anciently descended; but she being fair, and of noble spirit, (to use the phraseology of Lord Coke), and having large possessions and inheritances from her ancestors, De Luttelton, and from her mother, the dau. and co-heir of Quartermain, and other ancestors, resolved to continue the honour of her name, and therefore provided, by Westcote's assent, before marriage, that her issue inheritable should be called by the name of Luttelton. Upon this marriage, Mr. Westcote settled at Frankley, and served the office of escheator of Worcester, 29th HENRY VI., 1459; soon after which he d., leaving four sons and as many daus., and was s. by his eldest son,

THOMAS LUTTELTON, (or Lytton), as he began to write it), who, having been brought up to the bar, was called, in 1454, to the degree of serjeant-at-law, and in the following year, was nominated king's serjeant, when he rode justice of the assize in the northern circuit. In 1464, (the 4th year of EDWARD IV.) Mr. Serjeant Lytton was appointed one of the judges of the Court of Common Pleas; and in the 15th year of the same monarch, was created a knight of the Bath. Sir Thomas wrote his celebrated "Treatise on Tenures" after he had ascended the bench

a book which Lord Coke has characterized "as the ornament of the common law, and the most perfect and absolute work that ever was wrote in any human science." Sir Thomas Lyttelton m. Joan, widow of Sir Philip Chetwind, of Ingestrie, co. Stafford, and dau. and co-heir of Sir William Burley, Knt. of Bromcroft Castle, in Shropshire, by whom he had (with two daus., who d. unm.) three sons, WILLIAM, his successor; Richard, ancestor of the LITTLETONS, of Pillaton Hall, co. Stafford, now represented by EDWARD-JOHN LITTLETON, Baron Hatherton; and Thomas, of Spechley, near Worcester, ancestor of Lord-Keeper Lyttelton, Baron of Mounslow, temp. CHARLES I., and of Sir Wm. Lyttelton, speaker of the House of Commons, temp. WILLIAM III. His lordship d. at Frankley, 23 Aug. 1481, and was s. by his eldest son,

SIR WILLIAM LYTTLTON, of Frankley, who m. 1st, Elyn, widow of Thomas Fielding, Esq., and dau. and heir of William Walsh, Esq. of Wanlip, in Leicestershire, by whom he had an only dau., Joan, who m. Sir John Aston, of Heywood, co. Stafford. Sir William m. 2ndly, Mary, dau. of William Whittington, Esq. of Panmley, co. Gloucester; and dying in 1507, was s. by his only son,

JOHN LYTTLTON, Esq. This gentleman m. Elizabeth, dau. and co-heir of Sir Gilbert Talbot, and great-great-grandda. (maternally) of John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, son of King EDWARD III.; in right of whom the family of Lyttelton quarters the arms of France and England, within a bordure gobony, (see BURKE'S History of the Royal Families of England.) Of this marriage, there were seven sons and two daus. John Lyttelton d. 17 May, 1832, and was s. by his son,

SIR JOHN LYTTLTON, Knight. This gentleman was granted by Queen MARY, in 1553, the office of constable of Dudley Castle, co. Stafford, with the rangership of the old and new parks there; and though adhering to the catholic religion, he enjoyed the confidence of Queen ELIZABETH, being, during her majesty's reign, one of the council of the Marches of Wales, deputy-Lieutenant and custos-rotulorum of the co. Worcester, and in the commission of the peace for that and the co. Stafford. He received, too, the honour of knighthood from Queen ELIZABETH in 1566, at Kenilworth Castle, when her majesty honoured Dudley, Earl of Leicester, with a visit there. Sir John d. 15 Feb. 1589-90, and was s. by his eldest son,

This gentleman (to use the words of Sir Francis Bacon) being much respected for his wit and valour, and a Roman catholic, was courted by Lord Essex and his friends; and in some measure drawn in by Sir Charles Danvers to that conspiracy which cost Essex his head, and Lyttelton his estate; for he was tried and convicted of high treason at the Queen's Bench bar, 20 Feb. 1604-1; and died in prison in the July following, (the execution of the penalty regarding life being averted through the interest of Sir Walter Raleigh.) Mr. Lyttelton m. Muriel, dau. of Sir Thomas Bromley, Knt., and left issue, three sons and five daus. Mrs. Lyttelton obtained, upon the accession of JAMES I., a reversal of the attainder of her husband, and a grant, by letters patent, of the whole of his estate. She was a person of great prudence, and discharged debts contracted by her husband and his father, to the amount of £9000, although she was remarkable for benevolence and hospitality. This lady survived Mr. Lyttelton twenty-eight years, and brought up her children in the reformed religion. The eldest son,

SIR THOMAS LYTTLTON, Knt., represented the co. Worcester in parliament, and served the office of sheriff of that shire in 1618. He was created a Baronet 25 July, 1618. The LYTTONS came originally from Lytton, in Derbyshire. Sir Alexander de Lytton (temp. EDWARD I.) held considerable estates in the Peak. In the reign of HENRY IV., ROBERT DE LYTTON was governor of Bolsover Castle, comptroller of the king's household, and Agister of the forests in the Peak, to Queen JOAN. | III. Sophia. | IV. Anna-Maria. |

Lineage.

The family of Macartney is stated by Playfair to have sprung from a younger son of the M'Carthy More, of the co. Cork, who went to Scotland to assist King ROBERT BRUCE in his wars, and was rewarded with a grant of land in Argyllshire, whereon are still to be seen the ruins of a castle, the ancient possession of Macartney, in that county. Subsequently, driven from their original resting-place, the Macartneys fixed themselves in Galloway, in lands still called Macartney, and eventually became divided into three branches: Macartney of Mickie Leathes, Macartney of Blacket, and Macartney of Auchinleck. The male line of the branch of Mickie Leathes became extinct in 1780, by the death of John Macartney, Esq. of Halket Leathes, in Kirkcudbright, when the celebrated Mrs. Greville (authoress of the Ode to Indifference) became representative of the family. Of the Auchinleck branch, the last male heir, George, Earl Macartney, died in 1806, and is now represented by his grand-nephew, the son of his lordship's niece, GEORGE MACARTNEY, Esq. of Lissanour Castle. From the Blacket branch descended

GEORGE MACARTNEY, Esq., settled at Belfast, in 1690. He m. Martha Davies, of the family of Sir John Davies, Knt., attorney-general for Ireland temp. JAMES I., and had two sons,

I. GEORGE, who entered the army, and served with much credit under the Duke of Marlborough and Prince Eugene, and was high in the confidence of GEORGE I. He was, at the time of his death, lieutenant-general in the army, commander-in-chief of the forces in Ireland, governor of Portsmouth, and col. of the carbiniers. His issue is now extinct.

II. ISAAC.

The second son,

ISAAC MACARTNEY, Esq., possessed a large estate in the north of Ireland, and served as sheriff of the co. of Antrim in 1696. For that purpose he came privately to Edinburgh, and on the 27 Aug. 1429, attired only in his shirt and drawers, presented his sword to the king upon his knees, before the high altar of Holyrood Church, in pre-

In 1811, he joined the army of the Duke of Wellington in the Peninsula; and there his services met the approbation of his great commander, and were frequently mentioned in his grace's despatches, particularly in those detailing the surrender of Badajoz and the victory of Vittoria. For all these eminent services, Mr. M'Grigor, at the conclusion of the war, received the honour of knighthood, and obtained permission to wear the decorations of the Portuguese order of a knight-commander of the Tower and Sword, conferred upon him by the King of Portugal. Sir GEORGE, 2nd baronet; who, for the good services he had rendered to CHARLES II. during his majesty's exile and the restoration, was made by that monarch one of the Judges of Session, clerk-register, sworn of the privy council, and constituted justice-general. His lordship was elevated to the peerage by JAMES II., 15 April, 1685, in the dignities of Lord Macleod and Castlehaven, and Viscount of Tarbat. At the Revolution, he went up to court, and was well received by WILLIAM; but his arbitrary proceedings in the former reigns had rendered him so unpopular in Scotland, that his name was not included in the new commission of lords of Session, 1 November, 1689. He was, however, restored to his office of lord-clerk-register in 1692, from which he retired in four years afterwards upon a pension of £400 per annum. On the accession of Queen ANNE, Lord Tarbat was sent for to court, and created by letters patent, dated 1 January, 1703, Lord Macleod and Castlehaven, Viscount of Tarbat, and Earl of Cromarty, with remainder to his heirs male and of entail. He was at the same time appointed one of the principal secretaries of state, which office he soon after, on account of his great age, exchanged for that of lord-justice-general, and finally retired in 1710, after zealously promoting the union by his parliamentary influence, as well as his writings. His lordship m. 1st, Anne, dau. of Sir James Sinclair, Bart. of Mey, by whom he had, with four daus., three sons,

I. JOHN, who succeeded as 2nd Earl of Cromarty, and was succeeded himself by his eldest son, GEORGE, 3rd earl; which latter nobleman and his eldest son, Lord M'Leod, having taken an active part in the rebellion of 1745, and being both made prisoners in the field, were tried, convicted, and attainted of high-treason; but becoming objects of royal clemency, their lives were spared and their freedom restored. The honours, however, became forfeited, while the earl was permitted to reside in England, and his son obtained leave, in 1750, to accept a commission in the Swedish service, of which kingdom he was created Count Cromarty, &c. He returned in 1777, raised two battalions of highlanders, and became colonel of the 71st foot, with which he served in India, with the local rank of major-general. His lordship came home in 1784, when his forfeited estates were restored to him; and he d. in 1789, without issue. The estates have since passed through co-heirs into other families, and the honours remain under the attainder.

Applying to the study of the law, Mr. Mackenzie was called to the bar in 1698, where he practised with distinction, and was created a Baronet in 1704. Upon the resignation of his uncle, Lord Prestonhall, he was appointed one of the senators of the College of Justice, and a lord of Justiciary. He assumed the title of Lord Roystoun, and sat on the bench, with high reputation, for more than thirty-four years, even until his death, at which time he was senior lord of Session. Lord Roystoun m. Lineage.

The family of Mackworth is of great antiquity in the county of Derby. The name is local, from the parish of Mackworth, which comprises the township of Markeaton, situated about two miles north-west from the town of Derby. The manor of Mackworth, formerly the property of the Touchets, Lords Audley, has always been held with that of Markeaton. A considerable freehold estate at Mackworth was held under the lord of the manor by the ancient family of De Mackworth, who had a castellated mansion there, the gateway of which still remains. At the Battle of Poitiers (1356), Edward the Black Prince was attended by James, Lord Audley, K.G., who had four esquires, or aides-de-camp, in immediate attendance, a member of this family being one of the four; and in the late French war, the representatives of these four esquires all served together as aides-de-camp to General Lord Hill. John Touchet, Lord Audley, son-in-law, and eventually heir, to the said James, Lord Audley, K.G., granted in consideration that John and Thomas Mackworth were valiant men, and for the services rendered by them and their ancestors to the Audley family, a coat-of-arms, made from the arms of Audley and Touchet.* From Derbyshire the chief of the line settled in Rutlandshire, by the marriage with the heiress of Empingham, in that county, in which parish Normanton Hall was the residence of the Mackworths for many years. The manor of Ash (Elses), in Derbyshire, appears to have been held by the Mackworth family, 8th RICHARD II., A.D. 1385.

Rutland, Bart., 30 July, 1681, by me, Gregory King, Rouge-Dracoon." The instrument is in Norman French, and grants to John and his brother, Thomas Mackworth, who are described as valiant men, &c., the following arms:—"Sable et ermeyn, partez et indentez, avec un chevron de goules, frettez d'or, de les armes D'Audeley, et une creste, c'est assavoir, une cele q'est pr celle n're creste D'Audeley, de quele cele les plumes servont des couleurs de sable et d'ermeyn."

He was buried with great pomp in Westminster Abbey, 26 Dec. 1654; and CHARLES II. had his remains removed, on 12 Sept. 1660, from HENRY VII.'s chapel, and thrown into a pit in the churchyard of St. Margaret's adjoining. This family, which settled in England at the Norman Conquest, has ever since, in its various branches, enjoyed opulence, rank, and influence. The founder of the family,

WILLIAM, LORD MALLET DE GREVILLE, one of the great barons who accompanied the CONQUEROR, was charged to protect the remains of the fallen monarch, HAROLD, and to see them decently interred after the battle of Hastings. The son of this warrior,

ROBERT, LORD MALLET, possessed at the general survey, according to Dugdale, thirty-two lordships in Yorkshire, three in Essex, one in Hampshire, two in Nottinghamshire, eight in Lincolnshire, and two hundred and twenty-one in Suffolk. The near kinsman of this Robert,

Lineage.

The surname of this family was anciently written, in Latin, de Monte Acuto, and in English, Montacute; but the original was, nevertheless, Montagu, from the town of that name in Normandy. The first of the Montagus in England was

DROGO DE MONTEACUTO, a warrior in the immediate train of Robert, Earl of Moreton, at the Conquest. From this personage descended, in nearly five centuries afterwards,

SIR EDWARD MONTAGU, Knt., a distinguished lawyer, who was appointed lord-chief-justice of the Court of King's Bench in 1539, which office he resigned in 1545, and was constituted, in the same year, lord-chief-justice of the Common Pleas; "a descent," says Fuller, "in honour, but an ascent in profit." Sir Edward was also of the privy council, and in such high favour and esteem with his sovereign, HENRY VIII., that the king appointed him one of those sixteen executors of his last will and testament who should be regents of the kingdom, and governors to his son, EDWARD VI. He m. thrice; and the eldest son of his third marriage, (the sons of his first marriage all d. in infancy),

SIR HENRY MONTAGU, was one of the representatives of the city of London in the parliament called by JAMES I., upon his accession, (19 March, 1604,) and acquired great distinction as a parliamentary orator. In 1616, he was appointed lord-chief-justice of the Court of King's Bench; in 1620, constituted lord-treasurer of England; and elevated, 19 Dec. in the same year, to the peerage, as Baron Montagu of Kimbolton, and Viscount Mandeville. Upon the accession of CHARLES I., his lordship was advanced (5 Feb. 1626) to an earldom, as Earl of Manchester; and subsequently appointed lord-privy-seal. He m. 1st, Catherine, second dau. of Sir William Spencer, of Yarnton, in Oxfordshire, third son of Sir John Spencer, of Althorp, and had issue, ceived into the special favour of that princess, and eventually appointed, by her, abbot of St. Martin's Abbey, near Pointoise, in the diocese of Rheon. He was also of her cabinet council, and the chief instrument of introducing Cardinal Mazarin to her majesty. In 1643, he was apprehended at Rochester coming to England with letters of importance, and he remained in confinement here until 1647, when he was banished the kingdom by a vote of parliament. He d. in 1670, and was buried in the church belonging to the Hospital of Incurables, at Paris.

This nobleman was an active and successful general of the parliamentary army during the civil wars, and particularly distinguished by his celebrated victory over Prince Rupert at Marston Moor, in which engagement CROMWELL acted as his lieutenant-general. His lordship, however, refused to sanction the murder of the king, and retired from parliament until 1660, when he assisted at the meeting of peers who voted for the restoration of CHARLES II.; and was deputed by the lords, as their speaker, to congratulate the king upon his return to his capital: a duty which the earl eloquently fulfilled at Whitehall, 29 May, 1660, concluding his address in these words:

"Great King: give me leave to speak the confidence, as well as the desire, of the true protestant faith, the just assertor and maintainer of the laws and liberties of your subjects, so shall judgment run down like a river, and justice like a mighty stream; and God, the God of your mercy, who hath so miraculously preserved you, will establish your throne in righteousness and in peace."

Upon the decease of his nephew, Sir Andrew Murray, of Balvaird, without issue,

SIR DAVID MURRAY, of Gospertie, (the 2nd son,) was served heir of the family. This gentleman, who was cup-bearer to JAMES VI., becoming a great favourite with that monarch, (having been instrumental in preserving his life from the attempt of the Earl of Gowrie and his brother, Mr. Ruthven, in the town of Perth, 5 Aug. 1600,) accompanied the king to England, and was created Lord Scone, 7 April, 1605, having previously received a grant of the whole abbey of Scone, of which the Earl of Gowrie had been commendator. His lordship was advanced to the Viscounty of Stormont, 16 Aug. 1621; and having no issue, he obtained a reversionary clause in the patent, conferring the honours upon Sir Mungo Murray, of Drumcairn, and several of his kinsmen. His lordship d. 27 Aug. 1631, and was buried at Scone, where a magnificent monument was erected to his memory. His honours devolved, according to the extended limitation, upon

SIR MUNGO MURRAY, of Drumcairn, as 2nd viscount. This nobleman m. Anne, elder dau. of Sir Andrew Murray, of Balvaird, and niece of his predecessor; but dying without issue, in 1642, the honours of Stormont, by virtue also of the entail, descended to

WILLIAM, b. at Scone, 2 March, 1705; who being called to the English bar in 1730, attained, with unprecedented rapidity, the highest reputation and honour of that arduous profession. In 1733, he was associated with the attorney-general, Talbot, and the solicitor-general, York, in an appeal case in the House of Lords; and was, soon afterwards, engaged in so many similar causes, that his friend Pope addressed to him his imitation of the Sixth Epistle of the First Book of Horace, congratulatory of the circumstance. In 1749, Mr. Murray was appointed solicitor-general; in 1754, attorney-general; and in two years subsequently, 8 Nov. 1756, he was raised to the judgment-seat as lord-chief-justice of the Court of King's Bench, when (on the same day) he was elevated to the peerage, as Baron Mansfield, of Mansfield, in the co. of Nottingham. His lordship was created, 19 Oct. 1776, EARL OF MANSFIELD, with remainder, of the dignity of Countess of Mansfield, to Louisa, Viscountess Stormont, wife of his nephew, David, Viscount Stormont, under the impression, at that period, that no English peerage could be limited to a Scottish peer, even in remainder when the converse was, however, established in law, his lordship obtained another patent, dated 1 Aug. 1792, creating him EARL OF MANSFIELD, of Caen Wood, co. Middlesex, with remainder to his nephew, Viscount Stormont. His lordship m. in 1738, Elizabeth, dau. of Daniel, Earl of Winchelsea and Nottingham; but dying s. p. 20 March, 1793, in the 89th year of his age, the original Barony of Mansfield expired, while the two earldoms devolved according to the specific limitation.*

Lineage.

The original surname of this family was Johnston, and at what period the alteration took place cannot now be determined; it continues, however, to bear the Johnston arms. The assumed surname, which is local, is said to have been thus derived:—When Walter, high-steward of Scotland, and ancestor of the royal house of Stuart, m. Marjorie, only dau. of Robert Bruce, and eventually heir to his crown, the Barony of Ratho was granted by the king as a marriage portion to his dau., by charter, which is still extant; and those lands being subsequently denominated "Terre de Matho-Marjoriebankis," gave rise to the name of Marjoribanks.

As in the case with many other private families, no records remain of the early history and intermarriages of the house of Marjoribanks; but several of its members are mentioned in the history of Scotland as representatives in the Scottish parliament. In 1540, Thomas Marjoribanks, of Matho, sat for Edinburgh, and was appointed one of the senators of the College of Justice in 1554.

Lineage.

The patriarch of the CHURCHILLS was GITTO DE LEON, of a noble family in Normandy, who lived in the year 1055, and whose 2nd son,

WANDRIL DE LEON, was Lord of Courcil. This Wandril m. Isabella de Tuva, and his eldest son,

ROGER DE COURCIL, coming into England with the CONQUEROR, was rewarded for his services, as appears by Domesday-Book, with divers grants of lands in the counties of Somerset, Dorset, and Devon. The grandson of this Roger,

SIR BARTHOLOMEW DE CHURCHILL, a great warrior, and celebrated in old ballads, held the castle of Bristol for King STEPHEN, and died fighting in his cause. From Sir Bartholomew we pass to

CHARLES CHURCHILL, who was engaged by Thomas Courtenay, Earl of Devon, in the cause of EDWARD IV.; and adhering to that monarch, when the earl deserted his party, and obtained in marriage, by the king's interest, Margaret, dau. and heir of Sir William Widville, a lady nearly allied to the queen. The descendant of this marriage.

JASPER CHURCHILL, of Bradford, m. Elizabeth, dau. of John Chaplet, Esq. of Harrington, in Dorsetshire, and was s. by his elder son,

JOHN CHURCHILL, Esq. of Mintern, in Devonshire, an eminent lawyer, who m. Sarah, dau. and co-heir of Sir Henry Winstan, of Standon, in Lincolnshire; and by that alliance, as well as his practice at the bar, considerably augmented his estate. He was father of

SIR WINSTAN CHURCHILL, b. in 1620; who m. Elizabeth, dau. of Sir John Drake, Bart. of Ashe, in Devonshire, and had, with other issue,

I. JOHN, of whom presently.

II. George, b. in 1635; a naval officer of eminence in the reign of King WILLIAM, and one of the council in naval affairs to the LORD-HIGH-ADMIRAL, Prince GEORGE of Denmark, temp. Queen ANNE. He d. usm. in 1710, and was buried in Westminster Abbey.

III. Charles, a military officer, who served with distinction at the battle of Steinkirk and Landen, and was made lieutenant-governor of the Tower, and participated in the glory of Blenheim. He d. s. p. in 1714.

IV. Arabella, who was mistress to JAMES II., when Duke of York, and had issue by the king,

1 James Fitz-James, the celebrated Duke of Berwick (see BURKE'S Extinct Peerage.)

- 2 Henry Fitz-James, commonly called the Grand Prior, created by his father DUKES OF ALBEMARLE.
 3 Henrietta, m. to Henry, Lord Waldegrave.
 4 A dau., a nun.
 Arabella Churchill, m. afterwards, Col. Charles Godfrey, master of the Jewel-office; and d. in 1714, leaving by him two daus.,

- 1 Charlotte-Godfrey, m. to Hugh Boscawen, Viscount Falmouth.
 2 Elizabeth-Godfrey, m. to Edmund Dunch, Esq. of Wittenham, in Berkshire.

The eldest surviving son,

JOHN CHURCHILL, who became the most celebrated captain of the period in which he lived, and is esteemed the first general in the military annals of England, was b. 24 May, 1650, and in his youth was page of honour to James, Duke of York, through whose favour he obtained an ensigncy in the guards. In 1671, he served at Tangier against the Moors; and being in the army sent next year, under the Duke of Monmouth, to the assistance of Louis XIV., against the Dutch, signalized himself at the siege of Maestricht. In 1679, he attended the Duke of York into Flanders, and the following year into Scotland. He was also with the duke in 1683, when the Gloucester frigate, in her voyage to Scotland, struck on the Lemon and Oar sand, and was one of those persons for whose preservation his royal highness was particularly solicitous. In the December following, by the influence of the duke, he was dignified with the title of LORD CHURCHILL, of Eyemouth, co. Berwick, in the peerage of Scotland; and the next year, being then a general-officer, he got the command of the 1st regt. of dragoons, at that time newly raised. The Duke of York ascending the throne, as JAMES II., Lord Churchill was accredited ambassador to the court of France; and was created a peer of England, 14 May, 1685, as BARON CHURCHILL, of Sandridge, co. Hertford. Notwithstanding, however, these sterling marks of royal favour, Lord Churchill, who had assisted in defeating the unfortunate Duke of Monmouth, at Sedgemoor, was amongst the first to attach himself to the fortunes of the PRINCE OF ORANGE, in 1688, and to vote in the Convention Parliament for the vacancy of the throne, and for filling it with the PRINCE and PRINCESS OF ORANGE. For these good services he was sworn of the privy council to the new sovereign, and created, 9 April, 1689, EARL OF MARLBOROUGH; in which year he was sent to command the English forces in the Netherlands, under Prince Waldeck, general of the Dutch troops. He subsequently fell under the displeasure of King WILLIAM, and was confined for a short time in the Tower. Upon the accession of Queen ANNE, her majesty appointed the Earl of Marlborough captain-gen. of all her forces in England, and of those employed in conjunction with her allies; and he was created, 14 Dec. 1702, Marquess of Blandford and DUKES OF MARLBOROUGH. Within two years afterwards, 2 Aug. 1704, his grace won the great victory of BLENHEIM, which has immortalized his name, and for which he obtained a grant from the crown, at the desire of parliament, to himself and his heirs, of the royal manor of Woodstock and hundred of Wootton, in Oxfordshire. Here a splendid palace, bearing the proud name of BLENHEIM, was erected at the national expense, and a monumental pillar raised to hand down to posterity the achievements of the great and victorious soldier. His grace m. Sarah, dau. and co-heir of Richard Jennings, Esq. of Sandridge, co. Hertford, by whom he had issue,

John, who d. in infancy of the small-pox, 30 Feb. 1702-3.

Mary, m. to John, Duke of Montague.

The duke having no prospect of heirs male after the death of his only son, and being desirous of having his honours and dignities, together with the manor of Woodstock and house of Blenheim, settled on his posterity, an act for that purpose obtained the royal assent, 21 Dec. 1706; and on 28 Jan. ensuing, the like sanction was given to another act for settling on him and his posterity a pension of £5000 per annum. The Emperor LEOPOLD, in consideration of the eminent services performed by the Duke of Marlborough, created him a Prince of the Empire in 1704; and his majesty's son and successor, the Emperor JOSEPH, bestowed upon his grace the principality of Mindelheim, in Swabia. The duke d. 16 June, 1722, having survived some years his mental faculties, and was s., under the act of parliament, by his daughter,

HENRIETTA, as Duchess of Marlborough; at whose decease, 24 Oct. 1733, the honours and estates of this GREAT branch of the CHURCHILLS devolved upon her nephew,

CHARLES SPENCER, 5th Earl of Sunderland, as DUKES OF MARLBOROUGH, &c.

Family of Spencer.

SIR ROBERT SPENCER, KnT. of Wormleighton, co. Northumberland, descended from Geoffry Le Despencer, younger brother of Hugh, justiciary of England, (from whom the Barons Le Despencer derive,) was elevated to the peerage, 21 July, 1603, by the title of Baron Spencer, of Wormleighton. This nobleman appears to have been a very spirited member of parliament, as his reply to Thomas Howard, Earl of Arundel, in a debate upon the royal prerogative, in 1621, evinces:—"My lord," said Howard, "when these things were doing, your ancestors were keeping sheep."—"When my ancestors were keeping sheep," replied Spencer, "your lordship's ancestors were plotting treason." This excited such irritation at the moment, that Arundel, as the aggressor, was committed to the Tower; but soon after, acknowledging his fault, was discharged. M A R R.

MARR AND KELLIE, EARL OF, (John-Francis-Miller Erskine,) Viscount Fentoun, and Baron Erskine, Garioch, and Alloa, and Baron Dirleton, in the peerage of Scotland; b. 28 Dec. 1795; s. his father, as 15th earl, 20 Sept. 1828; m. 24 April, 1827, Philadelphia, eldest dau. of Sir Charles-Granville Stuart-Menteath, Bart. of Closeburn Hall, Dumfriesshire. His lordship claimed, at the decease of the 10th Earl of Kellie in 1829, the Earldom of Kellie, with the minor honours of Fentoun and Dirleton, as heir male general, and his right was allowed by the House of Lords.

Lineage.

Of the title of Marr, Lord Hales says, "This is one of the earldoms whose origin is lost in its antiquity. It existed before our records, and before the era of genuine history."

MARTACUS, Earl of Marr, is witness to a charter of donation by MALCOLM CANMORE, to the Culdees of Lochleven, of the manor of Kilgad-Earnoch, in 1065. From this nobleman, we pass to his descendant, GRATNEY, 11th Earl of Marr, who succeeded his father in 1294, and d. before 1300. He m. Lady Christian Bruce, dau. of Robert, Earl of Carrick, and sister of ROBERT I., and by her (who m. 2ndly, Sir Christopher Seton, of Seton; and 3rdly, Sir Andrew Moray, of Bothwell) had issue,

DONALD, his successor.

Elyne, who m. Sir John Menteath, and had a dau.,

CHRISTIAN, m. to Sir Edward Keith, and had a dau., JANET KEITH, m. to Sir Thomas Erskine, and was mother of SIR ROBERT ERSKINE, who claimed the EARLDOM OF MARR in 1438.

The earl was s. by his son,

DONALD, 12th Earl of Marr. This nobleman, upon the death of Randolph, Earl of Moray, regent of Scotland, was unanimously appointed to fill his place by the parliament assembled at Perth, 2 Aug. 1332. His lordship immediately assumed the command of the Scottish army, which, by his ignorance of military discipline, was totally defeated by an inferior force under Edward Balliol, 12th of the same month, and the Earl of Marr paid for his inexperience with his life, being smothered in the rout. He had m. Isabel, only dau. of Sir Alexander Stewart, of Bonkill, and had a daughter,

MARGARET, of whom presently, with an only son, his successor,

THOMAS, 13th Earl of Marr, a person of much political importance in the reign of DAVID II. His lordship was great-chamberlain of Scotland in 1358, ambassador to England in 1362, and one of the guaranties of a truce with the English in 1369. The earl obtained from King DAVID a charter of confirmation of the lordship of Garioch. He d. s. p. in 1377, and with him terminated the direct male line of the old Earls of Mar. His lordship was s. by his sister,

MARGARET, Countess of Marr; who m. 1st, William, Earl of Douglas, (who in her right became 14th Earl of Marr, and was designed Earl of Douglas and Marr,) and had issue,

John, Earl of Douglas and Marr, killed at Otterburn, in 1388, and d. s. p. Isabel.

Her ladyship being divorced from Lord Douglas, m. 2ndly, Sir John Swinton, of Swinton, who fell at Homildon, in 1402. Her ladyship d. in 1385, and was s. by her son, mentioned above, who was s. in the Earldom of Marr by his only sister,

ISABEL, Countess of Marr. Her ladyship m. 1st, Sir Malcolm Drummond, of Drummond, who d. without issue; and 2ndly, Alexander Stewart, natural son of Alexander, Earl of Buchan, 4th son of ROBERT II. The first appearance of this person in life was at the head of a formidable band of robbers, in the highlands of Scotland, when storming the Countess of Marr's castle of Kildrummie, he obtained her ladyship in marriage, either by violence or persuasion. The countess subsequently made a free grant of all her honours and inheritance to her said husband; and dying s. p. 1419, he,

ALEXANDER STEWART, designed, in right of the deceased countess, Earl of Marr and Lord of Garioch, resigned those honours to the crown, when they were re-granted to him, 28 May, 1496, in remainder to his natural son, Sir Thomas Stewart, to revert, in case of failure of male issue of the latter, to the crown. His lordship was ambassador to England in 1406, and again in 1407, when he engaged in a tournament with the Earl of Kent. The following year he went to France and Flanders, with a noble company, and eminently distinguished himself in the service of the Duke of Burgundy, who employed him to assist in quelling a rebellion of the people of Liege against their bishop, John of Bavaria. The earl commanded the royal army at the battle of Harlaw, against the Lord of the Isles, in 1411; and was appointed ambassador-extraordinary to England in 1416; and soon afterwards warden of the Marches. He d. in 1435, and his natural son, mentioned above, having predeceased him, the Earldom of Marr, according to the charter, reverted to the crown, when it was claimed, in 1435, by Sir Robert Erskine, of Erskine, as lineal descendant of Lady Elyne Marr, (refer to Gratney, 11th earl;) but though the descent was indisputably established, the earldom was not conferred upon the Erskines until it had been enjoyed by four earls of different families, the last of whom was the celebrated Regent MORAY, a period of 130 years having elapsed, when at last it was restored, in 1565, by Queen MARY, to

JOHN, 5th Lord Erskine, who should of right be 6th Earl of Marr of the Erskine race. This nobleman was appointed by charter, in 1566, heritable sheriff of the co. Stirling, and keeper of Stirling Castle; and chosen regent of Scotland by parliament, in 1571, during the minority of JAMES VI. His lordship m. Annabella, dau. of Sir William Murray, of Tullibardine, ancestor of the Dukes of Atholl; and dying in 1572, was s. by his only son,

JOHN, 7th earl. This nobleman, who took a leading part in Scotch affairs in the reign of JAMES VI., accompanied that monarch into England, and was sworn of the privy council, and invested with the Garter, 27 July, 1603. His lordship had a charter, on his own resignation, of the Earldom of Marr, Lordship of Strathdon, Strathdee, Garioch, Alloa, &c., the heritable offices of captain of the castle of Stirling, and sheriff of the shire thereof, &c., to him and his heirs, and erecting the whole into the EARLDOM OF MARR, 3 Feb. 1620. His lordship m. 1st, Anne, second dau. of David, Lord Drummond, and had an only son,

JOHN, his successor.

The earl m. 2ndly, Lady Mary Stewart, 2nd dau. of Esme, Duke of Lennox, and had, with other issue, JAMES, Earl of Buchan.

Henry, to whom his father assigned the peerage of Cardross, ancestor of the modern Earls of Buchan.

Alexander (Sir), a col. in the army, who was blown up at Dunglass, with his brother-in-law, the Earl of Haddington, in 1640.

Charles (Sir), of Alva, ancestor of the Earl of ROSSLYN. (See that dignity.)

His lordship d. 14 Dec. 1634, and was s. by his eldest son, JOHN, 8th earl. This nobleman sold to the crown the heritable-sheriffship of Stirlingshire, and the balliary of the water of Forth, for £28000, and he accordingly resigned those offices, 4 Nov. 1641. His lordship m. Lady Christian Hay, 2nd dau. of Francis, 9th Earl of Erroll; and dying in Sept. 1654, was s. by his son,

JOHN, 9th earl; who m. 1st, Lady Mary Scott, eldest dau. of Walter, 1st Earl of Buchan, but had no issue. His lordship m. 2ndly, Lady Mary Mackenzie, eldest dau. of George, 2nd Earl of Seaforth; and dying in Sept. 1668, was s. by his son,

CHARLES, 10th earl; who was obliged, in order to satisfy the pecuniary engagements of the last lord, to dispose of a great part of his landed property, particularly the Barony of Erskine, the original possession of the family. His lordship m. Mary, dau. of George, 2nd Earl of Panmure, and had, (with other issue,)

JOHN, his successor.

James, of Grange, a lord of Session, and justice-clerk, in the reign of Queen ANNE, subsequently M.P. for the co. of Stirling; d. in 1754, and was s. by his eldest surviving son, (by Rachel, sister of Major Chiesly,)

James, knt.-marischal of Scotland; m. Frances, only dau. of John, 11th Earl of Marr; and dying in 1784, left two sons,

JOHN-FRANCIS, of whom hereafter, as restored EARL OF MARR.

James-Francis, who d. in 1806, leaving issue.

His lordship d. in 1689, and was s. by his eldest son,

JOHN, 11th earl, K.T., and secretary-of-state for Scotland in 1706. His lordship attaching himself, however, to the fortunes of the CHEVALIER ST. GEORGE, and taking an active part in the Rebellion of 1715, (having proclaimed that personage by the title of James VII. of Scotland, and Third of England,) followed his royal master to the Continent after the battle of Sheriffmuir, and was attainted, by act of parliament, in 1715. He d. in 1732, and his only son, Thomas, Lord Erskine, in 1766. From the period of passing the bill of attainder, the earldom remained under its influence until its reversal, through the gracious and special recommendation of his Majesty GEORGE IV., by parliament, 17 June, 1834, in favour of

JOHN-FRANCIS ERSKINE, Esq., (revert to children of the 10th earl.) His lordship was b. in 1741; m. in 1770, to Frances, only dau. of Charles Floyer, Esq., governor of Madras, by whom he had issue,

JOHN-THOMAS, his successor.

MARTIN, SIR ROGER, of Long Melford, co. Suffolk; b. 22 Feb. 1778; s. as 5th, baronet, upon the decease of his father, 15 Sept. 1815. Sir Roger is senior merchant and second judge of the court of Appeal at Moorsheadabab, on the Bengal establishment.

Lineage.

This very ancient and knightly family (as Harvey, in his Visitation of Suffolk, terms it) settled at Long Melford in the reign of RICHARD II., where, in 1438, RICHARD MARTIN died, leaving a son,
 LAURENCE MARTIN, who purchased lands, in 1440, of William, then abbot of St. Edmunds Bury, and exchanged others. The great-great-grandson of this Laurence, ROGER MARTIN, was so remarkable for benevolence, that when he advanced in years, and was not able to go far from home, he contrived a whistle at the end of his cane to collect the poor around him. In the 14th of HENRY VIII., he was appointed one of the commissioners for levying the subsidy granted to that king, having previously been called to the bar, and chosen a bencher of Lincoln's-Inn. In the reign of MARY, upon being offered the secretaryship of state, he replied, that for himself he was highly satisfied with the sufficiency God had bestowed upon him; and as for his son, he would inherit a competency sufficient if he proved an honest man, but if he became otherwise, far too much. This excellent person reached nearly his hundredth year, and from him lineally descended,

This Emerus left two sons, Sir Herbert, from whom sprang the Lords Maxwell, Earls of Nithsdale, (an earldom forfeited in 1715;) and

SIR JOHN MAXWELL, Knt., who got from his father the lands and baronies of Nether-Polloc, co. Renfrew, and the lands of Dryps and Calderwood, in the shire of Lanark; and dying in the beginning of the reign of DAVID BRUCE, was s. by his son,

SIR ROBERT MAXWELL, Knt. of Calderwood, who d. in 1363, and was s. by his eldest son,

SIR JOHN MAXWELL, of Polloc and Calderwood. This gentleman m. Isabel, dau. of Sir James Lindsay, and had two sons, JOHN, to whom he gave the lands of Nether-Polloc; and

SIR ROBERT MAXWELL, who got the Barony of Calderwood and other lands. This distribution of the estates of Sir John Maxwell is proved by a mutual indenture and entail entered into by the two brothers, in which all their lands are enumerated; and in which it is provided that falling heirs male of either of their bodies, the whole estate shall devolve upon the surviving heir male of the other. This deed is dated at Dumbarton, 18 December, 1400. Sir Robert m. in 1403, Elizabeth, dau. and co-heir of Sir Robert Denniston, of Denniston, by whom he obtained a considerable augmentation of landed property. From this marriage lineally descended

SIR JAMES MAXWELL, Knt. of Calderwood, who m. 1st, Margaret, dau. of Robert Porterfield, Esq. of Porterfield, by whom he had two daus. He m. 2ndly, Isabel, dau. of Sir Alexander Hamilton, of Innerwick, by whom, with six daus., he had two sons; and 3rdly, Margaret, dau. of James, 7th Earl of Glencairn, relict of Sir James Hamilton, of Evandale, and sister of Ann, Marchioness of Hamilton, by whom he had four daus. and two sons,

JOHN, lineal ancestor of the present baronet. Alexander.

Sir James d. in 1732, and was s. by his eldest son,

I. SIR JAMES MAXWELL, of Calderwood, who was created a Baronet of Nova Scotia, with remainder to his heirs male whatsoever, 28 March, 1627. Upon the demise of Sir John Maxwell, of Polloc, without surviving issue, in 1647, the estates of that gentleman ought to devolve, it was presumed, upon Sir James, according to the deed mentioned as having been executed, in 1400, by their ancestors, the brothers, Sir John and Sir Robert Maxwell; but Sir John, of Polloc, displeas'd with the expensive habits of Sir James, made a disposition, some time before his death, in favour of George Maxwell, of Auldhouse; who succeeded accordingly. Sir James endeavoured to set aside this disposition, but unsuccessfully. He d. in 1667, and was s. by his eldest son,

II. SIR WILLIAM, who re-agitated his claim to the Polloc estates in 1693, but as unsuccessfully as his predecessor. This gentleman m. Jean, dau. of Sir Alexander Maxwell, of Soughton Hall; but leaving no male issue at his decease, having outlived his two sons, the title reverted to his first cousin,

III. SIR JOHN, (only son of Col. John Maxwell, half-brother of the 1st baronet, who fell fighting under the banner of royalty, at the battle of Dunbar, in 1650.) This gentleman m. Margaret, dau. of Captain Wood, and was s. at his decease by his only surviving son,

IV. SIR WILLIAM, who m. Christian, dau. of Alexander Stewart, Esq. of Torrance, and had, with four daus., three sons, viz.,

WILLIAM, his successor.

John, a lieutenant-col. in the army.

Alexander, a merchant in Leith; who m. Mary, dau. of Hugh Clerk, Esq., and left, with other issue,

WILLIAM, who s. as 7th baronet.

Sir William d. in 1750, and was s. by his eldest son,

V. SIR WILLIAM. This gentleman m. Grizel, dau. of James Peadie, Esq. of Rough Hill; and dying 2 Jan. 1789, left an only surviving son,

VI. SIR WILLIAM, b. 7 Jan. 1748; m. 5 May, 1807, Hannah-Leonora, youngest dau. of the late Robert Pasley, Esq. of Mount Annan, in Dumfriesshire; but dying s. p. 19 Aug. 1829, was s. by his cousin,

VII. SIR WILLIAM, a gentleman-officer in the army; b. 4 Dec. 1754; who m. Isabella, dau. and heir of Henry Wilson, Esq. of Newbottle, in the co. of Durham, and by that lady (who d. 1 Oct. 1839) had issue,

WILLIAM-ALEXANDER, present baronet.

Robert-Wilson, in the civil service of the E.I.Co.

Henry, merchant at Leith.

Hugh-Bates, m. 1st, in May, 1837, Mary-Anne, only dau. of John Hunter, Esq. of Lisbourne, and has a son, William, b. 11 Aug. 1838.

MAXWELL, SIR JOHN, of Pollok, co. Renfrew, m. 14 Oct. 1839, Lady Matilda-Harriet Bruce, dau. of Thomas, Earl of Elgin and Kincardine. He s. as 8th bart., on the decease of his father, 30 July, 1844. He has sat in parliament successively for the cos. of Lanark and Renfrew.

Lineage.

This family, with certain others, is historically stated to have accompanied Edgar Atheling to Scotland at the Conquest; and "Maccus filius Undewyn," or "Unwyn," a Norwegian, whose posterity, like the Somervilles, &c., took the surname of Maccus-vile, by corruption Maxwell, from the residence, or barony of this principal ancestor, is witness to the Inquisitio Principis Davidis in 1116, perhaps the oldest authentic Scotch document. There is a charter (penes the Pollok family) from King WILLIAM the Lion, who began his reign in 1165, to "ROBERT, son of MACCUS," of part of Lassenden, in Roxburghshire, that comprised in the barony of Maccusville, and which it states had belonged to "HERBERTUS MACCUSVILLE Vicecomes," i. e., of Roxburgh, who figured in the previous reign of King MALCOLM.

JOHN DE MACCUSVILLE, also Vicecomes of Roxburgh, and chamberlain of Scotland, the son of Herbert, was ambassador to England from 1215 to 1220, and guarantee to the treaty of marriage between Johanna of England and ALEXANDER II. The next is AYMER DE MACCUSWELL, who acquired lands in Renfrewshire and Dumfriesshire, of which he likewise was Vicecomes, besides chamberlain of Scotland: with other barons, he engaged, in 1258, that the Scotch should not make peace without consent of the Welsh. He left issue, three sons, HERBERT (Sir), ancestor of the noble house of Caeriarock, in Dumfriesshire, Earls of Nitheadale and Lords Maxwell, attainted in 1715.*

JOHN (Sir), founder of the family before us. They were generally styled "Domini de Pollok," or "Nether Pollok," and became allied to the Royal family.

ALEXANDER, of whom little is known.

SIR JOHN (above), of Pollok, in the reign of ROBERT BRUCE, (who succeeded in 1306,) got a royal grant of the lands of Lyoncroce, in Renfrewshire. His heir was Sir Robert Maxwell, of Pollok, and the next in succession,

* ROBERT, 4th Lord Maxwell, hereditary sheriff of Kirkcubright, and guardian of the West Marches, the lineal descendant of Sir Herbert, m. 1st, Janet, dau. of William

Sir John Maxwell, of Pollok. He m. 1st, Isabel de Lindsay, dau. of Sir James Lindsay, of Crawford, by Lady Egilda Stewart, half-sister of ROBERT II., King of Scotland, and dau. of Walter, the high-steward, by Isabel, sister of Sir John Graham, of Abercorn, (which Egilda re-married Sir Hugh Eglinton, of Eglinton, with issue. Elizabeth, their sole heiress, ancestrix by John Montgomery, of Eglesham, or the "Sieur de Montgomery," of the Earls of Eglinton, Lords Montgomery, &c.,) and by the above Isabel, Sir John Maxwell had,

- I. JOHN (Sir), his successor.
- II. ROBERT (Sir), ancestor of the Maxwells of Calderwood.

Sir John m. 2ndly, Elizabeth de Saint Michel, heiress of Whitcheaten, Roxburghshire, (afterwards held by the noble house of Buccleuch,) but apparently without issue. His eldest son,

6th Lord Douglas of Drumlanrig, (ancestor of the Dukes of Queensbury,) and had issue,

ROBERT, his successor.

John (Sir), who m. Agnes, eldest dau. and heiress of William Herries, 4th Lord Herries of Terregles, co. Dumfries, and became, jure uxoris, Lord Herries of Terregles. His lordship was s. by his son,

SIR WILLIAM MAXWELL, 6th Lord Herries of Terregles, who m. Katharine Kerr, sister of Mark, 1st Earl of Lothian, and dying in 1664, was s. by his son,

JOHN MAXWELL, 7th Lord Herries of Terregles, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of John, 6th Lord Maxwell, afterwards Earl of Morton, and dying about the year 1627, left a son, JOHN MAXWELL, 8th Lord Herries, of whom hereafter, as 3rd Earl of Nithsdale.

The 4th Lord Maxwell m. 2ndly, Agnes, natural dau. of James, Earl of Buchan, relict of Adam, 2nd Earl of Bothwell. He d. in 1546, and was s. by his elder son, ROBERT, 5th Lord Maxwell of Carlaverock, warden of the West Marches, who m. Lady Beatrix Douglas, 2nd dau. of James, Earl of Morton, and dying in 1552, was s. by his son,

JOHN, 6th Lord Maxwell, guardian of the West Marches. Upon the execution and attainder of the Regent Morton, Lord Maxwell obtained, as representative of his mother, a new charter of the earldom of Morton, ratified by parliament, but the attainder being rescinded, he was deprived of the dignity, which passed, in 1585, to the heir of entail. His lordship m. Elizabeth Douglas, dau. of David, 13th Earl of Douglas and 7th Earl of Angus, and had issue,

JOHN, Lord Maxwell.

ROBERT, who inherited after his brother.

Elizabeth, who m. John Maxwell, 6th Lord Herries of Terregles, and had a son, JOHN, 7th Lord Herries, who s. his cousin as 3rd EARL OF NITHSDALE.

He d. in 1593, and was s. by his eldest son,

JOHN, 7th Lord Maxwell. A feud subsisting between the houses of Maxwell and Johnston, this nobleman slew Sir James Johnston in a rencounter, and fleeing from Scotland in consequence, he was betrayed by the Earl of Caithness, and subsequently tried, beheaded, and attainted in 1613. His lordship had m. the Lady Margaret Hamilton, dau. of John, 1st Marquess Hamilton, Duke of Chateherault, but had no issue. His brother,

ROBERT, 8th Lord Maxwell, was created, in 1620, LORD MAXWELL OF ESKDALE AND CARLYLE, and EARL OF NITHSDALE, in remainder to heirs male, and with precedence of his father's Earldom of Morton, (in 1581.) This nobleman was celebrated, like his gallant ancestor, Sir Eustace Maxwell, in the time of EDWARD I., by a brave defence of Carlaverock, against the parliamentarians in 1460. His lordship m. Elizabeth, dau. of Sir Francis Beaumont, and dying in 1644, was s. by his son,

ROBERT, 2nd Earl of Nithsdale, hereditary sheriff of Kirkcubright. His lordship dying ~~was~~ in 1667, was s. by his cousin,

JOHN MAXWELL, 8th Lord Herries of Terregles, as 3rd Earl of Nithsdale. His lordship m. Elizabeth, sister of John Gordon, 1st Viscount Kenmure, and was s. at his decease by his son,

ROBERT, 4th Earl of Nithsdale, who m. the Lady Lucy Douglas, dau. of William, 1st Marquess Douglas. His lordship d. in 1695, and was s. by his son,

WILLIAM, 5th Earl of Nithsdale. This nobleman, so

SIR JOHN MAXWELL,* early distinguished himself in arms and chivalry, especially at the celebrated battle of Otterburn, or Chevy Chase, (in 1388,) with James, 2nd Earl of Douglas, husband of Princess Margaret, his mother's first cousin; her brother, Sir James Lindsay, Lord of Buchan and Crawford, (predecessor of the Earls of Crawford, &c.) John Montgomery, of Eglesham, husband of Elizabeth Eglinton, her half-sister, through the Lady Egilda, their joint parent, "Messire Jehan Montgomery;" their son, Sir Alexander Lindsay; the Dunbars, and other exalted kinsmen, &c. He there, according to the coteremporary Froissart, captured Sir Ralph Percy, son of the Earl of Northumberland, and brother of the noted Hotspur, an exploit that drew from John Dunbar, Earl of Murray, (husband of Princess Marjory, dau. of ROBERT II., thus his relative also,) and under whom he served and graduated in chivalry, the characteristic encomium, "Well, Maxwell, hast thou

His lordship m. the Lady WINIFRED HERBERT, youngest dau. of William, 1st Marquess of Powis, and dying at Rome, in 1744, was s. by his only surviving son,

JOHN MAXWELL, styled Earl of Nithsdale, who m. his first cousin, Lady Catharine Stewart, dau. of Charles, 4th Earl of Traquair, (by Lady Mary Maxwell, dau. of Robert, 4th Earl of Nithsdale,) and had an only dau., his successor, at his decease, in 1776,

LADY WINIFRED MAXWELL, who but for the attainder of her grandfather would have inherited the Barony of Herries of Terregles. Her ladyship had m. 17 Oct. 1758, WILLIAM HAGGERSTON CONSTABLE, Esq., (2nd son of Sir Carnaby Haggerston, Bart. of Haggerston Castle, co. Northumberland,) and had three sons and two daus., viz.,

- I. MARMADUKE-WILLIAM, heir to his father and mother.
- II. William, who assumed the surname of MIDDLETON.
- III. Charles, who assumed the surname and arms of STANLEY. He m. 1st, in 1793, Elizabeth, sister and heir of Sir William Stanley, Bart. of Hooton; and 2ndly, in 1800, Mary, dau. of Thomas Macdonald, Esq., by the latter of whom he has had issue, Thomas-Angus Constable, William Constable, Mary-Anne Constable, and Catherine Constable.
- IV. Mary, m. to John-Webb Weston, Esq. of Sutton Place, in Surrey.
- V. Theresa.

Mr. Constable-Maxwell d. in 1797, and her ladyship in 1801. Both were s. by their eldest son,

MARMADUKE-WILLIAM CONSTABLE, Esq., who at the decease of his father became "of Everingham Park, co. York," and at the death of his mother, "of Carlaverock Castle," upon which latter event he assumed, by royal licence, the additional surname of MAXWELL. Mr. Constable-Maxwell m. Theresa-Apollonia, dau. of Edmund Wakeman, Esq. of Beckford, co. Worcester, and had issue, Theresa, m. to the Hon. Charles-Everard Clifford, 2nd son of Charles, 7th Lord Clifford.

Mr. Constable-Maxwell d. in 1819, and was s. by his eldest son, the present WILLIAM CONSTABLE-MAXWELL, Esq. of Everingham and Carlaverock.

* It has been erroneously asserted, that Sir John and his brother, Robert, by a mutual indenture and entail, dated at Dumbarton, 18 Dec. 1400, expressly provided that, failing heirs male of either of their bodies, the whole estate should devolve upon the surviving heir male of the other. The original deed still exists in the Pollok charter-chest; and so far from this, (under authority, also, of their father, the principal party,) merely allocates or partitions certain lands to the sons and their respective heirs at law, containing no entail as pretended, much less to heirs male, who are not even mentioned.

earned thy spurs to-day!"* Froissart explicitly styles the young hero, John Maxwell, clearly refuting the error that substitutes for him the "Lord Maxwell," (unconnected with the Stewarts, Lindsayes, Douglases, &c.) and as the only Maxwell who fought at Otterburn. That lord did not bear the Christian name of John, and from his age and condition could not have so figured, independently of the utter silence of Froissart in his regard, and absence of credible proof, an authority to the contrary. As little is any other John Maxwell then discoverable; while it is strikingly proved, in corroboration, by legal documents in the Pollok charter-chest, that the John in question first "earned his spurs," or occurs as a knight, immediately after the battle of Otterburn, leaving, upon the whole, no doubt of his identity with the hero. This gallant Sir John Maxwell, of Pollok, his father's heir, was succeeded by THOMAS MAXWELL, of Pollok, alive in 1440, father of JOHN MAXWELL, of Pollok, living in 1452, whose male heir, before and after 1500, was another SIR JOHN MAXWELL, of Pollok. The eldest son,

SIR JOHN MAXWELL, of Pollok, was father of John Maxwell, of Pollok, who had predeceased in 1536, leaving issue, by Elizabeth, his wife, dau. of Sir Patrick Houston, of Houston, a dau., Elizabeth, sole heiress of Pollok, who brought the estate to her husband, Sir John, (knighted by Queen MARY, and who fought at Langsyde,) son of the above George Maxwell, of Cowglen, the collateral heir male. They were s. by SIR JOHN MAXWELL, of Pollok, their son and heir, who fell at the battle of Locherby, in 1593. He m. 1st, Margaret, dau. of William Cunningham, of Caprington, by Agnes, dau. of Sir William Hamilton, of Sanquhar; and 2ndly, Marjory, daughter of Sir William Edmonstone, of Duntreath, (of royal descent through Princess Mary, his ancestress, dau. of ROBERT III.,) widow of Mungo Graham, of Urchill, a Montrose cadet; and by the former, besides a dau., Agnes, m. to John Boyle, of Kelburn, (of which marriage, the present Earl of Glasgow, &c.,) he had SIR JOHN MAXWELL, of Pollok, who figured after 1593, and in the reign of CHARLES I. He was also twice married: 1st, to Isabel Campbell, dau. of Hugh, Lord Loudon, ancestor of the Earls of Loudon, &c., by whom he had no male issue, but a dau., Isabel, only, who survived him; and 2ndly, to Grizzel, dau. of John Blair, of Blair, without any offspring. Sir John, to fix and secure the inheritance in the male line, to the exclusion of the female, (as in 1536,) settled his whole estates, heritable and moveable, upon his cousin, GEORGE, afterwards SIR GEORGE MAXWELL, of Auldhous, descended of Thomas, already mentioned, (younger son of Sir John Maxwell, his great great-grandfather, by Lady Elizabeth Stewart, dau. of John, Earl of Lennox, who appears first to have held Auldhous: He, in 1647, on Sir John's death and his descendants, accordingly succeeded, notwithstanding groundless and futile attempts of the then influential Calderwood branch to disturb the succession, that were quite abortive. It is proved by deeds of the crown, the highest authority, that the former took, and were preferred as next heirs male; and Stewart of Pardovan, who lived in the reign of JAMES II. and after, congratulates their existing representative in a noted work, (Collections, &c., on Scotch Church Government), that "ye still enjoy the ancient heritage of your honourable family (that of Pollok) in despite

That valuable writer commemorates likewise the capture, at Otterburn, of Hotspur, by the Lord, or Sieur de Montgomery, the near maternal relative of Sir John Maxwell, as explained, and whose estate, Eglesham, was adjacent to Pollok. In fact, the Lindsayes, Montgomerys, Earl of Moray, and the latter, &c., formed a kindred band of heroes, royally connected and emulous of glory, who naturally joined in the same military enterprise, under their gallant and renowned leader, James, Earl of Douglas, husband of Princess Margaret.

Margaret, wife of Alexander Maxwell, son and heir apparent of Sir William Maxwell, Bart. of Calderwood.

The son and heir,

I. SIR JOHN MAXWELL, of Pollok, was created a Baronet of Nova Scotia 12 April, 1682, with extension of that dignity, in virtue of another patent, 27 March, 1707, to his heirs male whatsoever. This gentleman was nominated one of the privy council for Scotland by King WILLIAM, one of the lords-commissioners of the Exchequer and Treasury, besides representing the county of Renfrew at the convention of the estates in 1689, and in parliaments in 1690-3-5-6, and 1698; he was also appointed a senator of the College of Justice in 1699, and lord justice-clerk in 1702. Sir John m. in 1676, Marian, dau. of Sir James Stewart, of Coltness and Kirkfield, but dying in 1732, without issue, was s. by his cousin and male heir, MENTEATH.

MENTEATH, SIR JAMES-STUART, of Closeburn, co. Dumfries, s. his father as 2nd baronet, in Dec. 1847; m. 17 Dec. 1846, Jane, dau. of Joseph Bailey, Esq. M.P., of Glanusk Park. He claims to be chief of the ancient house of Menteath, but his right to that distinction is disputed by Dalryell of Binna.

Lineage.

The name of Menteath is local, a considerable district in Scotland, through which the river Teith runs, being called the stewardry of Menteath.

WALTER, (3rd son of WALTER, 3rd HIGH-STEWARD of Scotland), m. in 1258, the COUNTESS of MENTETH, and thus acquired that earldom. His name occurs frequently in the transactions of the 13th century; and we find him gallantly distinguished at the battle of Largs, in 1263, when his brother, the high-steward, had the chief command. The earl left two sons, (who both assumed the surname of Menteth), viz.,

ALEXANDER.

John (Sir), governor of Dumbarton Castle, who took an active part in the political convulsions of his time. To him tradition ascribes, whether truly or not is still a matter of historical dispute, the surrender of Sir William Wallace. Sir John's representative is the present Earl of Marr.

The elder son,

ALEXANDER MENTETH, 6th Earl of Menteth, one of the boldest defenders of Scottish independence against EDWARD I., had two sons,

I. ALAN, 7th Earl of Menteth, living in 1396, whose dau. and heir,

MARY, Countess of Menteth, m. Sir John Graham, (executed in 1346), and had a dau.,

MARGARET, who m. Robert Stewart, Duke of Albany, and was mother of MURDOCK, Duke of Albany, who was attainted in 1405.

The second son,

SIR JOHN MENTETH, Knt. of Ruskey, d. before 1339 leaving three sons, viz.,

I. WALTER, his heir.

II. John (Sir, Knt.), of Strathgartney.

III. Alexander (Sir, Knt.)

The eldest son,

SIR WALTER MENTETH, of Ruskey, was slain by the Drummonds in one of those family feuds so frequent in Scottish history. He had two sons,

ALEXANDER, of Ruskey, whose son, Sir Robert Menteth, m. Margaret, dau. of Duncan, Earl of Lennox, and had one son, Murdock, father of a son, Patrick, who d. s. p., and of two daus., the seniority of whom has long been a matter of dispute: Agnes, m. to Sir John Haldane, of Glenagies; and Margaret, to John Napier of Merchiston.

SIR JOHN MENTEATH, living in the reign of DAVID II., from whom he obtained a grant of the sheriffship of Clackmannan, m. Marian, dau. and heir of Sir John Stirling, of Calder, by whom he acquired the Barony of West Kerse, and Alva, and had a son and successor,

The second son,

 dexter chief still borne by the family.) Sir Thomas commanded the forces of Robert de Vere, Duke of Ireland, but was defeated and slain by the combined insurgent lords at Radcot Bridge, near Farringdon, Berks, in 1388. The genealogy, however, and records of this branch of the Molyduring the sacking of that town by the Duke of Guise, in 1558, a chasm, of necessity, occurs in the pedigree.

† His father, observing that he was of a very tender constitution, educated him under a private tutor in his own house, till he was near fifteen years of age, when he was put under the care of Dr. William Paliser, then fellow of Trinity College, where he was admitted the 10th of April, 1671. In this university he soon became distinguished, as well by the probity of his manners, as by the strength of his parts; and having made a remarkable progress in academical learning, and particularly in the new philosophy, as it was then called, he proceeded at the regular time to his degree of Bachelor of Arts. After four years spent in this university, he left it; and in order to complete his education, was sent to London, and admitted into the Middle Temple the 3rd of June, 1675. Here it was not designed that he should make the law his profession, for which reason he applied himself only to the historical part of that study, in which he made a considerable progress. He remained at the Temple three years; but the bent of his genius, as well as inclination, lying strongly to philosophy and mathematics, he spent the greatest part of his time in these inquiries, which, from the extraordinary advances newly made therein by the Royal Society, were then chiefly in vogue. Thus accomplished, he returned to Ireland in June, 1678, and shortly after, being master of an easy fortune, he continued to indulge himself in prosecuting such branches of natural and experimental philosophy as were most agreeable to his fancy; wherein astronomy had the greatest share, and the construction of the telescope engaged his particular attention, being much assisted by Mr. Flamstead. As he was, upon all occasions, very zealous in advancing the reputation and interest of his native country, he formed a design, in imitation of that, which he so much admired at London, of erecting a Philosophical Society at Dublin; and, by the countenance and encouragement of the famous Sir William Petty, who accepted the office of president, they began a weekly meeting about Michaelmas, 1683, when he was appointed their first secretary, which gave him an opportunity of setting his eminent abilities in the fullest light before most of the greatest per-

Hann Donville, Bart., attorney-general of Ireland, and was s. at his decease, in 1698, by his eldest son,

THE RIGHT HON. SAMUEL MOLYNEUX, a lord of the Admiralty, and secretary to GEORGE II. when Prince of Wales. He m. in 1717, Lady Elizabeth-Diana Capel, eldest dau. of Algernon, 2nd Earl of Essex; but dying without issue, in 1727, the estates (at the decease of his widow, in 1759) reverted to his uncle,

I. THOMAS MOLYNEUX, Esq., b. in 1661; physician-general to the army in Ireland, who was created a Baronet of that kingdom, 4 July, 1730. Sir Thomas m. Catherine, dau. of Ralph Howard, Esq. of Shelton, co. Wicklow, (grandfather of the 1st Lord Wicklow,) and had (with four daus., the eldest m. to Sir Richard Wolsley, Bart.; the 2nd, to Dean St. George; the 3rd, to John Gay, Esq. of Gaybrook; and the 4th, to John Garnet, Bishop of Clogher,) two sons, viz.,

DANIEL, his heir.

CAPEL, successor to his brother.

Sir Thomas was s. at his decease, in 1783, by his eldest son, sonages in Ireland; and upon their president's resigning his place of surveyor-general there, the secretary was taken notice of by the Duke of Ormond, then lord-lieutenant of Ireland, and, by his Grace's influence, procured himself to be made joint patentee with Mr. (afterwards Sir) William Robinson, in the post of surveyor-general of his Majesty's buildings and works, and chief engineer. The 10th of February, 1693-4, he read a discourse to the Dublin Society upon the telescopic sights, as adapted to astronomical and other instruments, wherein he showed their convenience and manner of performance from the principles of Dioptrics, and also demonstrated their exactness; being chiefly induced thereto, because Mr. Hooke, in his Animadversions on Hevelius's Uranography, had omitted the chief objection Hevelius makes against these kind of sights, wherein he imagines that the line of collimation therein is no longer than between the eye and the cross-hairs; whereas it is plain, that it is as long as between the object-glass and cross-hairs. The 9th of December, 1684, he communicated to the Royal Society an account of the failure of Sir Wm. Petty's new ship with a double bottom. The 11th of May, 1685, he, intending to go to England, resigned his post, and was succeeded by Mr. George St. Ashe, fellow of Trinity College, Dublin, and professor of mathematics there; and the 9th of December following, they were proposed together as candidates to be elected into the Royal Society; and notice being ordered to be sent to them of their actual election on the 24th of March that year, the same was executed by Mr. Halley, in a letter dated the 27th of that month. Mr. Molyneux had returned home some months from his tour abroad, where he had passed the summer, to improve himself in the art of engineering; for which purpose he had procured an appointment from the Irish government to view the most considerable fortresses in Flanders. Accordingly, he travelled through that country, Holland, and some part of Germany and France; and carrying with him letters of recommendation from Mr. Flamstead to Mr. Cassini, he was introduced to him, and others of the most eminent astronomers, in several places through which he passed, whereof he made afterwards a considerable advantage. In this tour he was accompanied by the Lord Viscount Mountjoy, who was a member of the Dublin Society, and afterwards succeeded Sir William Petty in the presidency. Not long after his return, he sent a letter to the Royal Society, dated at Dublin, the 27th of October, 1685, containing some objections to Dr. Garden's account of the trade winds, which was printed in the Philosophical Transactions. The following year, Mr. Halley having applied to him for an account of the tides at Dublin, wherein it was remarkable, that the high water upon the quarter moons falls out later by half an hour, in respect to the moon's southing, than in the new and full; whereas at London the quarter moons make high water above an hour and a quarter sooner than the new and full; this was also printed in the Philosophical Transactions. At the same time he sent a paper, giving the reason why in a telescope two or three glasses invert objects, and that four erect them again; which was likewise published in their Transactions.

Soon after this came out his Sciothericum Telescopicum, or a new contrivance of adapting a Telescope to an Horizontal Dial, for observing the moment of time by day or night, &c. The book being printed in Dublin, he sent a copy of it to his brother, Mr. Thomas Molyneux, at London, who presented it to the Royal Society, November the 4th; and an account thereof, by Mr. Cluverus, was printed in their Transactions, together with some observations of a solar eclipse; as were also his observations of a lunar eclipse in the subsequent paper. Upon the coming out of Sir Isaac Newton's Principia the following year (1687), Mr. Molyneux was struck with the same astonishment as the rest of the world in general, but declared also that he was not qualified to examine the particulars.—Playfair.

Lineage.

The MONTGOMERYS, who claim descent from the noble house of Eglington, have long been settled in the north of Ireland. They were amongst the soldiers of fortune who, by sustaining the English interest there, obtained large grants of land in the counties of Down, Donegal, Fermanagh, Monaghan, and Cavan. The branch of which we are now about to treat has been resident in Donegal for upwards of two centuries.

ROBERT MONTGOMERY, of Boneyglyn, m. Miss Conyngham, and had several sons. To the eldest, JAMES, he left the family estate, which is now in the possession of his grandson, the Rev. Alexander Montgomery. The second son, ALEXANDER MONTGOMERY, was a captain in the 62nd regiment, and sold his commission at the termination of the war in 1776, when he settled at the Hall, co. Donegal. He m. Mary Dalway, dau. of James Allen, Esq. of Castle Dobbs, co. Antrim, and had issue,

At the breaking out of the war with TIPPOO SULTAN, he raised a corps of 300 horse, and served with the grand combined army under General Sir John Floyd, when he was placed at the head of three battalions of infantry, 5000 cavalry, and 17 pieces of artillery. Upon his subsequent departure for England, general orders were published to the army, both by the governor-general in council and by the government of Madras, highly complimentary of his services. Captain Montgomery was appointed, in 1803, inspecting-field-officer of yeomanry and volunteers in the co. Donegal, with the rank of lieutenant-col. in the army. He served in parliament for the borough of St. Michael's and the borough of Yarmouth, and was created a Baronet 3 Oct. 1808. Sir Henry m. Sarah-Mercer, dau. of Leslie Grove, Esq. of Grove Hall, co. His grace s. his father, as 4th duke, 30 Dec. 1836.

Lineage

According to the Scottish historians, this ducal family is as ancient as the restoration of the monarchy of Scotland, by FERGUS II.; and by the same authority, it derives its origin from the renowned GRAMES, who governed that kingdom during the minority of FERGUS's grandson, EUGENE II., which monarch's reign commenced in the early part of the fifth century. It is certain, however, that no family of North Britain can boast of greater antiquity.

SIR DAVID GRAHAM, Knt. of Old Montrose, co. Forfar, (lands obtained by his father, Sir David Graham, of Kincardine, in exchange for the estate of Cardross, from ROBERT I.), a personage remarkable for patriotism and valour, was one of the Scottish barons employed to negotiate the ransom of DAVID II., made prisoner at the battle of Durham, in 1346; and Sir David's son,

SIR PATRICK GRAHAM, Lord of Dundaff and Kincardine, knight-banneret, became one of the hostages by which the release of the king was eventually accomplished. Sir Patrick m. 1st, Matilda, and had issue, WILLIAM, his successor; Matilda, m. to Sir John Drummond, of ConCraig. He m. 2ndly, Egidia, dau. of Sir John Stewart, of Raiston, brother of ROBERT II., by whom he had four sons; of which Sir Patrick Graham, the eldest, m. Euphame, COUNTESS PALATINE OF STRATHERNE and Countess of Cathness, and in her right became EARL OF STRATHERNE. Sir Patrick was s. by his eldest son,

SIR WILLIAM GRAHAM, of Kincardine, who m. 1st, Mariota, dau. of Sir John Oliphant, of Aberdalgry, by whom he had two sons,

Alexander, who d. before Sir William, leaving two sons,

PATRICK, successor to his grandfather.

Alexander.

John.

He m. 2ndly, the Lady Mary Stewart, 2nd dau. of King ROBERT III., and widow of George, Earl of Angus, and of Sir James Kennedy, of Dunure, by whom (who m. 4thly, Sir William Edmonstone, of Duntreath) he had five sons; of which

Robert was ancestor of the GRAHAMS OF FINTRY, (now represented by ROBERT GRAHAM, Esq.) and of the GRAHAMS OF CLAVERTHOUSE, of whom JOHN, Viscount Dundee, was so distinguished a member.

Patrick, Bishop of St. Andrews, and Papal Nuncio; d. a prisoner in Lochleven Castle, in 1478.

William was progenitor of the GRAHAMS OF GARVOCK, now represented by JAMES GRAHMS, Esq. of Garvoek (see BURKE'S Landed Gentry.) and of the late gallant LORD LYNEDOC.

Harry, Walter, of Wallacstown, ancestor of the Grahams of Knockdolan.

Sir William was s. by his grandson,

PATRICK GRAHAM, of Kincardine, who having been appointed one of the lords of the regency during the minority of JAMES II., was made a lord of parliament about the year 1445, by the title of LORD GRAHAM. His lordship d. in 1465, and was s. by his eldest son,

WILLIAM, 2nd Lord Graham; who had a safe conduct to go into England, or to pass through it into foreign parts, 23 Nov. 1466. His lordship m. Lady Anne Douglas, dau. of George, 4th Earl of Angus, and had two sons,

WILLIAM, his heir.

George, of Callander, who fell at Flodden, leaving by Elizabeth Olphant, his wife, a son, William of Callander, whose son, JOHN GRAHAM, who d. before 1597, was father of LAURENCE GRAHAM, whose dau. and eventual heir, AGNES GRAHAM, m. JOHN BONAR, of Kilgraston, and from this alliance descend the BONARS of Kimmerghame, and the BONARS of Camden. (See BURKE'S Landed Gentry, Supplement; and BURKE'S Heraldic Illustrations.)

Lord Graham was s. at his decease, in 1472, by his elder son,

WILLIAM, 3rd Lord Graham; who was raised to the dignity of Earl of Montrose, 3 March, 1504-5, in consideration of the gallantry he had displayed at the battle of Sauchyburn, in 1488, wherein his royal master, JAMES III., lost his life. His lordship fell, with JAMES IV., at Flodden-Field, 9 Sept. 1513, and was s. by his only son by his 1st wife, Annabella, dau. of John, Lord Drummond,

WILLIAM, 2nd earl. This nobleman was one of the peers to whom John, Duke of Albany, regent of Scotland, in the minority of JAMES V., committed the tuition of the young prince during his own absence in France, in 1523. His lordship m. Jane, dau. of William Keith, 3rd earl-marischal, and had four sons, the youngest of whom, Mungo, was ancestor of the Grahams of Orchill and Killern. The earl was s. at his decease, 24 May, 1571, by his grandson,

JOHN, 3rd earl, (posthumous son of Robert, Lord Graham, who was slain at the battle of Pinkie, 10 Sept. 1547, by Margaret, 3rd dau. of Malcolm, 3rd Lord Fleming, great-chamberlain of Scotland.) This nobleman, on the fall of the Earl of Gowrie, the lord-treasurer, in 1582, obtained the white staff, which he soon after surrendered to Sir Thomas Lyon, of Auldbar. He was appointed chancellor in 1598-9, and held the seals until 1604, when it was required that the chancellor should be a lawyer. His lordship was then constituted viceroy of Scotland, by virtue of which high office he presided in the parliament of Perth, A.D. 1606, when the episcopal government was restored to the church. He m. in 1569, Jean, eldest dau. of David, Lord Drummond, and was s. at his decease, in 1608, by his eldest son,

JOHN, 4th earl; who was appointed president of the council in Scotland in 1626; and dying 24 Nov. in the same year, was s. by his only son by his wife, Lady Margaret Ruthven, eldest dau. of William, 1st Earl of Gowrie,

JAMES, 5th earl, b. in 1613. This nobleman took a distinguished part, in the first instance, on the side of the Covenanters, and afterwards, during the civil wars, on that of his ill-fated sovereign, CHARLES I., and became one of the most illustrious heroes of the age. He was created Marquess of Montrose, 16 May, 1644, and constituted captain, and commander-in-chief of all the forces to be raised in Scotland for the king's service. His lordship immediately put himself at the head of an army, and numerous brilliant successes followed his first movements. In little more than one year he became master of the greater part of North Britain; but being unexpectedly attacked at Philiphaugh, 13 Sept. 1645, by Major-General David Leslie, he experienced a total and most signal defeat, after which his lordship retired into France; but returning to Scotland in 1650, he collected a new army, and being again defeated, was forced to fly the field of battle in disguise. He was made prisoner a few days after at the house of M'Leod, of Assint, by whom he was betrayed to Leslie, whence he was led captive to Edinburgh, and there executed upon a gallows thirty feet high, 21 May, 1650. The night preceding his execution, he wrote with a diamond, in allusion to the sentence he had received, the following lines upon the prison window:—

"Let them bestow on every airth a limb,
Then open all my veins that I may swim
To thee, my Maker, in that crimson lake
Then place my parbilled head upon a stake,
Scatter my ashes, strew them through the air—
Lord, since thou knowest where all these atoms are,
I'm hopeful thou'lt recover once my dust,
And confident thou'lt raise me with the just."

His lordship m. Lady Magdalen Carnegie, dau. of David, 1st Earl of Southesk, and was s. by his only surviving son,

JAMES, 2nd marquess, called "the Good," who was restored to his estates and honours at the return of CHARLES II. This nobleman m. Isabel, 5th dau. of William, 2nd Earl of Morton, and widow of Robert, 1st Earl of Roxburgh, and by her had,

MORAY.

MORAY, EARL OF, (Francis Stuart,) and Baron Doune, in the peerage of Scotland; Baron Stuart, of Castle Stuart, co. Inverness, in the peerage of Great Britain; b. 7 Nov. 1795; s. as 10th earl, at the decease of his father, 12 Jan. 1848.

Lineage

The Earldom of Moray became vested in the crown of Scotland by the forfeiture of ARCHIBALD DOUGLAS, Earl of Moray, in 1455, and it remained dormant until the reign of JAMES IV., who, by letters patent, dated 20 June, 1601, conferred it upon

JAMES STUART, his natural son, by the Hon. Janet Kennedy, the Lord Kennedy's daughter; but this nobleman dying without male issue, in 1544, (his only child, Mary, m. John, master of Buchan,) the earldom again reverted to the crown, and was presented by Queen MARY, in 1548, to George, Earl of Huntly, high-chaucellor of Scotland; her majesty recalling, however, that grant, was graciously pleased to bestow the earldom, 30 Jan. 1601, upon

JAMES STUART, prior of St. Andrews, illegitimate son of JAMES V., by Margaret, dau. of John, Lord Erskine, and natural brother to her majesty. This nobleman played subsequently a conspicuous part as ROBERT of Scotland, when the unhappy queen was compelled to surrender her crown to her infant son, JAMES VI. The Earl of Moray eventually fell a victim to one of his foes, Hamilton of Bothwellhaugh, a man distinguished for a vindictive disposition. Having taken singularly active measures for effecting his purpose and his escape, Hamilton lurked in an empty lodging in a street in Linlithgow, mortally wounded the Earl of Moray by a shot from a carbine as he rode through the town, and, though closely pursued, got in safety to France. Moray fell, 23 Jan. 1570, in the 37th year of his age. He was s. by his eldest dau.,

House of Wesley, or Wellesley,

THE MARQUESS'S MATERNAL FAMILY.

The very eminent family of Wesley, or Wellesley, or, as it was formerly written, de Wellesley, alias Welseley, was founded in Ireland by a gentleman of that name, of an ancient Anglo-Saxon family, who held the honourable post of standard-bearer to King HENRY II.; and having accompanied that monarch into Ireland in 1173, obtained for his military services large grants of land in the counties of Meath and Kildare, a considerable portion of which his descendant still enjoys. From this successful soldier descended

WILLIAM DE WELLESLEY, who appears to have been summoned to parliament as a baron of the realm, by the title of Baron of Noragh, in 1330, and had a grant by patent from EDWARD II. of the custody of the castle of Kildare for life; but that monarch, conferring subsequently the office upon John-Fitz Thomas, Earl of Kildare, together with the county of Kildare, to hold to his heirs male for ever, William de Wellesley was removed, and lost the fee of £20 a year annexed thereunto; to compensate which, however, King EDWARD III. granted him a commission dated at Molyngar, March, 1342, to have the custody of the manor of Demor, then in the crown, from 1 Aug. 1341, with the annual fee of 20 marks. And

SIR JOHN DOUGLAS, of Dalkeith, (the second son,) who so bravely defended the castle of Lochleven against the English in the minority of DAVID II. He m. Agnes Monfode, and had, with other issue,

JAMES, his successor.

Henry (Sir), of Lugton and Lochleven, m. Marjory, dau. of Sir Walter Stewart of Ralstown, and niece of ROBERT II., and was s. by his elder son, SIR WILLIAM, of Lochleven, who m. Margaret, dau. of David Balfour, of Burleigh, and was s. by his grandson, SIR ROBERT, of Lochleven, who m. Margaret, dau. of John, 4th Lord Erskine, mother, by JAMES V., of the KROUNT MORAY, and had issue, 1 WILLIAM, of Lochleven, of whom hereafter, as 7th EARL OF MORTON; 2 Robert, Earl of Buchan; 3 George (Sir), so celebrated as the deliverer of MARY Queen of Scots, from the Castle of Lochleven, 1567.

Sir John Douglas, of Dalkeith, was assassinated by order of Sir David Barclay, of Brechin, in 1350, and Barclay himself was slain on the Shrove Tuesday following, by order of William de Douglas, in revenge of the foul deed. Sir John was s. by his eldest son,

SIR JAMES DOUGLAS, who s. his uncle, the Lord of Liddesdale, in the baronies of Dalkeith and Aberdour, and the remainder of his large possessions, whereby he was placed among the first rank of the greater barons. Sir James was present at the coronation of ROBERT II., at Scone, 30 March, 1371, and his seal is appended to the act of settlement of the crown of Scotland. In 1373, he made a pilgrimage to Canterbury, for which a safe conduct was granted to him as "James de Douglas de Daweth, Chivaler," dated 8 Dec. in that year. Sir James m. Agnes Dunbar, dau. of the Earl of March, and was s. by his son,

JAMES, Lord of Dalkeith, who m. the Princess Elizabeth, dau. of ROBERT III., and had a son and successor,

JAMES, Lord of Dalkeith, who was s. by his son,

JAMES DOUGLAS, Lord of Dalkeith, who was created a peer of parliament, 14 March, 1457-8, by the titles of Lord Aberdour and EARL OF MORTON. His lordship m. Johanna, dau. of JAMES I., and relict of James, 3rd Earl of Angus, and was s. by his only son,

JOHN, 2nd Earl of Morton, who was s. by his elder son, JAMES, 3rd earl; who m. Catherine, natural dau. of JAMES IV., and had three daus.,

MARGARET, m. to James, Earl of Arran, Duke of Chatelherault, REGENT OF SCOTLAND.

BEATRIX, m. to Robert, Lord Maxwell, and had a son, JOHN, Lord Maxwell, of whom hereafter, as 5th Earl of Morton, according to the grant of the crown.

ELIZABETH, m. to James Douglas, (son of Sir George Douglas, of Pittendriech, and brother of the Earl of Angus,) who s. under special settlement to the Earldom of Morton.

His lordship having thus no male issue, made an entail of his estates and honours in favour of Sir Robert Douglas, of Lochleven; but afterwards changed the destination in favour of his son-in-law, James Douglas, and Elizabeth, his wife. In consequence of which, at his lordship's decease, in 1553, the honours devolved upon the said

JAMES DOUGLAS, of Pittendriech, as 4th Earl of Morton, This nobleman was raised to the chancellorship by Queen MARY, and held the seals until March, 1565, when he was forced to fly into England for alleged acquiescence in the murder of David Rizzio. His lordship obtaining soon afterwards a pardon, returned, and was again chancellor under the regency of the Earl of Moray; he was subsequently high-admiral of Scotland; and in 1572, regent of the kingdom. This tide of prosperity ebbing, however, the earl was accused of being accessory to the murder of Lord Darnley, and being arraigned upon that charge, was found guilty, and publicly executed at the Market-Cross of Edinburgh, 2 June, 1581, by the machine called the Maiden, which he had himself introduced into Scotland. His lordship having no issue, made an entail of the earldom in favour of his nephew, the Earl of Angus; and in case of failure of issue of that nobleman, then in favour of William Douglas, of Lochleven. After his lordship's execution and forfeiture, however, the crown immediately conferred the Earldom of Morton upon JOHN, Lord Maxwell, grandson of James, 3rd Earl of Morton, who became thus 5th earl of Morton; but a general act of indemnity passing in 1585, that nobleman was obliged to surrender the earldom to the heir of the entail, in recompense for which the crown created the Earldom of Nithsdale, with precedence from Lord Maxwell's receiving the earldom of Morton in 1581. On this surrender, the earldom of Morton accordingly devolved upon

ARCHIBALD DOUGLAS, 8th Earl of Angus, as 6th Earl of Morton, (Lord Maxwell being regarded as 5th earl;) at whose demise without issue, in 1588, it descended to

SIR WILLIAM DOUGLAS, Knt. of Lochleven, as 7th earl of Morton, (refer to descendants of Sir Henry Douglas, of Lugton and Lochleven, 3rd son of Sir John Douglas, of Dalkeith.) This nobleman m. Lady Agnes Lesly, eldest dau. of George, 4th Earl of Rothes; and dying in 1606, was s. by (the son of his deceased son, Robert, by Jean, only dau. of John, 10th Lord Glamis) his grandson,

WILLIAM, 8th earl, K.G., and lord-high-treasurer of Scotland. This nobleman, before the civil wars broke out, was one of the richest and greatest subjects in the kingdom. Espousing the royal cause zealously, he advanced considerable sums for its support, disposing for that purpose of the noble property of Dalkeith, with other estates, to the value of no less than £100,000 Scots of yearly rent. On that account, the islands of Orkney and Zetland, with the whole jurisdiction and royalties appertaining thereto, were granted to his lordship, 15 June, 1643, by royal charter, redeemable by the crown on payment of £30,000 sterling. He m. Lady Anne Keith, eldest dau. of George, 5th earl-marischal; and dying in 1648, was s. by his eldest son,

ROBERT, 9th earl; who m. Elizabeth, dau. of Sir Edward Villiers, Knt.; and dying in 1649, was s. by his elder son, WILLIAM, 10th earl. During the time that Henry, Earl of Richmond, was secretly laying the foundation of the overthrow of the house of York, he passed concealed from place to place, in order to form an interest among the Welsh, who favoured his cause on account of their respect to his grandfather, Owen Tudor, their countryman. While he was at Mostyn, a party attached to RICHARD III. arrived there to apprehend him. He was then about to dine, but had just time to leap out of a back window, and make his escape through a hole, which to this day is called the King's. Richard ap Howel joined HENRY at the battle of Bosworth, and, after the victory, received from the king, in token of gratitude for his preservation, the belt and sword he wore on that day; he also pressed Richard greatly to follow him to court, but he nobly answered, like the Shunamitish woman, "I dwell among my own people." The sword and belt were preserved at Mostyn until within these few years. Lineage.

This family deduces its descent from Thomas de Moore, one of the knights who accompanied the CONQUEROR into England, and who survived the decisive battle of Hastings, in which he had a principal command. About the middle of the 14th century the ancestors of the earl were seated in the west of England, and in the beginning of Queen ELIZABETH'S reign, they purchased an estate near Larden, co. Salop, whence, for nearly a century, they were designated the Moores of Shropshire. (See BURKE'S Landed Gentry, article "More of Linley.") In the reign of King JAMES I.,

RICHARD MOORE emigrated to Ireland, and fixed his abode at Clonmell. This gentleman left two sons; the elder of whom,

STEPHEN MOORE, Esq., purchased the estate of Kilworth, co. Cork, and settled there. Mr. Moore had the honour of being personally known to King WILLIAM, to whom, upon that prince's arrival in England, he lent £3000, which sum was never refunded; he was, however, constituted by his majesty, governor of the co. This family, which derives its surname from Eggecomb, Egcomb, or Edgcomb, (as it has been variously written in old records,) in the parish of Cheriton-Fitz-Pain, near Crediton, was of great antiquity in the co. of Devon; when, in the reign of EDWARD III.,

WILLIAM DE EGGECOMB marrying Hilaria, dau. and heir of William de Cotehele, of Cotehele, co. Cornwall, removed to that place, and chiefly resided there. He d. in 1380, and was s. by his son,

He subsequently joined Henry Stafford, Duke of Buckingham, against RICHARD III., and had a narrow escape for his life after the defeat and execution of that nobleman. But making his way into Brittany, he enrolled himself under the banner of the EARL OF RICHMOND, and returning to England, participated in the victory of Bosworth, and received the honour of knighthood from his victorious chief on the field of battle. He obtained, likewise, grants of the castle, honour, &c., of Totness, and the manor of Cornworthy, with various other lands in the co. Devon, of which shire he served the office of sheriff in 1487. Sir Richard was subsequently sent into Ireland, "being a person (observes Sir James Ware) of singular prudence," to administer the oaths of allegiance and obedience as well to the nobility, gentry, and prime officers, as to the commonalty of the realm; and brought over with him 500 armed men. He m. in 1845, Mary-Jane-Diana, only dau. of Lord Normanton, and has issue, Alice-Mary-Diana, and Constance-Jane.

Lineage.

"One of the greatest names," says Sir Egerton Brydges, "which will hereafter occur in the annals of British history, or perhaps in the annals of the world, at least as far as the operations of war are concerned, will be NELSON."

His heroic deeds are so numerous, so splendid, and so incalculably important, that in him the biographer is confounded with excess of light. Of some men the great deeds require to be told, because they deserve celebration. The celebrity of NELSON is already so universal, that he who endeavours to add to it incurs the hazard of effecting no other purpose than the tedium of a tale a thousand times told. The three words, NILE, COPENHAGEN, TRAFALGAR, would say more than a hundred pages could relate.* Fully impressed with the truth of this opinion, we will not dare to dim the glory of this immortal seaman by the faint light which our limited space could throw upon his exploits. His deeds—his fame—his death, are bodiless in the recollection of Englishmen; and his name will be cherished by their posterity so long as the shores of England shall be guarded by those WOODEN WALLS which his proud career rendered invincible.

The youngest son of the Rev. Edmund Nelson,

HORATIO NELSON, was born at the Parsonage House, Burnham Thorpe, 29 Sept. 1758, and entered the navy when twelve years of age, on board the RAISONNABLE, man-of-war, then commanded by his maternal uncle, Captain Maurice Suckling; which officer was appointed, in 1775, comptroller of the navy, and young Nelson was soon afterwards nominated to act as 4th lieutenant of the WORCESTER, commanded by Capt. Mark Robinson. On 8 April, 1777, he passed his examination as lieutenant, and the next day received his commission as lieutenant of the Rowstoeppe frigate, from which, at the end of a year's active service, he was appointed 3rd lieutenant of the Bristol, the flag-ship of Admiral Sir Peter Parker. In 1778, at the close of the year, he was a commander in the Badger brig; and in Jan. 1779, POST-CAPTAIN. Thus much for his early promotions. He did not, however, attain the rank of rear-admiral until March, 1797, or before he had fairly won his way by the most gallant and indefatigable services; at this period he was rewarded, too, with the order of the Bath. In addition, we shall briefly state, that his triumph of the NILE was achieved 1 Aug. 1798, and that he was advanced to the peerage in consequence, as BARON NELSON of the NILE, and of Burnham Thorpe, co. Norfolk, a pension of £2000 per annum being attached to the peerage for his own life, and the lives of his two immediate successors. In April, 1801, his lordship appeared before COPENHAGEN, and there, to the fame of a great captain, added the reputation of a prudent negotiator. The next month (23 May, 1801) he was created VISCOUNT NELSON; and soon after gratified (4 Aug. in the same year) by the grant of a collateral peerage to his family, under the title of BARON NELSON of the NILE, and of Hilborough, in Norfolk, with remainder to his family, and the heirs male of his body; and after those, to his sisters, Mrs. Bolton and Mrs. Matcham, in succession, and the heirs male of their bodies. From this period we pass over many a valiant exploit, until the HERO at length won the imperishable wreath of immortality, by the proudest conquest ever achieved, the VICTORY OF TRAFALGAR, (21 Oct. 1805.) He fell, though, at the moment his country was saved—he fell when the naval host of France and Spain was scattered like dust before the whirlwind, and their importance as naval powers for ever annihilated.

* By his wife, ANNE-TURNER, dau. of Sir Charles Turner, bart. of Warham, in Norfolk, by Mary, eldest dau. of Robert Walpole, and sister of Sir Robert Walpole, K.G., 1st Earl of Orford, and of Horatio, Lord Walpole of Wolterton. (See BURKE'S Landed Gentry.)

NEWBURGH, EARL OF, (Francis Eyre,) Viscount Newburgh, of Newburgh, co. Aberdeen; Viscount

* This lady, in a pamphlet published in 1829, claims to be the legitimate eldest dau. of the late Duke and Duchess of Orleans, and says, that she was successively replaced by the present King of the French, in Florence, in 1773, whom her parents, anxious for a male heir, purchased from an inn-keeper in that city. The book created some sensation at the time in Paris.

Lineage.

This ducal house stands, next to the blood royal, at the head of the peerage of England, and is the chief of the family of Howard, of whose origin Dugdale thus speaks: "There are those, perhaps, who will expect that I should ascend much higher in manifesting the greatness of this honourable and large-spreading family of Howard, in regard I do not make any mention thereof above the time of EDWARD I., some supposing that their common ancestor, in the Saxon time, took his original appellation from an eminent office, or command; others, afterwards, from the name of a place. And some have not stuck to derive him from the famous Hereward, the chief conductor of those forces which so stoutly defended the Isle of Ely, for a time, against WILLIAM the Conqueror and his army. But to this last I cannot well assent, by reason that Ingulph, then abbot of Crouland, who was his contemporary, affirms that Hereward left no other issue than an heir female, named Turfrida, wife to Hugh de Evermue, Lord of Deping, co. Lincoln. I shall, therefore, after much fruitless search to satisfy myself, as well as others, on this point, begin with William Howard, a learned and reverend judge of the Court of Common Pleas, for a great part of the reign of EDWARD I. and beginning of that of EDWARD II."

This WILLIAM HOWARD, who was chief-justice of the Common Pleas from 1297 to 1308, had large possessions in Wigehale, co. Norfolk. He m. twice: 1st, Alice, dau. and heir of Sir Edward Fitton, Knt., by whom he had two sons,

JOHN, his successor. William.

And 2ndly, Alice, dau. of Sir Robert Ufford, Knt., but there was no issue of that marriage. Sir William was s. by his elder son,

SIR JOHN HOWARD, Knt. of Wigehall, one of the gentlemen of the bedchamber to EDWARD I. He m. Joan, sister of Richard de Cornwall; and dying in 1331, was s. by his son,

SIR JOHN HOWARD, Knt., who was constituted in the 9th of EDWARD III., admiral and captain of the king's navy in the north; and in the following year had an assignment of £153 7s. 6d. for the wages of himself, with his men at arms, &c., in that service. And the same year, having affairs to transact beyond the seas, the king granted him his protection, dated 24 April, 1337, to be in force till the 1st of Aug. following. Sir John was sheriff of Norfolk in 1345. He m. Alice, dau. of Sir Robert de Boys, and sister and heir of Sir Robert de Boys, of Furseld, in Norfolk, by which alliance the whole inheritance of the Norfs was came into the Howard family. Sir John Howard was s. by his grandson,

SIR JOHN HOWARD, (only surviving son of Sir Robert Howard, by Margery, dau. of Robert, Lord Scales,) who was sheriff of the cos. of Essex and Hertford in the reigns of HENRY IV. and HENRY V. He m. 1st, Margaret, dau. and heir of Sir John Plaiz, of Tofte, in Norfolk, and of Stansted, Mountfichet, in Essex, by whom he had issue, Margaret, m. 1st, to Constantine Clifton, of Buckingham Castle, Norfolk; and 2ndly, to Sir George Talbot.

Sir John m. 2ndly, Alice, dau. and heir of Sir William Tending, of Tending, and had two other sons,

Margaret, elder dau. of Thomas de Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk, by Elizabeth, his wife, dau. and co-heir of Richard Fitzalan, Earl of Arundel, and cousin and co-heir of John Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk. By this marriage the inheritance of those great families became, eventually, in part vested in the house of Howard; and by Isabel, the other co-heir, partly in the house of Berkeley. (The above-mentioned Thomas de Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk, was son and heir of John, Lord Mowbray, by Elizabeth, dau. and heir of John, Lord Seagrave, and of Margaret Plantagenet, his wife, dau. and heir of Thomas Plantagenet, surnamed de Brotherton, Earl of Norfolk, and marshal of England, the eldest son of EDWARD I., by his 2nd wife, Margaret, dau. of PHILIP THE HARDY, King of France. This Thomas de Brotherton, Earl of Norfolk, was invested with the office of earl-marshal, 12 Feb. 1385-6, being the first so designated, his predecessors having been simply styled marshals.) Sir Robert Howard had by this illustrious alliance, two daughters, Margaret, m. to William Daniel, Baron of Rathwire, in Ireland.

Catharine, m. (2nd wife) to Edward Nevil, Lord of Abergavenny.

And an only son,

SIR JOHN HOWARD, an eminent Yorkist, not only on account of his princely birth (maternally) and magnificent fortune, but from the stations of high trust which at different periods had devolved upon him. After distinguishing himself very early in life in the French wars of HENRY VI., Sir John was constituted by EDWARD IV., in 1461, constable of the castle of Norwich, appointed sheriff of the cos. of Norfolk and Suffolk, and granted some of the forfeited manors of James Butler, Earl of Wiltshire, in England, and of Ormonde, in Ireland. In 1468, being treasurer of the king's household, Sir John Howard obtained a grant of the whole benefit that should accrue to the king by coinage of money in the city and Tower of London, or elsewhere in the realm of England, so long as he should continue in that office. In 1470, when he was summoned to parliament under the title of Lord Howard, he was made captain-general of all the king's forces at sea for resisting the attempts of the Lancastrians, then rallying under Nevil, Earl of Warwick, the Duke of Clarence, and others. In 1471, his lordship was constituted deputy-governor of Calais and the marshes adjacent; and his summons to parliament as a baron continued until he was created Earl Marshal of England, and Duke of Norfolk, 28 June, 1483; when his son and heir, Thomas Howard, was created Earl of Surrey. The duke had been previously invested with the insignia of the Garter. As earl-marshal, his grace was empowered (in the king's presence or absence) to bear a golden staff, tipped at each end with black, the upper part thereof to be adorned with the royal arms, and the lower with those of his own family; and for the better support of the dignity of the said office, he obtained a grant to himself, and his heirs for ever, of £20 annually, payable half-yearly, out of the fee-farm rent of Ipswich, in Suffolk. His grace was subsequently constituted lord-admiral of England, Ireland, and Aquitaine, for life, and obtained grants of divers manors and lordships in the cos. of Suffolk, Kent, Cambridge, Cornwall, Somerset, and Wilts. But he did not long enjoy these great possessions; for the next year, being with RICHARD, at Bosworth Field, he fell in leading the van of that prince's army. His grace was warned by some of his friends to refrain from attending his sovereign to the field; and the night previous to the battle, the following distich was set upon his gate:—

"Jockey of Norfolk, be not too bold,
For Dickon, thy master, is bought and sold."

Yet he would not desert his royal master; but as he had faithfully lived under him, so he manfully died by his side. His grace m. 1st, Catherine, dau. of William, Lord Mollines, by whom he had issue,

THOMAS, Lord Surrey.

Anne, m. to Sir Edmund Gorges, of Wraxhall, Somersetshire, K.B.

Isabel, m. to Sir Robert Mortimer.

Catherine, m. to John Bouchier, Lord Berners.

The duke was attainted by parliament, 7 Nov. 1485, when all his honours became forfeited; while his only son,

THOMAS, Earl of Surrey, being also attainted, lost his earldom. His lordship was, however, after suffering an imprisonment of three years in the Tower, restored in 1489; and created Duke of Norfolk and earl-marshal, 1 Feb. 1514, installed a knight of the Garter, and nominated lord-treasurer. This nobleman was a distinguished military commander, and celebrated, as Lord Surrey, for the victory he had achieved over the Scottish monarch at Flodden, in which that prince (JAMES IV.) fell, 9 Sept. 1513. His grace m. 1st, Elizabeth, dau. and heir of Sir Frederick Tilney, Knt. of Ashwell Thorpe, co. Norfolk, and widow of Sir Henry Bouchier, K.B., son of John, Lord Berners, by whom he had, with other issue,

His grace m. 1st, the Princess Anne, 3rd dau. of EDWARD IV., but had no surviving issue; and 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. of Edward Stafford, Duke of Buckingham, by whom he had,

HENRY, K.G., Earl of Surrey, b. in 1517, one of the brightest ornaments of the house of Howard, whose iniquitous execution was the last tyrannical act of HENRY VIII. This distinguished statesman, poet, and warrior, Sir Egerton Brydges thus characterizes,— "Excellent in arts and in arms; a man of learning, a genius, and a hero; of a generous temper and a refined heart; he united all the gallantry and unbroken spirit of a rude age with all the elegance and grace of a polished era. With a splendour of descent, in possession of the highest honours and abundant wealth, he relaxed not his efforts to deserve distinction by his personal worth. Conspicuous in the rough exercises of tilts and tournaments, and commanding armies with skill and bravery in expeditions against the Scots under his father, he found time, at a period when our literature was rude and barbarous, to cultivate his mind with all the exquisite spirit of the models of Greece and Rome, to catch the excellences of the revived muses of Italy, and to produce in his own language, composition, which, in simplicity, perspicuity, graceful ornaments, and just and natural thought, exhibited a shining contrast with the works of his predecessors, and an example which his successors long attempted in vain to follow." The Earl of Surrey underwent the penalty of his unjust sentence during the lifetime of his father, (whom the death of the king preserved from the same fate), 31 Jan. 1547, leaving issue by his wife, Frances, dau. of John Vere, 15th Earl of Oxford,

THOMAS, successor to his grandfather.

PHILIP, however, inherited, in right of his mother, the feudal Earldom of Arundel, as owner of Arundel Castle, in Sussex, with the Baronies of Fitz-Alan, Clun, Oswaldestrie, and Maltravers, and was summoned to parliament as Earl of Arundel; but being attainted in 1590, he died a prisoner in the Tower in 1596, leaving by his wife, Anne, sister and co-heir of Thomas, Lord Dacre of Gillesland, an only son,

Lineage.

In the reign of King DAVID II., Walter Maule granted to John Bekinhard, a charter of the lands of Carnegie, in the Barony of Panmure, co. Forfar, and thence the said John assumed the surname of "CARNEGIE." From him descended

SIR ROBERT CARNEGIE, of Kinnaird, who obtained very considerable territorial grants between the years 1535 and 1563. Sir Robert was one of the senators of the College of Justice, and ambassador to France in 1551. He d. Jan. 1565, leaving a large family; the second son of which.

He was, according to Archbishop Spottiswood, "a wise, peaceable, and sober man, in good credit and estimation with the king, and taken into the privy-council for his skill and knowledge in civil affairs." In 1595, he was constituted one of the eight commissioners of the Treasury, called OCTAVIANS; and dying in 1598, left by his first wife, mentioned above, two daus.; and by a second, Eupheme, dau. of Sir John Wemyss, of Wemyss, four sons and three daus., of the two elder of whom we have more immediately to treat:

DAVID (the elder), his successor, was created Lord Carnegie, of Kinnaird, 14 April, 1616, in which year he was constituted one of the extraordinary lords of Session; and elevated to the Earldom of Southesk, 23 June, 1633; honours which expired under the attainder of James, 5th earl, who was involved in the insurrection of 1715; at whose decease, in 1729, the representation of his branch of the family devolved upon Sir James Carnegie, Bart. of Pitcarrow. Lineage.

We cannot more appropriately introduce the lineage of the Percys, than by the following extract from a periodical work of great ability and influence—the Percys, whose nobility dates as remotely as the sovereignty of Normandy, and whose renown, coeval with its nobility, has flourished in every age, and co-existed with every generation since. "Not more famous in arms than distinguished for its alliances," says the writer to whom we refer, "the house of Percy stands preeminent for the number and rank of the families which are represented by the present DUKE OF NORTHUMBERLAND; whose banner, consequently, exhibits an assemblage of nearly nine hundred armorial ensigns; among which, are those of King HENRY VII., of several younger branches of the Blood Royal, of the Sovereign Houses of France, Castile, Leon, and Scotland, and of the Ducal Houses of Normandy and Brittany, forming a galaxy of heraldic honours altogether unparalleled."

The house of Percy was founded in England by one of the Norman chieftains (William de Percy) who accompanied WILLIAM the Conqueror, in 1066, and it derives the name from the village of Percy, near Villedieu. The family of Percy, of Normandy, deduced its pedigree from Geoffrey, (son of Mainfred, a Danish chieftain,) who assisted Rollo, in 912, in subjugating that principality, and acquired considerable possessions there.

WILLIAM DE PERCY being high in favour with the victorious duke, obtained, according to Madox, in his "Baronia Anglica," a barony of thirty knights' fees from that monarch in his new dominions, and thus became a feudal lord of the realm from the Conquest. This Lord William de Percy, who was distinguished amongst his contemporaries by the addition of Alsgernons, (William with the Whiskers,) whence his posterity have constantly borne the name of Algernon, restored, or rather refounded, the famous abbey of St. Hilda, in Yorkshire, of which his brother, Serlo de Percy, became 1st prior. Accompanying, however, Duke Robert in the first crusade, 1096, he died at Mountjoy, near Jerusalem, the celebrated eminence whence the pilgrims of the cross first viewed the holy city, leaving four sons and two daus. by his wife, Emma de Port, a lady of Saxon descent, whose lands were amongst those bestowed upon him by the CONQUEROR, and, according to an ancient writer, "he wedded his hys that was very heire to them, in discharging of his conscience." His lordship was s. in his feudal rights and possessions by his eldest son,

ALAN DE PERCY, 2nd baron, surnamed the GREAT ALAN; who m. Emma, dau. of Gilbert de Gaunt, (which Gilbert was son of Baldwin, Earl of Flanders, and nephew of Queen MAUD, wife of WILLIAM the Conqueror;) and was s. by his eldest son,

WILLIAM DE PERCY, 3rd baron; at whose decease the eldest branch of the first race of Percys, from Normandy, became extinct in the male line, and their great inheritance devolved upon his lordship's two daus., (by Alice de Tunbridge, dau. of Richard, Earl of Clare, who was usually styled De Tunbridge, from his castle of that name,) the LADIES MAUD and AGNES DE PERCY, successively;

MAUDE DE PERCY, the elder, was 1st wife of William de Newburgh, Earl of Warwick, by whom (who d. in the Holy Land, A.D. 1184) she had no issue. Her ladyship d. in 1204-6, and then the whole possessions of the Percys descended to the family of her sister,

AGNES DE PERCY, who m. Josceline, of Lovain, brother of Queen ADELICIA, 2nd wife of HENRY I., and son of Godfrey Barbatous, Duke of Lower Lorraine, and Count of Brabant, who was descended from the Emperor CHARLEMAGNE. Her ladyship would only consent, however, to this great alliance upon condition that Josceline should adopt either the surname or arms of Percy; the former of which he accordingly assumed, and retained his own paternal coat, in order to perpetuate his claim to the principality of his father, should the elder line of the reigning duke, at any period, become extinct. The matter is thus stated in the great old pedigree, at Sion House: "The ancient arms of Hainault this Lord Jocelyn, retained, and gave his children the surname of Perci." Of this illustrious alliance there were several children; of whom,

1. HENRY DE PERCY, the eldest son, who appears to have died before his mother, m. Isabel, dau. of Adam de Brus, Lord of Skelton, with whom he had the manor of Levington, for which he and his heirs were to repair to Skelton Castle, every Christmas-day, and to lead the lady of the castle from her chamber to the chapel to mass, and thence to her chamber again, and after dining with her, to depart. This Henry left two sons,
 1 WILLIAM, of whom presently.

2 Henry, ancestor of the Percys of Hessel, Sussex.

II. RICHARD DE PERCY, the youngest son of Agnes and Josceline, got possession of the entire property of his aunt, Maud, Countess of Warwick, and even of a great proportion of that of his mother, and retained the same during the principal part of his life; at length, subsequently to infinite litigation, it was settled between him and his nephew, William de Percy, to whom the inheritance belonged, after a solemn hearing before the king in person, 6 July, 1234, (16th HENRY III.;) that the estates should be divided into equal portions between the parties during Richard's life; and that after his death, all the ancient patrimony of the Percy family should devolve upon his nephew aforesaid, a small reservation having been made for Richard's son and heir, Henry de Percy. This Richard de Percy continued for the whole of his life at the head of the family, and enjoyed all its hereditary rights. He was one of those powerful feudal lords, who took up arms in 1215, against King JOHN, and having a principal hand in extorting the GREAT CHARTER of English freedom, was chosen one of the twenty-five guardians to see the MAGNA CHARTA duly observed. He d. about 1244, and then his nephew,

WILLIAM DE PERCY, came into full possession of all those rights and properties which had been usurped at the decease of his mother, but did not live long to enjoy them. He d. in 1246, and was s. by his son, (by his 2nd wife, Elena, dau. of Ingelmar de Ballou, by whom he acquired, in dower, Dalton, afterwards called Dalton Percy, in the Bishopric of Durham.)

HENRY DE PERCY, who m. Alianore, dau. of John Plantagenet, Earl of Warren and Surrey; and dying in 1273, was s. by his only surviving son,

HENRY DE PERCY, 9th feudal lord, who was summoned to parliament from 6 Feb. 1299, (27th EDWARD I.;) to 29 July, 1315, 8th EDWARD II.) This nobleman obtained, 19 Nov. 1309, from Anthony Beck, Bishop of Durham, by purchase, a grant of the Barony of Alnwick, co. Northumberland. His lordship was one of the great barons who subscribed, in 1301, the celebrated letter to Pope BONIFACE VIII. upon the attempt of his holiness to interpose in the affairs of the kingdom, intimating "That their king was not to answer in judgment, for any rights of the crown of England, before any tribunal under heaven, &c., and that, by the help of God, they would resolutely, and with all their force, maintain against all men." He d. in 1315, and was s. by his eldest son,

HENRY DE PERCY, 2nd Lord Percy of Alnwick. This nobleman had a grant from the crown, in the 2nd of EDWARD III., of the reversion of the Barony and castle of Warkworth, &c. He had summons to parliament from 1322 to the time of his death, 26 Feb. 1381-2, when he was s. by his eldest son, (by Itonia, dau. of Robert, Lord Clifford.)

HENRY DE PERCY, 3rd Lord Percy of Alnwick; who, in the lifetime of his father, had participated in the glories of Cressy, (26 Aug. 1346.) His lordship m. 1st, in her ladyship's 14th year, the Lady Mary Plantagenet, dau. of Henry, Earl of Lancaster, which Henry was son of Edmund, Earl of Lancaster, Leicester, &c., 2nd son of HENRY III.: by this marriage his lordship had two sons,

HENRY, his successor,

Thomas, created, in 1397, Earl of Worcester, K.G., a very eminent warrior and statesman in the reigns of EDWARD III., RICHARD II., and HENRY IV. (See BURKE's Extinct and Dormant Peerage.)

His lordship m. 2ndly, Joan, dau. and heir of John de Orbey, of Lincolnshire, one of the barons in the reign of Edward III., by whom he left one dau., Mary, who m. John Lord Ros of Hamelake, but d. s. p. in 1395. He d. 17 June, 1368, and was s. by his elder son,

HENRY, 4th Lord Percy of Alnwick; a distinguished military commander in the reign of EDWARD III., who assisting as marshal of England at the coronation of RICHARD II., was advanced on the same day, 16 July, 1377, to the Earldom of Northumberland, with remainder to his heirs general; and, like a barony in fee, transmissible, it would appear, to female as well as male heirs. His lordship m. 1st, Margaret, dau. of Ralph, Lord Nevill of Raby, and had issue,

I. HENRY (Sir), the renowned Hotspur, so celebrated by all our historians. He fought the famous battle of CRYSTOUBURN, near the Cheviot Hills, in Northumberland, (Chevy Chase,) where James, Earl of Douglas, was slain, and himself and his brother, Sir Ralph Percy, made prisoners. He m. Philippa, dau. of Edward Mortimer, Earl of March, by Philippa, dau. and heir of Lionel Plantagenet, Duke of Clarence, and falling at the battle of Shrewsbury, in 1403, left issue,

1 HENRY, who inherited as 2nd Earl of Northumberland.

2 Elizabeth, m. 1st, to John, Lord Clifford; and 2ndly, to Ralph, Earl of Westmorland.

II. Thomas, (Sir), m. Elizabeth, elder dau. and co-heir of David Strabolgi, Earl of Atholl, by whom (who m. 2ndly, Sir Henry Scrope) he had issue,

Henry, who left two daus., viz.,

Elizabeth, m. 1st, to Thomas, Lord Burgh; and 2ndly, to Sir William Lucy.

Margaret, m. 1st, to Lord Grey of Codnor; and 2ndly, to Richard, Earl of Oxford.

III. Ralph (Sir), m. Philippa, the other dau. and co-heir of David Strabolgi, Earl of Atholl; but d. s. p.

IV. Alan.

V. Margaret.

The earl m. 2ndly, MAUD, sister and heir of Anthony, Lord Lucy, which Anthony settled upon his lordship and his heirs the honour and Castle of Cocker-mouth, with other great estates, on condition that the arms of his sister should be for ever quartered with those of the Percys. In the 7th year of the same monarch, the earl having been elected one of the knights of the Garter, the king bestowed upon him the robes of the order out of the royal wardrobe. In some years afterwards, however, being proclaimed a traitor, and his lands declared forfeited by King RICHARD, his lordship, in conjunction with his son, Sir Henry Percy, and Henry, Duke of Lancaster, effected the dethronement of that monarch, and placed the crown upon the head of Henry, Duke of Lancaster, under the title of HENRY IV. Again dissatisfied with the government, the Duke is charged with concerting the Rebellion, in which his son, HOTSPUR, and his brother, the Earl of Worcester, engaged, in 1403, for transferring the sceptre to Mortimer, Earl of March, then a boy. Of these two eminent persons Sir Henry Percy fell, performing prodigies of valour, at Battle-field, near Shrewsbury, 21 July, 1403; and Thomas Percy, Earl of Worcester, was beheaded, after the battle at Shrewsbury. The Earl of Northumberland fell subsequently, (29 Feb. 1407-8,) in arms against the king, at Bramham Moor, near Haleswood, when his honours became forfeited under an attainder, but were restored, in 1414, to his grandson,

HENRY Percy, 2nd Earl of Northumberland; who m. Lady Eleanor Nevill, dau. of Ralph, 1st Earl of Westmorland, and Joan de Beaufort, dau. of John of Gaunt, and aunt of HENRY V. Of this nobleman and his countess and their issue, the following account is given in a very curious MS. preserved in the British Museum, and there said to be extracted " Ex Registro Monasterij de Whitbye."

" Henry Percy, the son of Sir Henry Percy that was slayne at Shrewesbery, and of Elizabeth, the dau. of the Erie of Marche, after the death of his father and graunt-syre, was exiled into Scotland in the time of HENRY V., by the labour of Johanne, the Countess of Westmorland, (whose dau., Alianor, he wedded in coming into England,) he recovered the king's grace and the co. of Northumberland, so was the 2nd Earl of Northumberland. And of this Alianor, his wife, he begat IX sonnes and III daus., whose names be Johanne, that is buried at Whitbye; Thomas (created) Lord Egremont; Katherne Gray, of Ruthyn, (wife of Edmund, Lord Grey, afterwards Earl of Kent;) Sir Raffe Percy; William Percy, a Bysbopp; Richard Percy; John, that died without issue; another John, (called by Vincent, in his MS. Baronage, at the Heralds'-office, John Percy, senior, of Warkworth;) George Percy, clerk; Henry, that dyed without issue; besides the eldest sonne and successor, Henry, 3rd Erie of Northumberland." His lordship, who was lord-high-constable, fell at the battle of St. Albans, 23 May, 1455, under the banner of HENRY VI., and was s. by his eldest surviving son,

HENRY, 3rd earl; who m. Eleanor, dau. and sole heir of Richard Poynings, who d. in the lifetime of his father, Lord Poynings; by which marriage the Baronies of Poynings, Fitzpayne, and Bryan, came into the family of Percy; and Sir Henry Percy was summoned to parliament, while his father, the Earl of Northumberland, yet lived, (29th HENRY VI.,) as Baron Poynings. His lordship fell, leading the van of Lancastrians, sword in hand, at the battle of Towton, 29 March, 1461, and his honours became subsequently forfeited by an act of attainder, but were restored to his only son,

HENRY, 4th earl, K.G.; who was confined in the Tower of London from the death of his father until the 27th Oct. 1469; when, being brought before EDWARD IV., at his palace of Westminster, he subscribed an oath of allegiance, and was restored to his freedom and dignity, although the reversal of his father's attainder does not appear upon the rolls of parliament. The king had previously created John, Lord Montague, Earl of Northumberland; but upon the re-establishment of the rightful earl, Lord Montague was created Marquess of Montague. This Henry, 4th earl, fell a victim, in 1489, to the avarice of HENRY VII. In that year, parliament having granted the king a subsidy for carrying on the war in Bretagne, the Earl of Northumberland, as lord-lieut. of his county, was empowered to enforce the same; but the tax causing a general commotion, his lordship wrote to inform the king of the discontent, and praying an abatement; to which HENRY peremptorily replied, "that not a penny should be abated;" which message being delivered incautiously by the earl to the populace, who had assembled to complain of their grievances, they broke into his house, (supposing him to be the promoter of their sufferings,) Cocklodge, in Yorkshire, and murdered his lordship and some of his attendants, 28 April, 1489. The earl m. Maud, dau. of Herbert, 1st Earl of Pembroke, and was s. by his eldest son,

THOMAS PERCY, son of the attainted Sir Thomas Percy, to the degree of a baron, by the titles of Baron Percy of Cockermouth, Baron Poynings, Lucy, Bryan, and Fitz-Payne; and on the day following, his lordship was created Earl of Northumberland, with remainder to Henry Percy, his brother, &c. HENRY, 9th earl, K.G. This nobleman, after every effort to involve him in the Gunpowder Plot proved in vain, was "cast (says Osborne) into the Star-chamber," by which he was sentenced to a fine of £30,000, with imprisonment in the Tower during his majesty's pleasure, and actually suffered several years' incarceration. His lordship m. Dorothy, sister of Queen ELIZABETH's favourite, Essex, and widow of Sir Thomas Perrot, Knt., and had (with two daus., Dorothy, m. to Robert Sidney, 2nd Earl of Leicester, by whom she was mother of Algernon Sidney, the patriot; and Lucy, m. to James Hay, Earl of Carlisle) two sons, ALGERNON and HENRY. His lordship dying 5 Nov. 1632, was s. by his eldest surviving son, ALGERNON, 10th earl, K.G.; who had been summoned to parliament, in the lifetime of his father, as Baron Percy, and took the seat of the ancient barony of 1299. This nobleman took an active part, during the civil wars, against CHARLES I., but was entirely free of any participation in his murder. He subsequently promoted the Restoration. His lordship d. 13 Oct. 1668, and was s. by his only son, (by Lady Elizabeth Howard, 2nd dau. of Theophilus, 2nd Earl of Suffolk), decease, 21 May, 1670, an only dau., ELIZABETH, of whom presently, but no male issue, when the honours created by Queen MARY ceased. CHARLES II. created, in 1674 his 3rd natural son, by the Duchess of Cleveland, George Fitzroy, Earl, and afterwards Duke of Northumberland; but that nobleman dying without issue, in 1716, those dignities expired. In the meantime, one James Percy, a trunk-maker, claimed the honours of the Percy family, and so annoyed the House of Lords, that their lordships at last sentenced him to wear a paper in Westminster Hall, declaring him "A false and impudent pretender to the Earldom of Northumberland."

LADY ELIZABETH PERCY, only surviving child and heir of Joceline, 11th and last earl, s. to the baronial honours of her ancestors, and was, in her own right, Baroness Percy, Poynings, Fitzpayne, Bryan, and Latimer. Her ladyship m. 1st, when only fourteen years of age, (1679,) Henry Cavendish, Earl of Ogle, (son and heir of Henry, Duke of Newcastle,) who assumed the name of Percy; but his lordship d. without issue, 1 Nov. 1680, and her ladyship m. in 1682, (3rdly, it is stated, but she appears to have been only contracted to Thomas Thynne, Esq., of Longleat, who was assassinated, 12 Feb. 1681-2,) Charles Scymour, Duke of Somerset, who also assumed, by preliminary engagement, the surname and arms of Percy, but from that stipulation he was released when her grace attained majority. By this marriage the duchess had thirteen children; the eldest surviving of whom,

ALGERNON SEYMOUR, was summoned to parliament, in 1723, on the death of his mother, as BARON PERCY. His lordship inherited the Dukedom of Somerset in 1741; and was created Baron Warkworth, of Warkworth Castle, co. Northumberland, and Earl of Northumberland, 2 Oct. 1749, with remainder to Family of Smithson.

The family of Smithson derives its surname from an ancient town in the North Riding of Yorkshire, called Smithton or Smethton, in which district the Smithsons have possessed considerable estates since the Conquest.

In Domesday-Book the name is written Smethton, and MALGRUM DE SMETHTON held a manor there.

Lineage.

This family paternally derives from the ancient Milesian sept of O'Reilly, princes of Lower Brefney, (see BURKE'S Landed Gentry.) Of the O'Reillys, Gough, in his additions to Camden, makes the following observations:—"Whence Mr. Camden received his information that the O'Reillys derive from the Ridleys does not concern us to inquire. Spencer falls into a similar error; he derives the Mac Mahons from the Veres of England, because the one in Latin, and the other in Irish, have some affinity in sound to the name of bour pig in those languages; but both are equally the impositions of etymology. Before the English got footing in Ireland, the O'Reillys of Cavan, the Mac Mahons of Monagan, the Mac Guires of Fermanagh, the O'Donels of Donegal, with other chieftains in their own septs, were tributaries to O'Nial, of Ter Oen. Such of the descendants of those chieftains as I have conversed with seem rather to glory in their Milesian extraction. When Hugh O'Nial threw off his allegiance to Queen ELIZABETH, he also threw off the title of Earl of Tyrone, saying, that 'he would rather be O'Nial of Ulster, than King of Spain.'"

Ogilvie, Sir William, of Barras, co. Kincardine; s. as 7th baronet, on the decease of the late baronet, 9 March, 1837.

Lineage.

This is a junior branch of the family of Ogilvie of Innerquhartry (baronets), springing from

possessor of the Barony of Inberquhart; from whom we pass to his lineal descendant,

I. GEORGE OGILVIE, Esq., who m. Elizabeth, dau. of the Hon. John Douglas, of Barras, co. Kincardine, which estate he afterwards purchased from his brother-in-law, Sir John Douglas. During the civil wars, Mr. Ogilvie, who had been for many years an officer in the king's service, was nominated lieutenant-governor of the fort and castle of Dunottar, wherein the regalia of Scotland had been deposited; and although obliged, after a protracted siege, to surrender to the arms of the Usurper, Captain Ogilvie contrived, nevertheless, to preserve those invaluable insignia of royalty in security until the restoration of the monarchy. The regalia were removed from the castle prior to its surrender by Mrs. Grainger, the wife of Mr. James Grainger, Minister of Kinness, who passed through the besieging army, attended by a servant, with a bundle of flax upon her back, in which lay concealed the crown, sword, and sceptre of Scotland. After the Restoration, Captain Ogilvie delivered up those valuable ensigns to the earl-marshal, and was created, in consideration of his fidelity and sufferings, a Baronet of Nova Scotia, 5 March, 1661, obtaining a warrant, at the same time, to the Lord-Lyon, to matriculate his coat of arms in the Lyon register conformable to the blazon therein stated; in which he was allowed to bear a crowned thistle, the royal badge of Scotland, with the motto—"Præclarum regi et regno servitium." Their son, William de Valence, baron by tenure, was created Earl of Pembroke by HENRY III. His son, Aymer de Valence, was baron, by writ, 1299, and afterwards Earl of Pembroke. The barony and earldom at his decease, without issue, became extinct in 1323. David le Brun, or Browne Fitz-Stephen, mentioned as cousin of Hugh, aforesaid, and great-grandson of Geoffrey, went to Ireland with Prince JOHN, in 1185; and to his descendant in the fourth degree, (kinsman of Aymer, Earl of Pembroke, and of Maurice le Brun, baron by writ in 1313,) Sir David le Brun or Browne, large possessions in Leinster and Connaught were granted after the battles of Athenry in 1316, and Dundalk in 1318, in which he was engaged under Richard, 4th Lord Athenry, and his brother, Sir John Birmingham, 1st Earl of Louth. He and his son, Aymer, built the castle of Carra Browne, in Oranmore, near Galway; but the family settled at Bally David, near Athenry, and did not finally remove to Carra Browne till about 1442.

He was pillaged of a considerable part of his estates, under CROMWELL, and forced to remove to Mayo, where the family have since resided at Castle Macgarrett. His sons, DOMINICK and STEPHEN, each held a regt. in King JAMES's service at Anghrim. Col. Browne's son, Geoffrey, planted most extensively at Castle Macgarrett, in 1694, and lived sixty years after. He m. a dau. of Lord Wallcourt's ancestor. His son,

Lineage.

The antiquity of this family is indisputable; although its origin is not clearly established. The surname, BUTLERS, is not however dubious, being derived from the chief-buterage of Ireland, conferred by HENRY II. upon THEOBALD WALTER, in 1177, who had accompanied him into that kingdom in 1171. This Theobald was eldest son of Herveus Walter, (one of the companions of the CONQUEROR,) by Maud de Valois, and brother of Hubert, Archbishop of Canterbury in 1193, (translated from the see of Salisbury while a prisoner in the Holy Land,) and subsequently chancellor, chief-justice, and treasurer of England. Theobald Walter having returned to England, afterwards accompanied Prince JOHN into Ireland, anno 1185. He was possessed of the baronies of Upper Ormond, Lower Ormond, and numerous other territories; and dying in 1206, was s. by his only son, (by his wife, Maud, dau. and heir of Robert Vavasour, a great Baron of Yorkshire.) THEOBALD, who first assumed the surname of Le Botlier or Butler, in 1221, and was appointed lord-justice of Ireland in 1247. He m. Joan, eldest sister and co-heir of John de Marisco, a considerable baron in Ireland, to whose estates in that kingdom and in England his posterity succeeded; and dying in 1248, was s. by his eldest son,

THEOBALD LE BOTILLER, who m. Margery, eldest dau. of Richard de Burgo, (ancestor of the Lords Clanricarde,) by whom he acquired a considerable accession of landed property, and was s. by his son,

THEOBALD, 4th butler; who sat as a baron in the parliament of Ireland, and assisted EDWARD I. in his wars in Scotland. He m. Joan, eldest dau. of John Fitz-Geoffry, Lord of Kirtling and Baron of Berkhamstead, lord-justice of Ireland, and youngest son of the famous Geoffry Fitz-piers, Earl of Essex and lord-justiciary of England, by whom he had a numerous family. This Lord Theobald, who obtained a grant from EDWARD I. of the prize of wines in Ireland, * d. in 1285, and was s. by his eldest son,

THEOBALD, 5th butler; who sat in parliament as a baron, his name appearing 5th upon the roll. He d. was. in 1299, and was s. in his barony and estates by his brother,

EDMOND. This feudal lord received the honour of knighthood in London, in 1309. In 1312 he was appointed lord-deputy of Ireland; in 1314, chief-governor, under the title of lord-justice; and on the 1st Sept. 1315, created Earl of Carrick-Mac-Griffyne. His lordship m. in 1302, Joan, dau. of John, 1st Earl of Kildare, by whom, with two daus., he left three sons,

JAMES, his successor.

The earl going on a pilgrimage into Spain, to the shrine of St. James of Compostella, died after his return to London, 13 Sept. 1321, and was s. by his eldest son,

JAMES, 2nd earl of Carrick and 7th butler. This nobleman was a minor at the decease of his father, but obtained licence in four years after, for the sum of 2000 marks, to marry whomsoever he pleased; and he accordingly m. Eleanor, 2nd dau. of Humphrey de Bohun, 4th Earl of Hereford and Essex, High-Constable of England, by Elizabeth, dau. of EDWARD I.; and was created, in consequence of this alliance, by EDWARD III., 2 Nov. 1328, Earl of Ormonde. His lordship had a renewed grant of the prize of wines, (which had been resumed by the crown,) and a grant of the regalities, liberties, &c., of the co. Tipperary, with the rights of a palatine in that county for life. He d. 6 Jan. 1378, and was s. by his elder son,

JAMES, 3rd Earl of Ormonde, called the Noble Earl, on account of being great-grandson of EDWARD I. In 1359 and 1360, his lordship was appointed lord-justice of Ireland; and dying in 1382, was s. by his son, (by Elizabeth, dau. of Sir John Darcy, lord-justice of Ireland,)

JAMES, 3rd earl; who by building and making the castle of Gowran his usual residence, was commonly called Earl of Gowran. His lordship purchased, in 1391, the castle of Kilkenny, from the heirs of Sir Hugh le de Spencer, Earl of Gloucester, (an edifice erected in the beginning of the 13th century, by William, earl-marshal,) which he made his chief place of abode, and which has ever since been so considered by the head of the family. In 1392, 1401, and 1404, his lordship was lord-justice of Ireland. He m. Anne, dau. of John, Lord Welles, and had issue,

JAMES, his successor.

Richard (Sir), of Folestown, co. Kilkenny, m. Catharine, dau. of Gildas O'Reilly, lord of the co. of Cavan, and was s. by his son, Edmund (Sir), who was s. by his son, James (Sir), m. Sabina, dau. of Donald Reagh Mac Murrough Cavenagh, prince of his sept; and dying in 1487, left, with other issue, PIERCE, of whom hereafter, as 8th Earl of Ormonde.

His lordship d. in 1405, and was s. by his elder son,

JAMES, 4th earl; who was called the White Earl, and esteemed for his learning. His lordship prevailed upon HENRY V. to create a king-of-arms in Ireland, by the title of Ireland king-of-arms, (altered by HENRY VIII. to Ulster king-of-arms,) and he gave lands for ever to the Herald's college. He was lord-justice of Ireland in 1407, and again in 1440, in which latter year he had a grant of the temporalities of the See of Cashel for ten years after the death of the Archbishop, Richard O'Hedian. His lordship m. 1st, Joan, dau. of Gerald, 5th Earl of Kildare, by whom he had three sons, successive earls, and two daus.; and 2ndly, in

* This grant was purchased, in 1810, from Walter, Marquess of Ormonde, for £216,000; and the contract received the sanction of parliament by an act passed 31 May, 1811.

1433, Elizabeth, dau. of William Beauchamp, Lord Bergavenny, and widow of John, Lord Grey of Wilton. He d. in 1452, and was s. by his eldest son,

JAMES, 5th earl; who was created by HENRY VI., 8 July, 1449, for his fidelity to the Lancastrian interest, Earl of Wiltshire, in the peerage of England. In 1451 he was made lord-deputy of Ireland; and the next year, succeeding his father in the title of ORMONDE, was appointed lord-leutenant for ten years. In 1455, he was constituted LORD-HIGH-TREASURER OF ENGLAND, and afterwards made a knight of the Garter. Falling into the hands of the Yorkists, after the battle of Towton, his lordship was beheaded at Newcastle 1 May, 1461, when the Earldom of Wiltshire expired, as would that of Ormonde, the earl's brother and heir being also at the battle of Towton, and in consequence attainted, had not EDWARD IV. restored him in blood, and so enabled him to succeed as

JOHN, 6th Earl of Ormonde. This nobleman was considered one of the first gentlemen of the age in which he lived; and EDWARD IV. is reported to have said, "that if good breeding and liberal qualities were lost in the world, they might be all found in the Earl of Ormonde." He was complete master of the languages of Europe, and was sent ambassador to its principal courts. He d. in 1478, in the Holy Land, having, in a fit of devotion, made a visit to Jerusalem, and was s. by his brother,

THOMAS, 7th earl; who was also attainted, but restored by HENRY VII.'s first parliament, in November, 1485, and the statutes made at Westminster, 1st EDWARD IV., which declared him and his brothers traitors, were utterly abrogated. He was afterwards sworn of the privy council of England, and had summons to parliament, 14 Nov. 1495, as Lord Rochford. He d. in 1515, leaving two daus., (by his wife, Anne, dau. and heir of Sir Richard Hankford,) who inherited the English estates, namely,

ANNE, m. to Sir James St. Leger.

MARGARET, m. to Sir William Boleyn, K.B., by whom she had, THOMAS (Sir), who was created, 18 June, 1525, Baron and Viscount Rochford, and 29 Nov. 1527, Earl of Wiltshire and Ormonde, all in the peerage of England. His lordship m. Elizabeth, dau. of Thomas, Duke of Norfolk, and had,

GEORGE BOLEYNE, Lord Rochford, beheaded 17 May, 1536.

ANNE BOLEYNE, m. 25 Jan. 1533, to HENRY VIII., by whom she had an only dau., ELIZABETH, who ascended the British throne.

Mary Boleyn, m. to William Cary, and had, WILLIAM, Lord Hunsden.

At the decease of Earl Thomas, in 1515, the peerage passed to his kinsman,

SIR PIERCE BUTLER, as 8th Earl of Ormonde, (refer to second son of 3rd earl,) but this nobleman was obliged to relinquish it to Thomas, Viscount Rochford, (see descendants of 7th earl.) In consideration of this abandonment, however, Sir Pierce was created by HENRY VIII., 23 Feb. 1527-8, Earl of Ossory. Soon after this, he returned to Ireland, where he was chosen lord-deputy by the council, and proceeding through the city on horseback to St. Mary's Abbey, was there sworn into office. Thomas Boleyn, Earl of Ormonde, dying s. p. in 1537, the king restored the Earl of Ossory to his original title of Ormonde. He m. Margaret, second dau. of Gerald, 8th Earl of Kildare, and had, with other issue, JAMES, his successor; Richard, created Viscount Mountgarret; and Thomas, who left an only dau., Margaret, m. 1st, to Rory O'More, of Leix; and 2ndly, to Sir Maurice Fitzgerald, of Lackagh. His lordship d. in 1539, and was s. by his eldest son,

His lordship m. Joan, dau. and heir of James, 11th Earl of Desmond, and had seven sons, viz., 1 THOMAS, Viscount Thurles; 2 Edmund (Sir), of Roscrea and Clougrenan; 3 John, of Kilcash, m. Catherine, dau. of Cormac M'Carty Reagh, and left, in 1570, (with two daus., of whom the eldest, Eleanor, m. Thomas Prendergast, Esq. of Newcastle Prendergast, ancestor of the Viscounts Gort, and the youngest m. Sir Oliver Shortall, Knt.,) WALTER, who s. as 11th EARL OF ORMONDE; 4 Walter, of Moyallife; 5 James; 6 Edward, of Cloughinech, co. Tipperary; 7 Pierce, of Grantstown, in Tipperary, and of Leix Abbey. His lordship d. 17 Oct. 1546, (by poison administered at a supper at Ely House, Holborn,) and was s. by his son,

THOMAS, 10th Earl of Ormonde and 3rd Earl of Ossory, called from the darkness of his complexion, the "Black

Earl." This nobleman was the first of his family who conformed to the church of England. He was educated at the court of England, and stood high in the estimation of Queen ELIZABETH, by whom, in 1559, he was constituted lord-treasurer of Ireland. His lordship d. in 1614, and leaving (by his 2nd countess, Elizabeth, dau. of John, 2nd lord Sheffield) one surviving child only, ELIZABETH, who, through the influence of King JAMES, was m. to Sir Richard Preston, Baron Dingwall in Scotland, and Earl of Desmond in Ireland, the honours devolved upon

The duke d. 21 July, 1688, and was s. by his grandson,

JAMES, 2nd duke, who inherited the Scottish BARONY OF DINGWALL from his grandmother. This nobleman was appointed a lord of the bedchamber in 1685; and serving in the army, participated in the victory over the unfortunate Duke of Monmouth, at Sedgemoor. He was afterwards, however, one of the first to join the standard of the Prince of Orange, and when that prince ascended the throne, his grace obtained the Garter, and was constituted HIGH-CONSTABLE OF ENGLAND for the coronation. He attended WILLIAM into Ireland, was at the Boyne, and subsequently entertained his majesty most sumptuously at his castle in Kilkenny. In 1693, he was at the battle of Landen, where he received several wounds, and had a horse shot under him. In 1703, his grace was constituted, by Queen ANNE, COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF of the land forces sent against France and Spain, when he destroyed the French fleet, sunk the Spanish galleons in the harbour of Vigo, and took the fort of Redondella; for which important services he received the thanks of both houses of parliament. In 1711, he was declared CAPTAIN-GENERAL and COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF of the land forces in Great Britain, or which were, or should be employed abroad in conjunction with the troops of the allies; which post he held till the treaty of Utrecht, in 1713; in which year he was made warden of the cinque ports, and constable of Dover Castle. But in two years afterwards, (GEORGE I. having in the interim succeeded to the throne,) his grace was impeached (21 June, 1715) of high-treason, and having retired into France, was attainted, when his estates became forfeited, his (English) honours EXTINGUISHED, and parliament passed an act, which annulled the regalities and liberties of the county palatine of Tipperary, vested his lands in the crown, and proclaimed a reward of £10,000 for his apprehension, should he attempt to land in Ireland. But the same parliament passed also an act (24 June, 1721) to enable the duke's brother, the Earl of Arran, to purchase the estate, which his lordship did accordingly. This great but unfortunate nobleman m. 1st, Anne, dau. of Laurence, Earl of Rochester, but that lady d. issueless. The duke resided in his exile chiefly at Avignon, he had a pension from the court of Spain of 2000 pistoles, and d. 16 Nov. 1745, when his remains were brought into England, 22 May, 1746, and deposited in the family vault, in HENRY VII.'s chapel, Westminster Abbey. At this period, it was supposed that the duke's honours were all forfeited under the act of attainder passed by the English parliament; but it was subsequently decided, that no proceeding of the English legislature could affect Irish dignities. According to that decision, his grace's brother,

CHARLES, Earl of Arran, was really 14th Earl of Ormonde and 3rd Duke and Marquess; but his lordship never enjoyed, assumed, or was aware of possessing those dignities He m. Elizabeth, 4th and youngest dau. of Thomas, Lord Crew of Stene, but had no issue. The family of Otway, of which the Otways of Castle Otway are a branch, is of great antiquity, and was for several centuries seated at Middleton, and Ingmire Hall, in Westmorland. It appears from Whitaker's "History of Richmondshire," vol. ii. p. 285, that Bolton (Lonsdale) and some of the adjacent villages belonged to Sir John Otway, Knt. of Ingmire, in the parish of Sedbergh, who is memorable for his activity in the restoration of CHARLES II. He devised his estate, of which these villages were part, to Dr. Charles Otway, a distinguished civilian, and Braithwaite Otway, Esq., one of whom sold it in the beginning of the last century to Oliver Marton, Esq.

In the same work, vol. ii. p. 358, speaking of the parish church of Sedbergh, Whitaker mentions two inscriptions as being placed therein to the family of Otway: one erected in 1744, to the memory of Braithwaite Otway; the other, to that of Sir John Otway, who d. in 1693, in the 74th year of his age. Wharton, in memory of Mary, his wife.

OXFORD, EARL OF, (Alfred Harley,) Earl of Mortimer, and Baron Harley, of Wigmore, co. Hereford; b. 10 Jan. 1809; s. his father, as 6th earl, 28 Dec. 1848; m. 17 Jan. 1831, Miss Eliza Nugent.

Lineage.

The family of Harley can be traced to a period antecedent to the Conquest; and its station was then so eminent, that the great house of Harlai, in France, deduces its origin from the Harleys of England.

SIR ROBERT DE HARLEY (eldest son of Sir Richard de Harley, Knt, who d. about the 13th of EDWARD II.) m. Margaret, eldest dau. and co-heir (with her sister, Elizabeth, wife of Sir Richard de Cornwall, son of Richard, Earl of Cornwall, King of the Romans, brother of King HENRY III.) of Sir Bryan de Brampton; by which marriage he acquired a great estate and the seat of Brampton Castle, which has continued ever since the chief residence of his descendants. His great-grandson,

SIR JOHN HARLEY, of Brampton Castle, received the honour of knighthood from EDWARD IV., on the field of battle, at Gaston, near Tewkesbury, 9 May, 1471; and was sheriff of Shropshire in the 21st year of the same monarch. From him lineally descended,

THOMAS HARLEY, Esq.* of Brampton Castle, who was born about the year 1543, and obtained a grant from King JAMES I. of the honour and castle of Wigmore, co. Hereford. He m. Margaret, dau. of Sir Andrew Corbet, Knt. of Morton Corbet; and dying in 1631, was s. by his only surviving son,

SIR ROBERT HARLEY, K.B., M.P. for the co. Hereford. This gentleman had a grant, 12 Sept. 1626, of the office and offices of master and worker of moneys to be coined in the Tower of London during his life, with a salary of £4000 a-year; but, after the murder of the king, refusing to coin with any other than the die of the deceased monarch, he was removed by parliament. Sir Robert m. 1st, Anne, dau. of Charles Barrett, Esq. of Belhouse, Essex; 2ndly, Mary, dau. of Sir Francis Newport; by neither of whom, however, had he any issue to survive; and 3rdly, Brilliana, (so christened from Brill, of which her father was governor at the time of her ladyship's birth,) dau. of Edward, Viscount Conway, by Dorothy, dau. of Sir John Tracy, of Todington, co. Gloucester, and sister to Mary, wife of the celebrated General Sir Horace Vere, Lord Vere of Tilbury, (by which alliance the Harleys became connected with the Veres, Earls of Oxford, Hulles's, Earls of Clare, and other ancient families.) Lady Brilliana Harley was celebrated for her gallant defence of Brampton Castle, during the civil wars, when invested, in 1643, by the rebels, who she forced to raise the siege after seven weeks of unavailing hostility. Her ladyship dying, however, in the October following, the besiegers returned to the castle, which, after a second gallant resistance, being forced to surrender, was burnt to the ground. Sir Robert Harley d. 6 Nov. 1666, and was s. by his eldest son,

COL. SIR EDWARD HARLEY, member for the co. Hereford in the parliament which restored CHARLES II., by whom he was appointed governor of Dunkirk. Sir Edward m. 1st, in 1654, Mary, dau. of Sir William Burton, of Parkgate, by whom he had four daus.; and 2ndly, Abigail, dau. of Nathaniel Stephens, Esq. of Essington, co. Gloucester, by whom he had (with other issue),

ROBERT, of whom presently, as Earl of Oxford.

Edward, of Eyewood, co. Hereford, M.P., m. Sarah, 3rd dau. of Thomas Foley, Esq. of Whitley, co. Worcester, and had,

EDWARD, who s. to the Earldom of Oxford.

Robert, M.P., recorder of Leominster; d. unm. in 1774.

Abigail, m. to the Hon. John Verney, master of the Rolls.

Col. Sir Edward Harley d. 8 Dec. 1700, and was s. by his eldest son, ROBERT HARLEY, Esq., b. 5 Dec. 1661. This gentleman was first returned to parliament for Tregony, in Cornwall; and afterwards, in 1690, for the town of Radnor, which he continued to represent so long as he remained a commoner. On the 11th of Feb. 1700-1, Mr. Harley was elected speaker of the House of Commons. In 1704, he was sworn of the privy council and constituted one of the principal secretaries of state, filling the speaker's chair at the same time. In 1710, he was appointed chancellor of the Exchequer.

* Jane, sister of this Thomas Harley, of Brampton, m. Roger Mynors, Esq. of Treago, ancestor of PETER RICKARDS-MYNORS, Esq., now of Treago.

* This lady m. 2ndly, Richard Coote, Earl of Bellamont.

About this period, Mr. Harley had a miraculous escape from assassination, having been stabbed with a pen-knife by the Marquess of Guiscard, then under examination before a committee of the privy council at Whitehall. On the 24th May, 1711, the right hon. gentleman was elevated to the peerage, by the titles of Baron Harley, of Wigmore, co. Hereford, EARL OF OXFORD, and EARL OF MORTIMER, with remainder, in default of male issue, to the heirs male of his grandfather, Sir Robert Harley, knight of the Bath; and 29 May, in the same year, his lordship was constituted lord-high-treasurer of England. The earl m. 1st, Elizabeth, dau. of Thomas Foley, Esq. of Whitley Court, co. Worcester, by whom he had,

EDWARD, his successor.
Abigail, m. to George, Earl of Kinnoull; and d. in 1750.
Elizabeth, m. to Peregrine Hyde, Duke of Leeds.

His lordship m. 2ndly, Sarah, dau. of Thomas Middleton, Esq., but had no other issue. On the 10th of June, 1715, Lord Oxford was impeached by the Commons of high treason, and was committed to the Tower by the House of Lords, where he suffered imprisonment until 1 July, 1717, when he was acquitted, after a public trial by his peers. His memory is celebrated by Pope in the following lines:—

“A soul supreme, in each hard instance tried,
Above all pain, all anger, and all pride,
The rage of power, the blast of public breath,
The lust of lucre, and the dread of death.”

The earl d. 21 May, 1724, and was s. by his only son,

EDWARD, 2nd earl. This nobleman devoted himself much to literature, and the country is indebted to him for the celebrated collection so well known as the Harleian Miscellany, purchased by parliament from the countess, in 1754, after the earl's decease, and deposited in the British Museum. His lordship m. 31 Oct. 1713, Lady Henrietta Cavendish Holles, only dau. and heir of John Holles, last Duke of Newcastle of that family, (the dignity expired in 1713,) by whom he had an only dau. and heir, Margaret-Cavendish, who m. in 1734, William, 2nd Duke of Portland. The earl dying thus male issueless, 16 June, 1741, the honours devolved, according to the reversatory clause in the patent, upon his first-cousin,

PAKINGTON, SIR JOHN-SOMERSET, Bart., M.P., of Westwood Park, co. Worcester, so created in July, 1846; d. 20 Feb. 1799; m. 1st, 14 Aug. 1822, Mary, only child of Moreton Aglionby Slaney, Esq. of Shifnal, and by her (who d. 6 Jan. 1843) has issue, one son,

JOHN-SLANEY, d. 13 July, 1826; m. 4 July, 1849, Lady Diana Boyle, dau. of the late Earl of Glasgow.

He m. 2ndly, 4 June, 1844, Augusta, dau. of the Rt. Rev. George Murray, D.D., Bishop of Rochester, by whom (who d. 23 Feb. 1848) he had issue, Herbert-Perrott-Murray, d. 13 Feb. 1848.
Edith, d. and d. 7 April, 1845.

He m. 3rdly, 5 June, 1851, Augusta, dau. of the late T.-C. de Crespigny, Esq., and widow of Col. Davies, M.P., of Elmley Park. Sir John, who is son of William Russell, Esq. of Powick Court, by Elizabeth, his wife, dau. of Sir Herbert-Perrott Pakington, Bart., assumed his present surname as heir to his uncle, the late Sir John Pakington, Bart. Linzage.

The antiquity of this family is beyond dispute: it is manifest from the foundation of the monastery at Kenilworth that it flourished in the time of HENRY I., and it appears to have assumed the surname from one of the Pakingtons, in Staffordshire, Warwickshire, or Leicestershire, for in each of those counties we meet with lordships so designated, the proprietors of which wrote themselves anciently de Pakington.*

ROBERT PAKINGTON, living in the reign of HENRY IV., was father of

JOHN PAKINGTON, recited in an office found before Robert Russel, escheator of the county of Warwick, 14 HENRY VI. He left a son of his own name,

* PAKINGTON, afterwards PARINGTON, Staffordshire, within two miles of Tame, was held of the bishop, by Vetchel, in the 20th year of WILLIAM the Conqueror; in HENRY III.'s time, by Robert de Pakington; and in the 24th of EDWARD I., David de Pakington held it of the bishop by the fourth part of a knight's fee. Richard de Pakington married one of the sisters and co-heirs of Robert de Kally, Lord of Freseley, in Warwickshire, who lived temp. HENRY II., and the late baronets had in their possession two ancient deeds, without date, judged to be at least two centuries and a half old: one, of Robert Wittington, clerk, signed and sealed in the presence of Peter Wyke, Hugh Pakington, and Alexander Abbotot, knights; the other, attested by Richard Spechell and Hugh Pakington, knights.

JOHN PAKINGTON, Esq., who m. Elizabeth, daughter and heir of Thomas Washbourne, Esq. of Stamford, in the county of Worcester, and had three sons, namely,

- i. JOHN, of the Inner Temple, constituted chirographer of the Common Pleas in the 24th of HENRY VII., during life, and being learned in the law was elected, 11 HENRY VIII., Lent reader, and in the 20th of the same reign, treasurer of the society of the Inner Temple, in which year he had a grant from the king, "that he the said John Pakington, for the time to come, shall have full liberty, during his life, to wear his hat in his presence, and his successors, or of any other persons whatsoever, and not to be uncovered on any occasion or cause whatsoever, against his will and good liking, also that he shall not be appointed, called, or compelled to take the order of knighthood, or degree, state or order of a baron of the Exchequer, sergeant-at-law, or any office or incumbence thereto relating." In 1532, he was called to be sergeant-at-law, for which the king gave him a special discharge for taking the said degree, and having been appointed a justice of North Wales, was, in 1535, commissioned to conclude and compound all forfeitures, offences, fines, and sums of money due to the king or his father, HENRY VII. In 1542, he had a patent for justice of Brecknock, Glamorgan, and Radnor, in South Wales, during life, having a grant of all the manors belonging to the monastery of Westwood, in the county of Worcester, and soon after received the honour of knighthood. The many other honours conferred upon him are too numerous to be recorded here. At the time of his death, 1560, he was seised of thirty-one manors, and of other lands that he had purchased of seventy different persons, as appears by a large book concerning his estate, which was preserved amongst the family testimonials. Sir John Pakington's wife was Anne, widow of Tychbourne, and of the family of Rolle.* She d. 22 August, 1563. His fortune was divided between his daughters,

URSULA, m. to Sir John Scudamore, Knt.

BRIDGET, m. to Sir John Lyttleton, Knt. of Frankley, and his two younger brothers, Robert and Humphrey.

ii. ROBERT.

- iii. Humphrey, a merchant of London, who had the manor of Chaddesley Corbet settled upon him, by his brother, Sir John, and left an only son,

John, of Harvington, in Worcestershire, who m. Elizabeth Newport, and had a son and heir, Humphrey Pakington, Esq. of Chaddesley Corbet, who m. Abigail Sacheverell, and left two daughters, his co-heirs, viz.

MARY, m. to Sir John Yate, Bart.
Anne, m. to Sir Henry Audley, Knt.

The second son,

ROBERT PAKINGTON, Esq., was one of the members of parliament for the city of London, temp. HENRY VIII., and was barbarously murdered in the street, in 1537. He m. Catherine, one of the co-heirs of Sir John Baldwin, lord chief justice of the Common Pleas, and his wife, daughter of William Dormer, Esq. of Wycombe, Bucks, (by this alliance the manor of Allesbury, with other considerable lands, came into the family,) and had issue,

THOMAS, his heir.

Elizabeth, m. John Lane, Esq., and afterwards Alderman Sir Richard Mallory, Knt. of London.

Anne, m. to Richard Cupper, Esq. of Glympton, in the county of Oxford.

Margaret, m. 1st, to Benedict Lee, Esq. of Burston, in Bucks, and 2ndly, to Sir Thomas Scot, of Yorkshire.

The son and heir,

SIR THOMAS PAKINGTON, was in ward to the lord privy seal, in the 37th HENRY VIII., when Catherine, his mother, then twenty-three years of age, was found one of the co-heirs of Sir John Baldwin, (who d. 22 December, in the same year.) He received the honour of knighthood from Queen MARY, and on the death of his uncle, the said Sir John Baldwin, succeeded to a great estate. He was sheriff of Worcestershire in the 3rd of ELIZABETH, and dying 2 June, 1571, at Bath-place, Holborn, was conveyed in great pomp to Allesbury, the officers of the College of Arms attending, and buried in the parish church there. His wife, who survived him, and m. 2ndly, Thomas Tashmarsh, Esq.,

* Another authority states, that Sir John Pakington, Knt. m. Anne, daughter of Henry Decres, late sheriff of London, and widow of Robert Fairthwayte, of London, merchant-taylor, and that she was buried at St. Buttolph's, 22nd Aug. 1563, but does not mention her as widow of Tychbourne; by her will, however, she bequeaths to her son, Nicholas Tychbourne, and his children, the greater part of her estate, plate, jewels, &c.

was the daughter of Sir Thomas Kitson, Knt. of Hengrave, in Suffolk, and by her had surviving issue,

JOHN (Sir), his heir.

Mary, m. to Sir Walter Long, Knt. of Wrazall and Draycot, in Wiltshire, M.P. for that county.

Catherine, m. 1st, to John Davis, Esq., of the same county; 2ndly, to Sir Jasper Moore; and 3dly, to Sir — Mompesson, of Teddington.

Margaret, m. to Thomas Litchfield, Esq.

He was s. by his son,

SIR JOHN PAKINGTON, K.B., one of the privy council, and an especial favourite of Queen ELIZABETH. The queen first took notice of Sir John in her progress to Worcester, when she invited him to attend her court, where he lived at his own expense, in great splendour and reputation, with an equipage not inferior to some of the highest officers, although he had no greater honour than Knight of the Bath, which was conferred upon him in the lifetime of his father. He was remarkable for his stature and comely person, and had distinguished himself so much by his manly exercises, that he was called "Lusty Pakington." Having by his expensive life contracted great debts, he took the wise resolution of retiring into the country, and said he would feed on bread and verjuice until he had made up his extravagancies; which coming to the royal ear, the queen gave him a grant of a gentleman's estate in Suffolk, worth eight or nine hundred pounds a-year, besides goods and chattels, which had escheated to the crown; but after he had been in the country to take possession, he could not behold the miseries of the distressed family without remorse and compassion; and the melancholy spectacle of the unhappy mother and her children wrought so effectually upon his fine feelings, that he repaired to court immediately, and humbly besought the queen to excuse him from enriching himself by such means, and did not leave the presence until he had obtained his request, which involved the restoration of the property to the rightful owner. Soon after this he left the court, but not before he had liquidated all his debts; and then, with great reputation and honour, he commenced his journey into the country, being handsomely attended by servants and tenants to the number of sixty, well mounted and appointed, who came purposely from his estates to pay him this compliment, and waited at the court gates while he was taking leave of the queen. After his settlement in the country, ELIZABETH granted him, for sixty years, (in the 25th of her reign,) for his good and faithful services, several lordships, manors, and lands, which had fallen to the crown, in no less than seventeen counties. He was also constituted lieutenant and custos rotularum of Worcestershire, and appointed bow-bearer of Malvern Chase, one of the best in England, which he retained until he had finished his noble park at Hampton Lovet, and then, that chase being at too great a distance from his dwelling, he obtained the queen's leave to dispose of it. He was in ELIZABETH'S favour to the end, as appears as well from other evidence, as from a grant she made him for eight years, (in the 40th year of her reign, he paying into the Exchequer forty pounds per annum,) that no one should import into the kingdom, or make any starch, but by his permission. By his affability and obliging deportment, he acquired the good opinion of his equals and inferiors; and by his courage and resolution, on occasions requiring the exercise of those attributes, he became formidable to persons in power: a memorable instance of this occurred when he executed the office of sheriff for his county. The lord chief baron Periam having committed a gentleman at the assizes, Sir John, sitting in his sheriff's seat, called to him to stay, telling the judge he would answer for his forthcoming; neither could he be dissuaded, by all the menaces he received from the bench, from adhering to this resolution, boldly alleging in his defence, that the gentleman was his prisoner, and he, as sheriff, was accountable for him. Sir John Pakington m. the daughter of Mr. Humphry Smith, of Cheapside, Queen ELIZABETH'S silkman, of an ancient family in Leicestershire. The lady was the widow of Benedict Barnham, Esq., an alderman of London, "who left her very rich, and that consideration, together with her youth and beauty, made it impossible for her to escape the addresses even of the greatest persons about the court; but Sir John was the only happy man who knew how to gain her, being recommended by his worthy friend, Mr. William Seabright, town-clerk of London, who had purchased the manor of Besford, in Worcestershire. This lady had by her first husband four daughters, who were very young when they lost their father, and therefore needed a faithful friend to manage and improve their fortunes, in which capacity Sir John acquitted himself so honourably, that they had ten thousand pounds each for portion, an immense sum in those days.* Sir John Pakington had issue, one son and two daughters, viz.,

JOHN, his heir.

Anne, m. 1st, to Sir Humphrey Ferrers, Knt. of Tamworth; and 2ndly, to Philip, first Earl of Chesterfield.

Mary, m. to Sir Robert Brooke, of Nacton, in Suffolk, master of the ceremonies to King JAMES I.

This great man, who lived to see his children's children, departed this life at his house at Westwood,† in the seventy-seventh year of his age, in January, 1625.‡ His widow m. 3rdly, Lord Kilmurry; and 4thly, Thomas, Earl of Kelly. His son and heir,

I. SIR JOHN PAKINGTON, Bart. of Allesbury, in the co. Bucks, created 22 June, 1620, m. Frances, daughter of Sir John Ferrers, Knt. of Tamworth, and by that lady, who m. 2ndly, Alexander Lesley, Earl of Leven, had (with a daughter, who m. 1st, Colonel Washington, and 2ndly, Samuel Sandys, Esq. of Ombersley, in the county of Worcester) an only son, JOHN. Sir John resided at Allesbury, and was elected to parliament by that borough, in the 21st of JAMES I., but died at the early age of twenty-four, in Oct. 1624, previously to his father, and was s. by his son,

II. SIR JOHN PAKINGTON, who at the decease of his grandfather inherited the estates of the family, and resided subsequently at Westwood. He was then in his fifth year, and under the guardianship of Lord Coventry, the then lord keeper, "by whose vigilant care of his education, both by travel and other advantages, he became a most accomplished gentleman." He was elected one of the knights

* Those ladies were married, the eldest, to Lord Audley; the second, ALICE, to Sir Francis Bacon, the celebrated chancellor, created Viscount St. Albans; the third, to Sir William Soames; and the youngest, to Sir William Constable.

† After he had finished his stately structure at Westwood, Sir John invited the Earl of Northampton, lord-president, and his countess, to a house warming; and as his lordship was a jovial companion, a train of above 100 knights and gentlemen accompanied him, who stayed there some time, and at their departure, acknowledged that they had met with so kind a reception, that they did not know whether they had possessed the place, or the place them. The delightful situation of his mansion was what they had never before seen; the house standing in the middle of a wood, cut into twelve large ridings, and at a good distance, one riding through all of them, the whole surrounded by a park of six or seven miles, with, at the further end, facing the house, an artificial lake of 122 acres. His most splendid entertainment was given, however, to JAMES I. and his queen, at Allesbury, when his majesty honoured him with a visit, after his arrival from Scotland, before his coronation: upon this occasion he set no bounds to expense, thinking it a disparagement to be outdone by any fellow subject, when such an opportunity offered; and the king and court were heard to say, that they had never met with a more noble reception.

‡ LLOYD, in his lives of the statesmen and favourites of England, since the Reformation, thus speaks of Sir John Pakington: "His handsome features look the most, and his neat parts the wisest at. He could smile ladies to his service, and argue statesmen to his design, with equal ease. His reason was powerful, his beauty more. Never was a brave soul more bravely seated; nature bestowed great parts on him, education polished him to an admirable frame of prudence and virtue. Queen ELIZABETH called him her Temperance, and Leicester his Modesty. It is a question to this day, whether his resolution took the soldiers, his prudence the politicians, his compliance the favourites, his complaisance the courtiers, his piety the clergy, his integrity and condescension the people, or his knowledge the learned, most. This new court star was a nine days' wonder engaging all eyes, until it set satisfied with its own glory. He came to court, he said, as Solomon did, to see its vanity, and retired as he did, to repent it. It was he who said first, what Bishop Sanderson urged afterwards, That a sound faith was the best divinity, a good conscience the best law, and temperance the best physic. Sir John Pakington in Queen ELIZABETH's time was virtuous and modest, and Sir John Pakington, in King CHARLES's time, loyal and valiant; the one did well, the other suffered so. Greenham was his favourite, Hammond his; the one had a competent estate and was contented, the other hath a large one and is noble, this suppresseth factions in the kingdom, the other composed them in the court, and was called by courtiers Moderation. Westmoreland tempted his fidelity, and Norfolk his steadfastness; but he died in his bed, an honest and a happy man."

for Worcestershire, in the 15th CHARLES I., and when the rebellion broke out, was member for Allesbury; and having on all occasions given proofs both of his fidelity to the crown and the rights of the subject, was entrusted by the king, in 1642, with a commission for arraying men for his service in Worcestershire, on account of which he was taken prisoner, committed to the Tower, and fined £5000: had his estate sequestered, his house in Buckinghamshire (one of the best in that county) levelled with the ground, and such great wastes committed in his woods, that an estimate of the loss, still remaining in the hand-writing of his lady amounts to £20,348. His zeal in the loyal cause never swerved, for notwithstanding he had suffered so much for his loyalty, he had the courage to join King CHARLES II. with a troop of horse, at the battle of Worcester, and was taken prisoner there, yet was so popular, that when afterwards tried for his life, not one witness could be procured to swear against him; he was consequently acquitted and set at liberty, but was afterwards fined £7670, and compelled for the said fine, to convey the market-house, the tolls, the court-leet, and certain grounds called Heydon Hill, parcel of the estate at Allesbury, to Thomas Scot, (who was one of the king's judges,) and other trustees, for the use of the town, which they kept until after the Restoration, when, by a special act of parliament, the said conveyances were made void. Sir John m. Dorothy, one of the daughters of his guardian, Thomas, Lord Coventry, and by her, who was the reputed author of "The Whole Duty of Man," and other excellent works, had, with two daughters, (the eldest m. to Anthony Byre, Esq. of Rampton, Notts; the younger, to William Godfrey, Esq. of Lincolnshire,) an only son, his successor, at his decease, 13 Jan. 1680.

IV. SIR JOHN PAKINGTON. This gentleman was a strenuous assertor of the rights and liberties of the country, and in the year 1702, preferred that remarkable complaint to the House of Commons, against William, Lord Bishop of Worcester, and Mr. Lloyd, his son, for interfering in the election of the county of Worcester, by sending threatening letters to the clergy and freeholders, and aspersing his conduct in parliament. Sir John was constantly elected one of the knights for Worcestershire in every parliament, from his first being chosen, at nineteen years of age, (except one, when he voluntarily declined it,) to his death, notwithstanding the powerful opposition generally made against him. Lineage.

At the period of the Crusades, the members of religious houses, who had served against the infidels, were commonly called palmers, from the palm branches they carried in their hands to mark their return from Palestine. But, the founder of the ancient and noble family of Palmer, for centuries of the first consideration in the southern counties of England, was a Norman soldier, who, having repeatedly distinguished himself in single combat against the Saracens, received knighthood from the king on the field of battle by that surname, which has ever since been retained by his descendants. In lineal descent from this Sir Ralph le Palmer, Knt., was

SIR EDWARD PALMER, Knt., of Old Place, Angmering, co. Sussex, living about the year 1527, who, by his wife, Alice, dau. of John Clement, and sister and co-heir of Sir Richard Clement, Knt. of the Moat, co. Kent, left issue, three sons, viz.,

I. JOHN, sheriff of Sussex and Surrey, anno 25 HENRY VIII., and again anno 35, 1544, s. to the Sussex estates. He m. Mary, dau. of William, Lord Sandys, K.G., and had issue, which failed in his grandson.

* Lady Palmer descended from one of the most ancient families in the principality, being in direct line from the renowned Elystan Glodrydd, Prince of Fferlys.

JOHN MATTHEWS, Esq. of Harnage, co. Salop, the lineal descendant of Elystan Glodrydd, was buried at Llanyblodwel, co. Salop, 5 Feb. 1694-35. By Jane, his wife, dau. and heir of Maurice Tanat, Esq. of Blodwel Hall, co. Salop, derived from Elionof Efell, Lord of Cynllaeth, he left two sons,

Lineage.

THE TEMPLES, from whom this family paternally, and the present ducal house of Buckingham and Chandos maternally, descend, are said to have been of Saxon origin, and to have sprung immediately from the son and heir of Algar, Earl of Mercia,

EDWYN, who was deprived of the earldom by the CONQUEROR, and killed in defending himself against the Normans in 1071. This Edwyn left a son,

EDWYN, styled Earl of Leicester and Coventry, who is said to have assumed the surname of TEMPLE from the manor of Temple, in the hundred of Sparkenboe, Wellesborough, "which manor (says Burton, in his Leicestershire) was given by the old Earls of Leicestershire to the knights-templars, who usually give the name of Temple to their lands, and they granted it to one whose family was called Temple, of great account and livelihood in those parts." Be this, however, as it may,

HENRY DE TEMPLE was Lord of Temple and Little Shepey in the reign of the CONQUEROR, and from him descended

THOMAS TEMPLE, of Whitney, co. Oxford, whose great-grandson,

PETER TEMPLE, received, in the last year of EDW. VI., a grant of the manor of Marston-Boteler, in the co. Warwick, and purchased, in 1560, the right which Laurence Denet had therein. This Peter being likewise lord of the manor of Stowe, co. Bucks, his descendants fixed their residence there. Lineage.

The ancient family of MAULE was of French extraction, their surname having been assumed from the town and lordship of MAULE, in the Vexin Francois, eight leagues from Paris, a lordship which belonged to the lords of that name for four centuries. SIR PETER DE MAULE, who m. about the year 1224, Christian, only dau. and heir of William de Valonis, of Panmure, with whom he got the baronies of Panmure and Benvie, with other lands, both in England and Scotland, and by whom he had two sons, viz.,

PATRICK MAULE, of Panmure, who s. his father in 1600; and dying in five years afterwards, was s. by his only son,

PATRICK MAULE, of Panmure, who accompanied King JAMES VI. into England, in 1603, and was appointed one of the gentlemen of the bedchamber to that monarch; an office which he afterwards held under CHARLES I., who constituted him keeper of the palace and park of Eltham, and sheriff of the co. Forfar. He subsequently adhered with great fidelity to the king in his troubles, and was engaged in all the battles fought by his majesty; for which services he was elevated to the peerage of Scotland, 3 Aug. 1646, as Baron Maule of Brechin and Navar and EARL OF PANMURE. He subsequently joined the banner of the CHEVALIER ST. GEORGE in 1715, and died at Edinburgh in 1724. He m. 1st, in 1695, Lady Mary Fleming, only dau. of William, 1st Earl of Wigton, and had surviving issue,

WILLIAM RAMSAY, assumed, as already stated, the surname and arms of MAULE, and is the present LORD PANMURE.

Lineage.

From HERBERT FITZ-HERBERT, chamberlain to HEN. I., descended

SIR WILLIAM HERBERT AT THOMAS,* who resided at Ragland Castle, co. Monmouth, in the reign of HENRY V., and was knighted for his valour in the French wars of that monarch. He m. Gladys, dau. of Sir David Gam, and widow of Sir Roger Vaughan, by whom he had three sons,

- i. WILLIAM, of whom presently.
- ii. Thomas, of Troy House, Monmouth, d. s. p.
- iii. Richard (Sir), of Coldbrook, in Monmouthshire, ancestor of the Lords Herbert of Chisbury; of the Herberts, Earls of Powis, now represented by the heiress of the last Earl of Powis of that family, HENRIETTA-ANTONIA, Countess of Edward Clive, Earl of Powis; and of the Herberts of the co. Kerry, now represented by HENRY HERBERT, Esq. of Muccross Abbey, Killarney.

WILLIAM HERBERT, the eldest son, a staunch adherent of the house of York, falling into the hands of the Lancastrians after the battle of Danes-Moore, 26 July, 1469, was beheaded the next day at Banbury. He had been advanced to the Earldom of Pembroke, 27 May, in the 8th EDWARD IV., and constituted chief-forester of Snowdon, and constable of Conway Castle. His lordship m. Anne, dau. of Sir Walter D'Evereux, Knt., and sister of Walter D'Evereux, Lord Ferrers of Chartley, and was s. in the earldom by his eldest† son,

WILLIAM, 2nd earl, who exchanged the dignity for that of HUNTINGDON, in 1479, King EDWARD being desirous to confer the Earldom of Pembroke upon his son, Prince Edward. This William left an only dau. and heiress, Elizabeth, who m. Charles Somerset, 1st Earl of Worcester, but having no male issue, his honours expired. (See BURKE'S Extinct and Dormant Peerage.)

William, 1st Earl of Pembroke, left, beside his legitimate offspring, two natural sons, by Maud, dau. and sole heir of Adam ap Howell Gwyn; the eldest of whom,

SIR RICHARD HERBERT, Knt. of Ewys, and of Grove Radnor, co. Hereford, m. Margaret, dau. and heir of Sir Matthew Cradock, of Swansea, co. Glamorgan, and had,

* From Howell ap Gwillim (elder brother of Thomas, the father of Sir William ap Thomas) descends the family of JONES of LLANARTH. (See BURKE'S Landed Gentry.)

† From his lordship's 3rd son, Sir George Herbert, Knt. of St. Julians-upon-Uske, in Monmouthshire, descended the HERBERTS of St. Julians and Magor, both in the same county. The latter are represented by the present Mrs. JANE HAWKINS, of Tredunnoch. (See BURKE'S Landed Gentry.)

‡ The 2nd natural son of the 1st Earl of Pembroke was SIR WILLIAM HERBERT, Knt. of Troy House.

WILLIAM.

The earl m. 2ndly, Anne, dau. of George, 4th Earl of Shrewsbury, and widow of Peter Compton, Esq., but had no other issue. His lordship was one of the most powerful noblemen of the time in which he lived, and took an active part in public affairs both as a statesman and a soldier. It is recorded that "he rode, on the 17 Feb. 1552-3, to his mansion of Baynard Castle, with 300 horse in his retinue, of which 100 of them were gentlemen in plain blue cloth, with chains of gold, and badges of a dragon on their sleeves." He d. 17 March, 1569-70, and was buried in the cathedral of St. Paul's, on the 18th April following, with such magnificence, that the mourning given at his funeral, according to Stowe, cost the very large sum, at that period, of £2000. Her ladyship d. at a very advanced period of life, at her house in Aldersgate-street, London, 25 Sept. 1621, and the inscription to her memory, by Ben Jonson, in the cathedral of Salisbury, has been so much admired, that we make no apology for inserting it—

"Underneath this marble herse
Lies the subject of all verse—
Sidney's sister, Pembroke's mother.
Death, ere thou hast slain another,
Wise, and fair, and good as she,
Time shall throw a dart at thee."

Lineage.

This family is of high antiquity, descended from a numerous race of kings, monarchs of Britain: its ancestors were feudal lords of Haroldston, Jestynston, and nineteen other manors in the counties of Pembroke and Carmarthen, besides various other landed possessions in Staffordshire, Kent, Worcestershire, and Salop.

Edwal, Lord of Penfro, in Dyfed, 4th in descent from Howel, Prince of Anglesey and King of Man, A.D. 808, (brother to Conan, King of Wales,) m. Alfwyna, dan. and heiress of Elfleda, the martial Queen of the Mercians, who was dau. to King ALFRED the Great. But King EDWARD, the Elder, having usurped his niece, Alfwyna's kingdom, Edwal was obliged, in 925, to fly into Normandy, where he was, with his wife, well entertained by William Longsword, the 2nd duke. Their son,

WILLIAM, was surnamed "DE PERROTT," from Caste Perrott, which he built in Armorica (Brittany), and the town of Perrott, one league from it; many British nobles having settled in that country, who had accompanied his great ancestor, Cadwallader, there, on his pilgrimage to Rome. William came over to England in 957, and obtained some lands in Wessex, on a river which changed its name to the Perrott, (now corrupted to the Parret), in Somersetshire; but was constrained to return to Armorica, and his grandson, the SEIGNEUR DE PERROTT, in Brittany, (who m. Blanche, dau. to Ramyro, 2nd King of Arragon, and nearest relative of Norman William,) furnished the CONQUEROR with his quota of ships and men, and came over with him; for which, with other service in the field, he was knighted by the duke (see the Roll of Battie Abbey). Sir Richard then went to take possession of the lands his forefather held in Somersetshire, and began there a city, whose remains are North and South Perrott. His son,

SIR STEPHEN PERROTT, m. the celebrated Princess Ellyn, Lady of Jestynston, daughter of Howel Dha, the great King of all Wales, "the Lycurgus or lawgiver of that land." The valour and magnanimity of Sir Stephen gained him the respect and love of the Princess Ellyn's people. Their son, Sir Andrew, claimed the kingdom of Wales, in right of his mother, and collected a body of forces in assertion of his right, but the King of England marched a numerous army into the country to take advantage of the disorders; the knowledge of which, and a sum of money offered by the English king, through the Bishop of St. David's, brought him to declare for that prince, who knighted him, on his doing homage for the land for twenty miles round Sir William's camp, whereon he built the Castle of Narbeth, whose ruins are extant in Pembroke. He m. Jonet, dau. of Ralph, Lord Mortimer, by Gladis Dee, dau. of Llewellyn, (the last of the Welsh princes, and who was slain in fighting for his dominions against EDWARD I.) Lord Mortimer's mother was Maud, dau. of WILLIAM the Conqueror.

In the direct line of their descendants were many knights-banneret, (as well as the celebrated William (Perrott) de Wykeham, Bishop of Winchester;) one of them, Sir Thomas, m. Alice Picton, who was of the final blood of one of the 1st knights of the Garter, Sir Guy de Bryan, by which the Barony of Laugharne and other heritages came to the Perrotts. It was by the advice of their grandson, Sir Owen, that HENRY VII. landed at Milford, where he assisted the claimant to the crown of England with men and money; so nearly was he related to the king, (both by Tudor and Plantaganet affinity,) that the royal letters style Sir Owen, "our dearly beloved cousin." His son, Sir Thomas, Lord of Haroldston, Woodstock Castle, Milford, Laugharne, &c. &c., m. Mary, granddaughter of Maurice, Lord Berkeley, and had issue two sons,

SIR JOHN PERROTT, K.B.; and OWEN, (of whom hereafter:) the eldest, Sir John, was the gallant and celebrated lord deputy, lieutenant-general, and general-governor of Ireland under ELIZABETH; on his departure from his viceroyalty he presented the corporation of Dublin with a very valuable silver-gilt cup and cover, (which has passed yearly to this time to the succeeding lord-mayors,) on the top whereof was his crest, with these words, "Relinquo in pace," in commemoration of his leaving the kingdom of Ireland in a state of perfect peace! This "great" man was one of the queen's admirals, and of her privy council; his biography, by Dr. Rawlinson, LL.D., and other eminent writers, attests his statesmanlike abilities, and philanthropy towards the oppressed Irish, who crowded round him on his departure from Dublin, all ranks lamenting it, saying, while he governed "they held their own in peace, but doubted if they should ever do so again!" He left £23,000 per annum "in the name and blood of Perrott, for ever," (Auditor's-Office of Wales, Book of Enrolment, fol. 226), with many charitable foundations that are still maintained.

His sons (by Anne, dau. of Sir T. Cheeny, K.G.) Sirs James and Thomas, both gallantly defended their castle of Carew, Pembroke. In the cause of the Royal Charles; for his great losses and loyalty Sir James was ordered a warrant for a patent creating him Marquess of Narbeth, Earl and Viscount Carew, Baron Perrott, he being of the king's council. His brother, Sir Thomas, had previously been ordered a patent of baronety on the 9th of June, 1611, but he died before it was completed; his dau. Dorothy, (by the Lady Dorothy, dau. of Walter Devereux, Earl of Essex, sister to the unfortunate favourite of Queen ELIZABETH) married her cousin, James Perrott, Lord of Wellington under Dimer, in Herefordshire, (who sprang from Sir John's brother Owen, aforementioned) and had issue,

SIR HERBERT PERROTT, Knt., who inherited the family castles and estates, which he bravely defended against the republicans, which is recorded on his epitaph in Wellington Church, as well as his benevolent foundations and charities; his only dau. m. into the Baronetical family of Packington; Sir Herbert's son was assassinated, and left no issue. The other son of James Perrott, Lord of Wellington, JAMES PERROTT, Esq., was grandfather of

SIR JAMES PERROTT, who, in reward for eminent diplomatic services, was created a Baronet 1 July, 1716, with limitation to his nephew,

SIR RICHARD PERROTT, who s. as 2nd bart. in 1731. This gallant officer, who was eldest son of R. Perrott, Esq., of Broseley, Salop, by Rebecca, dau. of J. Wyke, Esq. of Wacton Court, Herefordshire, was present at the battle of Culloden, in personal attendance on the Duke of Cumberland; he subsequently entered the service of Frederic the Great of Prussia, and serving in the "seven years war," obtained the order of the Red Eagle; such was that renowned monarch's confidence in his high military abilities, that he appointed Sir Richard his lord-high-admiral, with authority to raise a fleet, with power to commission both naval and marine officers and forces; (a copy of the commission, which was conferred on Sir Richard Perrott on the 24th of Oct. 1758, was published in "Kimber's Baronetage for 1771; but not the private instructions, which are, with the former, in the hands of the present baronet.) His acceptance of this brilliant and extraordinary command having been forbidden by the English government, Sir Richard was employed in several confidential negotiations, for which he received the order of the Black Eagle; and was, by Louis XV. of France, created a Baron, with the privilege of the "Tabourette" to his lady, and the wives of his successors. Sir Richard received from King GEORGE III. a regal warrant, dated the 3rd January, 1767, under the royal sign-manual, and the privy seal, countersigned by the minister of state for the Home Department, Field-Marshal H.-S. Conway, confirming the baronety to him and his heirs male, which was entered in the Earl-Marshal's Book, 1. 32, fol. 58, in the College of Arms, and registered 2 August, 1767, by Somerset and Lancaster heralds, by authority of a warrant from the Deputy Earl-Marshal, Lord Scarborough, on the 30th July, 1767. Three years afterwards, during the Wilkes riots, Sir Richard brought up the loyal Flint address, for which he received an autograph letter of thanks, by command of the king, from the Prince of Wales, then only eight years of age. His attachment to the crown, at this perilous period, led to his house in Gloucester View, Park-lane, being dismantled by the mob, and its costly effects burnt before it. Sir Richard received a medal, a grant of the ancient manor of Chelemore, and other tokens of royal regard and approbation. He m. 8 March, 1789, Margaret-Jemima, dau. of Capt. William Fordyce, gentleman of the bedchamber to His majesty GEORGE III., and by her, who was great-grand-niece of John, Duke of Argyll, had a son and successor, the present baronet.
